AMERICAN ADMIRAL WARNS TURKEY TO SPARE ARMENIANS

Message Stirs Up Both the Sultan and Peace Council at Paris.

THOUGHT IT WAS OFFICIAL

AGAIN DISCUSS MANDATE

Clemenceau Also Suggests That Departing British Let French Troops Take Up Guardianship.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—An informal warning to Turkey that massacres of Armenians must cease, given recently by Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander of the United States naval forces in Turkey, caused something of a flurry in French official quarters and in the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference, it developed today.

In the Council there was reported to have occurred sharp criticism of American interference in Turkey, through missions and otherwise, despite the fact that the United States had shown no disposition to accept the mandate for the Administration of any Turkish territory. The impression prevailed that in this case the United States had acted alone in a formal communication to the Turkish Government.

It was explained by the American delegation, however, that the warning was delivered informally by Admiral Bristol several days ago, that there was no formal note sent, but merely an informal statement, the United States alone not attempting to speak for the Peace Conference.

On receiving the warning, Turkey, it appears, immediately complained to Great Britain and France, saying she was threatened. The explanation of the American delegation to the Peace Conference that the warning was informal, however, apparently removed the objection to the American action based upon the idea that the United States was speaking for the Peace Conference.

Discussion in the Peace Council.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The American communication to the Turkish Government, sent direct instead of through the Supreme Council at Paris, aroused something of a flurry among the French. Although on a much smaller scale, the incident recalls the resentment of France last Fall, when President Wilson began direct personal conversations with Austria concerning peace instead of dealing through the Interallied Council at Versailles.

In yesterday's meeting of the Supreme Council M. Clemenceau said he could not understand why America, who had not been at war with Turkey, who had nothing to do with the Turkish armistice, and who could not reveal whether or not she wanted the Armenian mandate, should undertake to deal with Turkey directly instead of through the Supreme Council of the big powers.

But the French Premier's touch of resentment toward America was only a flash in the pan. He didn't seem really to care what America said or did to Turkey, but he did touch on something that much more closely concerns French foreign policy when he turned from Mr. Polk to Mr. Balfour and exclaimed to the British Foreign Minister:

"You are withdrawing troops from Asia Minor; why don't you let us use ours?"

Mr. Balfour replied he did not know there were any French troops available.

"Oh, we have some," retorted Clemenceau.

There are two versions of what happened at Constantinople with reference to the warning to the Sultan that if Turkey massacred Armenians the twelfth of the fourteen points would cease to be a part of American policy toward the Turks. One is that Admiral Bristol of the United States Navy communicated the message to both British and French High Commissioners as well as to the representative of the Sultan. The other version is that French and British representatives learned of it only from the Turks, who themselves resented what they called American interference in such a purely domestic matter as killing Armenians.

It is also explained here in Paris that the communication was not a formal diplomatic note, but a semi-official warning that America would not abide by the twelfth point, which declares that "Turkish portions of the present Ottoman Empire should be assured a secure sovereignty," &c.

One bit of cynicism aroused by the incident is expressed by the question asked by the Italians today, if it might be inferred that any one of the fourteen points could be withdrawn whenever deemed advisable by their authors.

Urges Haste on Mandate.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 28.—The Chronicle, commenting on the reports of the American warning to Turkey as to the results of any repetition of the Armenian massacres, says:

"The only real way to keep the peace there is to have some troops on the spot, and if America is as anxious as we believe her to be to save the Armenian people she must accelerate her decision

Leguia Party Carries Peru by Nearly Unanimous Vote

LIMA, Aug. 26.—The general Congressional elections and the plebiscite on constitutional reforms proposed by the Provisional Government, which were held throughout the republic on Sunday and Monday, passed quietly.

The candidates supported by President Augusto B. Leguia and the constitutional reforms received an almost unanimous vote. There were a few local disturbances, but these were considered to be without significance.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The Peruvian Congress will convene on Sept. 15 and proclaim Leguia the President elected by popular vote, according to messages to the Embassy received today.

DRY BAN TO STAY TILL PEACE COMES

TO ROUND UP OFFENDERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Attorney General Palmer announced definitely tonight that the nation will remain dry under wartime prohibition until the treaty of peace is ratified and peace formally proclaimed by the President, no matter what may be the status of demobilization prior to final action on the treaty by the Senate. The "wets," who had hoped that the wartime prohibition ban would be lifted at an early date, he said, might just as well give up hope, unless the Senate ratified the treaty.

That it was possible under such circumstances that wartime prohibition would remain in force until January next, when the amendment to the Federal Constitution will go into effect, was admitted by Mr. Palmer.

"It certainly will," he said, "unless the treaty of peace is ratified. The legislation makes the operation of wartime prohibition very plain. The status of demobilization, as it affects prohibition, cannot even be considered prior to the formal proclamation of peace, which only may follow the ratification of the treaty."

It also was made plain by Mr. Palmer that prohibition would remain in effect even if the treaty were ratified by the Senate with a result of containing reservations or amendments which made it necessary to return the treaty to the Peace Conference, unless President Wilson saw fit, under such circumstances, to at once proclaim a state of peace. That the President would follow such a course is not considered at all probable here.

"A number of dealers who believed that the department was too much engrossed in the fight on high living costs to prosecute them have seized the occasion to hold a wide-open town," said the Attorney General. "We have plenty of evidence of this. But they need not expect to keep it up, wherever they may be. The law is on the statute books and it will be enforced.

To Continue Roundup.

"The arrests in New York will be followed by arrests in several other big communities. I believe that the courts in New York have sent some of the guilty ones to jail. It may be necessary to adopt that course again."

Mr. Palmer said that about seventy warrants already had been issued in New York City and that there would be no letup until the law was observed. By his remarks Mr. Palmer gave his hearers every reason to believe that he contemplated a "clean-up" in every meaning of that word.

The point that wartime prohibition would remain in effect at least until peace formally was proclaimed by the President was brought out when Mr. Palmer was asked his opinion as to when demobilization would be completed and the ban lifted.

"Has any date been set?" he was asked.

"Ask the Senate," was Mr. Palmer's reply. "I hope and expect that the treaty of peace will be ratified very soon, but, of course, I don't know."

Mr. Palmer then discussed the general situation in the nation as to the status of prohibition.

"There is no question," he said, "that the law is being openly violated in many cities, but these violations are going to stop. The law will be enforced. I don't think the hotels are violating the law as generally as the saloons. The elements which are organized are the worst offenders. They are keeping their organization together, hoping for an early lifting of the prohibition ban, when they can distribute their stocks without fear of the Government.

"The country is dry, however, and it has got to obey the law. We have issued about seventy warrants in New York City. What happened is this: Liquor dealers thought that the attention of the Department of Justice had been diverted by the campaign against the high living costs. Many cities opened up wide again, the dealers expecting to escape the law.

"We are going to change that condition. The campaign against the high living costs did divert the activities of the Department of Justice in many cases, but as long as the prohibition law

BUTCHERS PROMISE CUT IN MEAT PRICE; FIX PROFIT MARGINS

LABOR HAMPERS ARMY SALE

City Officials Have to Bow to Union Rules to Move Food—More Schools to Open.

Lower prices of meat to the consumer are promised as a result of a meeting yesterday between representatives of the New York State Association of United Master Butchers, Inc., and the Federal Food Administrator, Arthur Williams, in the Consolidated Gas Company's building at Fifteenth Street and Irving Place.

Mr. Williams said, after the meeting, that the butchers had displayed the same willingness as the grocers, bakers, clothiers, and other dealers in this city to help the Government in the fight against high prices. In a margin of profit list adopted the maximum margin allowed to the butchers over what they paid for meat at wholesale was increased two cents above the wartime profit margin. It was explained that this was necessary, as business expenses had increased greatly in the last year. The margin is based on the "cash and carry" system.

The sale of food in school buildings reopened yesterday. One more school will be added to the list of distribution centres today, and five tomorrow. Officials of the Department of Markets, in charge of the sale, reported that labor troubles slowed up the distribution of supplies.

At the pier at the foot of Twenty-fourth Street, where a barge load of food was being placed in trucks to be transported to school buildings, union helpers on the barge quit work because, they said, it was not their work to load food from the barge into the truck. Members of another union had to be employed to put the boxes into the trucks before the work could go on. Extra workers also had to be sent to one school to replace men who refused to unload trucks after 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The following statement on the meeting of the Master Butchers was given out last night by Mr. Williams:

Butchers Issue Statement.

"The Committee on Fair Prices for meat of the New York State Association of United Master Butchers of America, Inc., have agreed upon a tentative fair maximum margin list covering eighteen items of the important retail meat supply of the city. The list is submitted for trial during September, during which it is proposed to review the list with the Fair Price Committee and determine whether any of its features may be modified. The list follows:

Article and Kind.	Maximum Fair Margin Per Lb. Cents.
Beef of good and medium steers—
Chuck steak	13
Whole cross rib	20
Cut cross rib	24
Stew beef	13
Sirloin steaks	17
Bottom round	19
Rib roast, prime	18
Whole top sirloin	15
Cut top sirloin	19
Lamb—
Leg of lamb	14
Rib chops	14
Chuck	8
Stew lamb, under cost	4
Pork products—
Smoked hams, (unwrapped,) 8-18 lbs.	8
Smoked shoulders, (Picnics, 2½-7 lbs.)	7
Smoked bacon, (unwrapped)	13
Pork loins, (Western light):
Pork chops, (end)	8
Pork chops, (middle)	12

"The margins quoted by the Fair Price Committee on Tuesdays and Fridays are to be based upon the United States Department of Agriculture Bureau of Markets reports for New York City upon Western dressed beef, lamb, and pork. These reports are issued daily by the Federal Government, and taken in conjunction with the maximum fair-price margins upon any item indicates the cost at which this meat should be available to the purchaser.

"In the Government quotations on wholesale beef, lamb, and pork there is a variation which approximates 10 cents a pound between the common and the choice, there being four grades—common, medium, good, and choice. Likewise, there is an increase above these prices for city dressed meats.

"Should any purchaser doubt the ac-

URGES UNIFICATION OF THE RAILROADS

IS AGAINST PLUMB PLAN

But Tells House Committee That Owners, Workers, and Public Should Be Represented.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—George W. Anderson, formerly Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, today appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which is considering a railroad control bill, and urged the unification of the railroads into a single corporation, and the inclusion of labor, the owners, and the Government on the Board of Directors.

Under his plan labor would have a share in the profits beyond a certain small fixed dividend and strikes would be made illegal. Mr. Anderson, who is now a Federal Judge in Boston, submitted his plan to the committee in a memorandum to which he gave the title "Essentials of a Sound and Progressive Railroad Policy." He took occasion, however, to emphasize the fact that he did not subscribe to the so-called Plumb plan for the nationalization of the railways, which, he said, presented a remedy which probably was as bad as the disease that it (the Plumb plan) undertook to cure.

New Status for Labor.

The chief points of Judge Anderson's plan are:

1. A new status of right and responsibility for labor, including profit-sharing, under which strikes are an unneeded weapon and therefore should be made illegal.

2. Unification of the railroads into a single national highway and carrier system, properly co-ordinated with other highway, transportation, and carrier facilities, present and potential under a Federal charter, thus eliminating most of the problems growing out of the conflicting rights and interests of the States and the nation and between the good and the weak companies.

3. Administration by a Board of Directors, in which labor, capital, and the public shall have the right to representation. Regional administration to be developed so far as necessary and practical.

4. Rates to be made on the service-at-cost principle and subject to approval by the Interstate Commerce Committee, which should have enlarged and properly modified powers.

5. The rights of the States to deal with questions purely local should be fully recognized, subject to review proceedings where paramount national interest requires. Commutation rates and questions of local improvement and safety should be relegated to State or other local authorities, subject to such review in case of abuse or prejudicial error.

6. All valid and properly outstanding bonds should be assumed by the new company and guaranteed by the United States Government.

7. Stockholders in regular dividend-paying companies should be permitted to exchange on a basis not exceeding the return during Federal control. Others must have due process of law.

8. Stockholders of the new company should have an incentive for efficiency, economy, and progress by authorizing a dividend somewhat in excess of the standard dividend and pro rata issues of new stock at par.

9. Public interests should be secured against undue capital charge by providing that not less than 60 per cent. and perhaps 75 per cent. of the capital of the new company should be bonds issued at the lowest available interest rate.

10. Stock certificates of the United States Railroad Company should contain

Envoy Morris Attributes Kolchak's Reverses to Failure to Recognize Him 3 Months Ago

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Roland S. Morris, the American Ambassador to Japan, who was sent into the heart of Siberia, to inquire and report on the status of the Kolchak Government, has completed his special mission and is now understood to be en route from Omsk to Tokio. His reports have been made to President Wilson, who is understood to be personally directing American activities in connection with developments in Siberia.

His latest reports contain a strong plea for the immediate recognition of Admiral Kolchak's Government. In his most recently received cables he insists that immediate recognition is highly essential to save the situation. It is understood that he recommends that it be given and that public announcement be made of it for the moral effect such an announcement would have on the soldiers and population in Siberia. Mr. Morris is reported to have stated that if recognition had been accorded three months ago the Kolchak Government would probably by this time be firmly intrenched and that the dangers which have more recently threatened it would not exist.

In view of the very positive and definite recommendations that have been made by Ambassador Morris, and the clear reports he has made on the situation, it is expected here that President Wilson will soon reach a decision in the matter.

HASTEN FINAL REPORT ON TREATY; FALL AND NELSON IN ACRID DEBATE; PRESIDENT TO SPEAK IN FIFTY CITIES

WILL GO TO PACIFIC COAST

President Will Spend 25 Days on Speaking Trip.

MAY START IN TEN DAYS

PLANS TO MEET PERSHING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The itinerary of President Wilson's "swing around the circle," with addresses in behalf of the Peace Treaty in at least fifty of the principal cities of the country is expected to be announced tomorrow at the White House.

After weeks of uncertainty concerning the proposed trip, which will extend to the Pacific Coast, definite announcement was made today that the President would leave Washington as soon as arrangements could be made. It was intimated that the start might be made within ten days or two weeks.

When this announcement was made, it was understood by White House officials that the review of the new Pacific fleet at San Francisco, originally set for Sept. 2 or 3, had been postponed until Sept. 15, and Secretary Tumulty said he believed the President would be at the Golden Gate by the latter date to take part in the ceremony.

Late in the day, however, Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt announced that the review would be held on Sept. 1. This was decided on, he said, when the President several days ago requested that plans for the review go forward without reference to his trip to the Pacific Coast.

According to plans now being worked out in connection with the itinerary, President Wilson will spend twenty-five days laying before the people of the country his reasons for the immediate ratification of the Peace Treaty without change.

Although the President desired to greet General Pershing on his arrival at New York early next month, he was said to consider the tour to explain the Peace Treaty to the people as of more importance. It was possible, Secretary Tumulty said, the President might overcome this obstacle to an early start by meeting General Pershing on the way to the West, probably in St. Louis.

Some changes have been made in the itinerary as originally made when President Wilson was in Paris, but it was said that his purpose not to stop at Chicago hah not been changed. He may, however, speak in the Middle West at Columbus, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

While the itinerary was not completed tonight, it was regarded as almost certain that Mr. Wilson would speak in Sioux City, Iowa; Minneapolis or St. Paul, Minn.; Bismarck, N. D., and Billings and Helena, Mont.; then swing down the Pacific Coast States, and after reaching San Francisco, come home by the southern route, making addresses on the return.

Under the present plans of the Senate leaders, Mr. Wilson's departure will follow closely the submission of the Foreign Relations Committee's report on the treaty, and his appeal to the country for ratification will be coincident with the Senate debate on proposed amendments and reservations.

Just how far the Senate developments have influenced the President's plans is not revealed, but it is known that he frequently has discussed his proposed trip with his advisers in relation to the Senate situation.

In the opinion of some Senators, both Democratic and Republican, the aggressive stand taken by the Foreign Relations Committee in adopting textual amendments to the treaty has provided a definite issue which may have had some bearing on the announcement of the President's plans.

SHORT SESSIONS AT PARIS.

Austrian Treaty Still Before the Supreme Council.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The Supreme Council of the Peace Conference met this morning for the consideration of the treaty with Austria. During this week the Council will hold morning sessions only, as Premier Clemenceau and Foreign Minister Pichon will attend the discussion of the Peace Treaty in the Chamber of Deputies each afternoon. M. Clemenceau has decided that the Cabinet must be present at every session of the Chamber until the treaty is ratified.

The Journal says that the Peace Treaty will come up for discussion in the Italian Chamber of Deputies on Sept. 3.

The Figaro says it is the duty of America to ratify the treaty, because acceptance or modification of it concerns not only the United States but the whole of Europe.

Bernstorff's Counselor Proposed for Envoy Here, But He Would Not Be Acceptable to Washington

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen, former Counselor of the German Embassy at Washington, has been selected for appointment as German Ambassador to the United States, according to authoritative information today.

Dr. W. S. Solf, the Secretary for the Colonies, is the selection for the Ambassadorship to Great Britain, and Herr Radowitz, former Under Secretary of State, for the Ambassadorship to China.

Fritz August Thiel, former German Consular representative in Japan, has been picked for the post of Ambassador at Tokio.

The appointments of the men selected for Ambassadorships, it is stated, depend upon the attitude of the powers in question. If they send Chargé d'Affaires to Berlin Germany will take like action as to representation in the capitals of such powers.

There is no mention at present of the selection of a German Ambassador to France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Secretary Lansing today asserted that no one had yet been suggested by the German Government for the post of German Ambassador. The Secretary's statement was made in response to an inquiry as to whether the German Government had sounded this country regarding the acceptability of Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen.

From what was learned in high official circles today the whole question of the appointment of a new German Ambassador to this country is wholly premature. Diplomatic relations will not be restored until after peace has been proclaimed, and there is no assurance now that they will be promptly resumed after peace has been declared by the President.

While high officials did not care to comment today upon the statement that Dr. von Haimhausen had been selected for the post, there is every indication that Dr. von Haimhausen would not be acceptable to the American Government.

GOMPERS TO MEET FEDERATION HEADS

MAY SWAY THE SHOPMEN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Developments of large importance are expected as a result of the conferences of the Executive Committee of the American Federation of Labor, which will begin here tomorrow upon the return of Samuel Gompers, the President of the Federation. Representatives of the railway shop crafts, who are now taking a second strike vote to determine whether they will accept the latest proposition made by President Wilson, granting them an increase of four cents an hour, or go on a nation-wide strike, probably will be called before the morning session, and the whole problem of the relation of wage increase to living costs debated.

It is entirely possible that as a result of the conferences the American Federation of Labor may issue a statement before the strike vote of the shopmen is completed, outlining the position of the Federation in regard to the facts set forth in the statement of principles announced by President Wilson on Monday, when he said that demands for large wage increases must wait upon the Administration's efforts to bring down living costs, and that for the Government to grant them now would but perpetuate high costs and spell disaster.

May Avert Strike.

The report was current here today that the deliberations of the Executive Committee of the American Federation of Labor probably would have a very considerable effect upon the so-called strike situation, and that if the federation counseled acceptance of President Wilson's proposals, perhaps with certain conditions as to the future attached, means might be found of averting a strike of the shopmen, no matter how the strike ballot resulted.

There was undoubtedly a tendency upon the part of labor leaders connected with the shopmen, who were in conference here today, to discourage talk that a strike of the shopmen was inevitable. Reports from Ohio that 1,800 shopmen in that district had acted almost unanimously for a strike were discounted and the suggestion was given out that the published report might have been due to action taken by some of the more radical members of the craft. The point was emphasized also by one member of the shop craft here that no conclusion should be drawn until the men throughout the country had been given an opportunity to study the President's proposal and use the secret ballot.

These developments made the situation seem more hopeful from the viewpoint of those who are making every effort to prevent a strike which might tie up the railroads. They also led to reports that the representatives of the shop crafts had received word from Mr. Gompers, who was in New York, cautioning against action of a radical nature until all phases of the problem had been considered.

The representatives of the shop craft are not certain as to the attitude which the members of the Four Railroad Brotherhoods would take in the event of a strike on the part of the shopmen,

REINSCH RESIGNS HIS POST IN PEKING

Decision to Quit Said to be Due to President's Stand on the Shantung Matter.

PLEDGED SUPPORT TO CHINA

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Dr. Paul Samuel Reinsch, American Minister to China since the early days of the present Administration, has tendered his resignation. The resignation is at the White House, but had not been acted upon up to today.

While there was an effort today to make it appear that Dr. Reinsch had resigned on account of ill health and a desire to return to private work, it is the opinion of those familiar with the Chinese situation and the work of Dr. Reinsch at Peking that he has taken this step because his position at Peking was untenable on account of the attitude of the American Government at Paris in approving the provisions of the Versailles treaty assigning German rights in the Shantung Peninsula to Japan.

About a month ago it was stated authoritatively here that Dr. Reinsch had requested a leave of absence and would soon return to the United States, but nothing was intimated at that time about his having submitted his resignation to the President. His action, however, has not been sudden, and President Wilson has known of Dr. Reinsch's feelings and desires for some weeks. Secretary Lansing would not comment on the resignation today further than to say that it had been offered by Dr. Reinsch for "personal" reasons.

It has been asserted that Dr. Reinsch had given the Chinese Government assurance that China's interests would be supported by the American Government at Paris. However, the assertion was rather freely made at the time the American Government, through its chief representative at Paris, had accepted the Shantung provisions as part of the Versailles treaty, that the position of Dr. Reinsch in Peking had been rendered extremely embarrassing. He had been credited with drawing China into the war largely on promises of American support for China.

There have been unconfirmed rumors that Dr. Reinsch advised the Chinese Government not to sign the Peace Treaty without reservations. A member of the American Legation in Peking has been accused in the Far Eastern press with participating in propaganda against the Japanese, although his accusation is not considered seriously at the State Department.

It was recalled in inner circles today that Dr. Reinsch made recommendations to the American Government which in turn made the position of Viscount Kikujito Ishii, untenable as Japanese Ambassador to the United States. Viscount Ishii recently resigned and returned to Japan.

Some months ago Japan decided to send a financial adviser to China. It was suspected very strongly in Washington at that time that Japan's purpose was to have this financial adviser virtually supplant Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks, who had been American financial adviser in China.

Before announcing the name of the man it had intended sending to China, the Japanese Government directed Viscount Ishii, its Ambassador here, to make certain discreet inquiries at the

REPORT PROMISED NEXT WEEK

MORE AMENDMENTS COMING

FALL REPLIES TO McCUMBER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Until a late hour Republican members of the Foreign Relations Committee conferred today over steps involving the final stages of the committee's deliberation over the treaty with Germany. At the end of the conference it was stated that the committee undoubtedly would present the treaty to the Senate some time next week.

All of the Republican members excepting Mr. McCumber of North Dakota, who has so vigorously assailed the committee's action in adopting the Shantung amendment, shared in the conference, which occupied over four hours.

Before the conference Senator Lodge, Chairman of the committee, talked over with Senator Hitchcock, ranking Democratic member, arrangements for expediting the committee's further action. Mr. Hitchcock informed Mr. Lodge that the Democratic members would be willing to vote en bloc upon any amendments or reservations the Republican majority might have, so as to save time.

Senator Lodge conveyed Mr. Hitchcock's promise to the conference, but no decision was reached regarding it. The majority, it was stated tonight, might agree to a vote upon amendments and reservations en bloc separately.

It developed that there probably will be half a dozen more amendments offered in the committee besides the four reservations so much discussed, involving Article X., the withdrawal provision, the Monroe Doctrine and purely domestic questions. Senator Johnson said he would offer an amendment to provide that the United States have a representation of six in the League Assembly, to equal that of Great Britain and its dependencies. This, his conferees on the committee seemed to agree, would be adopted. Another amendment likely to be offered will relate to the Sarre Basin, explicitly specifying that its permanent disposition shall be settled by plebiscite after the fifteen-year period in which France is to keep it.

There was much divergence of opinion as to Article X. Some Senators advocated elimination of the article so that the United States shall be entirely relieved of the obligation of mixing in disputes involving the territorial integrity of other nations in the League. Others inclined toward the Lodge plan, to provide that Congress should determine when its soldiers were to be sent to foreign battlefields.

Another Conference This Week.

The conferees will decide at a conference later in the week precisely what reservations to make regarding the principal articles. Only slight differences of opinion exist as to the reservations dealing with the Monroe Doctrine, withdrawal, and purely domestic questions. What difference there is pertains to phraseology.

The drafting of the resolution of ratification to which the reservations proposed would be affixed as amendments, if adopted by the Senate was considered by the conferees. Senator Lodge read a draft and other Senators had prepared formulas. The resolution will be finally passed on after the amendments and reservations are voted on.

Opposition among Senate Republicans, including the so-called "mild reservationists," over the Shantung amendment was said to have been discussed, and the majority members were said to have expressed confidence that the amendment would be accepted by the Senate by a close margin.

Talk was heard at the Capitol during the day that the committee might abandon the Shantung amendment and that eventually a reservation merely expressing the disapproval of the Senate over the Shantung settlement would be supported. Senators Johnson and Fall and others said no such step was being considered. They expected the fight to be made, they said, upon the Shantung amendment as adopted by the committee.

In the Senate lobbies the prediction of Senator Hitchcock, as conveyed to President Wilson yesterday, that the treaty would be ratified without the adoption of any amendment or reservation that would necessitate recommitting it to the Paris Conference was challenged by Republican opponents of the Administration. They asserted the fight for reservations was already won.

As to the Shantung amendment, Republicans outside the Foreign Relations Committee felt there was considerable doubt. It was agreed that if it was adopted the vote would be extremely close. The most optimistic could not count a margin of over one or two votes.

Senator Fall and Senators Nelson of Minnesota and McCumber of North Dakota had a heated debate in the Senate when the first named replied to Mr. McCumber's attack yesterday upon the Republican majority of the Foreign Relations Committee, which, Mr. McCumber said, was seeking to drive a "dagger thrust" into the treaty.

Mr. Fall said it was futile for President Wilson to assert that the defeat of the treaty in the Senate meant a "continued suspension of peace" as between Germany and the United States. A normal status of peace, he said, existed without negotiating any treaty. If the President desired, Mr. Fall contended, he could declare peace to exist by proclamation at any time.

Nelson's Ire Aroused.

"From the beginning of the treaty's consideration impatience has been displayed with those who do not agree entirely with the document," said Mr. Fall. "At the first meeting of the Foreign Relations Committee impatience was displayed with the insistence of some Senators that the treaty be read—and one or two frankly admitted they had never read it. Yet some Senators now most impatient with our discussion are among those who have admitted that they have not read the document."

"Will the Senator tell us the objectionable features of the treaty," asked Senator Nelson. "Does he object to the reparation provisions or to disarmament, or to the granting of Alsace-Lorraine to France, or the restoration of Northern Schleswig to Denmark, or to the reestablishment of Poland? There is no use attempting to chop this treaty into mincemeat. If that is the object, when it gets before the Senate the mincemeat will be brushed aside."

"There is no use of the Senator taking advantage of his age and experience to talk in that manner," declared Mr. Fall.

"The Senator need not mind my age—he may consider me the youngest man in the Senate," retorted Mr. Nelson.

"If second childhood means that, possibly I might do so," retorted Mr. Fall. "Recently the Senate sent to the Judiciary Committee for an opinion concerning the constitutionality of the French alliance treaty. That committee has reported, and yet I find no consideration whatever was given to the question whether the Senate would have the right to ratify a treaty by the consent of the Council of a League of Nations, instead of by itself under its own constitutional authority. The report, written and signed by the Senator from Minnesota, is silent upon that question."

"I understood the Senator to say that I was in my second childhood," said Senator Nelson, sharply. "I should like to have him explain that."

"I did not say that, and I apologize for anything personal that the Senator may have understood me to say," replied Mr. Fall, mildly.

"I am neither in my second childhood in this matter nor on the Mexican situation," said Mr. Nelson.

Senator Fall remarked that he was "weary" of hearing Senators accuse members of the committee of wanting to "kill the treaty."

"Until the Senator from North Dakota got up yesterday, nobody had attempted to defend the course of Japan in Shantung. The Senator from North Dakota argues that Japan obtained the stolen goods which Germany stole, and that we should perpetuate the outrage; and that if Japan does not claim Shantung under accession to the German title, then she claims by conquest," said Mr. Fall.

"I deny that statement as absolutely and unqualifiedly false," interjected Mr. McCumber. "I not only think the action of Japan was wrong but I stated how I believed it could be rightted."

Takes Up the 21 Questions.

"I have undertaken to state the conclusion inevitable from the Senator's statements," replied Mr. Fall. "I do not say the Senator was justifying Germany's acquisition of Shantung. I say he dare not attempt to justify it."

"Japan derived her title under a solemn obligation to return the province," replied Mr. McCumber. "The Senator should take his own medicine. He forgets himself when he accuses one of the oldest and strongest men of the Senate of having reached second childhood. I do not think he is entirely free from what he imputes to other Senators."

Senator Fall adverted to the twenty-one questions he left with the President at the White House conference last week and said Mr. Wilson had replied, as to one of them, that he had not the power to declare a status of peace by proclamation in advance on ratification of the treaty. Taking issue with the President Mr. Fall said:

"Peace is a status, the normal status, or relations among nations. Peace may come to pass without a treaty. Sweden and Poland, in 1716, had fought for years, and then made peace by ceasing hostilities. They never made a treaty. France and Spain, in 756, had been at war for several years. They made peace by ceasing hostilities, but never entered into a treaty. Spain and her American colonies fought for many years, and the colonies achieved independence, but it was never acknowledged by Spain by treaty until fifteen or twenty years had elapsed.

"Spain was again at war with Chile and Peru in 1856, and the war drifted until it finally ceased. The United States undertook to do business with Peru and Chile, and Spain protested that they were still at war, and we should observe the rules of belligerence. The United States replied: 'We will settle that for ourselves. You have been at war, and simply because you have not signed a treaty you cannot bluff the world. You are at peace. We will settle that for ourselves.' And we did.

"When we declared war on Germany in April, 1917, the President issued a proclamation to that effect, and war existed. Germany did not declare war on us. Our official declaration that the state of war, which we alone declared to exist, is at an end, would in this case, as it has done in others, restore the status of peace."

DEPLORES OUR DELAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—In an editorial the Daily News says:

"The League of Nations, which drew its inspiration from America, will be a League in which America has no part so long as the Senate refuses ratification of the treaty. Even that will not prevent the League from coming into being and fulfilling the duties intrusted to it by the Peace Treaty, but it will mean that the collective voice of the nations will be lamentably weaker in authority from the defection of the greatest and most disinterested power in the world.

"The faith of the vast body of English admirers of America is being heavily taxed by the attitude of the Senate. They find it hard to believe that after all America has done for the world since 1917 she should be blind and deaf to the need of the world today.

"The need of the world is to get straight, and without America it cannot get straight. If America decides that her rule shall be to stand on dry land and watch the nations of the world still struggling in the surf, she has the right to do it. Nothing that may happen now can diminish the value of the indispensable services of America as a whole and the great services Americans like President Wilson and Mr. Hoover have rendered to the world. If we have to get straight without America we shall face the situation as we must, but her refusal would be a heavy blow, and at this crisis delay is hardly better than refusal."

BERNSTORFF VICTIM OF A DOUBLE POLICY

Americans Called It Two-Faced, but It Was Struggle of Militarists and Civilians, He Says.

FORMER ALL TO BLAME

Civil Government Followed a Single Aim Until It Had to Surrender to Stronger Party.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—An official report was received from Germany today which states that in the German weekly, Das Demokratische Deutschland, former Ambassador Count Bernstorff exposes what purports to be his view of the future relations between Germany and the United States. He represents himself as having reached the conclusion that Germany's policy must aim at obtaining a revision of the Peace Treaty by means of and in the League of Nations, and that such a policy would lead Germany quite of its own accord to the side of the United States.

A considerable part of this exposition is taken up with information concerning the previous history of America's intervention and the decisive rôle played by German submarine warfare. The following excerpt is taken from Count Bernstorff's article:

"During the whole war two minds dwelt within German policy. The one was naval-military and the other civilian-political. All the utterances of our Government which reached Washington during the period of America's neutrality were dictated either by the one tendency or were the result of a compromise between both. Thus one can more justly speak of a split in German policy than of its 'two-faced' nature. The one tendency wanted the U-boat war, even if it drove the United States to a breach with us; the other wanted to join in with President Wilson's policy and so come to peace. The struggle between these two tendencies began with the Lusitania episode and ended with the declaration of the unrestricted U-boat campaign in the defeat of the civilians.

"As one of the chief factors in this struggle, I can offer the most binding assurances that the German civil policy always kept the one end in view. It did not carry on negotiations with a view to preparing for the U-boat war in the meantime, as many Americans still believe. Nor did it instigate any conspiracies in America. The German civil administration had absolutely no knowledge of the worst thing which was being done by the naval-military tendency over there, such as, for example, the Rintelen mission.

"The two chief sins with which we are charged under the heading 'two-faced'—the Adlon dinner in honor of Ambassador Gerard, and the Mexican telegram—were only committed after the Berlin civil administration had hauled down their sails before the superior force of the naval-military party. Just like the astrologer in 'Faust,' the German Government then only made such declarations as were whispered to it by the naval-military Mephisto. This moment was the climax of the German tragedy. The mediatory action, which had just then been begun by President Wilson, was rendered worthless by concluded, and the war was lost. All efforts made at the last moment from Washington to alter Berlin's decision came to nought, as will be remembered on account of 'technical difficulties.'"

PROTEST AGAINST TURKS.

Committee Cables to Peace Conference in Armenia's Behalf.

The American Committee for the Independence of Armenia, of which Ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard is Chairman, announced yesterday that it had cabled the following protest to the Peace Conference:

President Peace Conference, Paris.

The Turks, under the leadership of Enver Pasha, Kiazim Karabekir and others, have concentrated along boundaries of the Armenian Republic and committed and are committing excesses and depredations throughout Armenia in violation of the terms of the armistice of Nov. 1, 1918. The American Committee for the Independence of Armenia energetically protests against the violation by the Turks of the terms of said armistice, and respectfully submits that it is for the powers that are parties to said armistice to enforce its terms.

The cablegram was signed by Mr. Gerard, Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator John Sharp Williams, Governor Alfred E. Smith, Frederic Courtland Penfield, Charles W. Eliot, and Cleveland H. Dodge, all members of the Executive Committee.

CALEDONIAN CLUB PROTESTS

New York Members Repudiate Self-Determination Plea to Senate.

The New York Caledonian Club has authorized a protest to be sent to Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repudiating a plea for self-determination for Scotland on the ground that this plea to the committee does not represent the sentiment or wishes of the Scottish organizations here. The protest reads, in part:

In the opinion of the trustees and members of the New York Caledonian Club, founded in 1856, the second oldest Scottish organization in New York City, this plea for self-determination does not represent the sentiment of the majority of the Scots in the United States and Scotland. This plea was sent to the Senate committee without the advice and opinion of more than 900 Scottish societies, clans, and clubs in America; therefore, be it Resolved that the trustees and members of the New York Caledonian Club protest any consideration of this plea or the granting of any hearing regarding this matter.

FRENCH WOULD PREVENT PROPAGANDA BY TREATY

Demand a Clause That Austrians Shall Not Talk for Annexation to Germany.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The French delegation is still insisting on what all other powers look upon as one of the absurdities of the Peace Conference, namely, a clause in the Austrian treaty forbidding propaganda in Austria in favor of annexation to Germany. France does not pretend to know how it would be possible for the Allies to prevent the people of German race and language in Austria from expressing an opinion in favor of annexation to the Germans of Germany, but France does demand that the expression of such opinion by the Austrian people should be considered as formal and definite violation of the treaty by the Austrian Government.

England, France, and Italy refuse to take the matter seriously. When it was up for discussion before the Supreme Council yesterday Mr. Balfour called attention to the comment in the German note on Article 80 of the treaty. That article provides that Germany must acknowledge and respect the independence of Austria and that this independence shall be inalienable except upon a ruling to the contrary from the League of Nations. In its note on this article, the German delegation at Versailles said Germany would undertake not to atempt the annexation of Austria by force. This note was received by the Allies and that apparently ended the matter.

Since then the German Constitution has provided that all Germans are members of the "Reich," and that representatives of Austria have seats in the National Assembly, but will not be allowed to vote until the two countries are united.

With such a definite provision as that already made by Germany for possible future annexation, American, English and Italian delegates at Paris fail to see the sense of trying to prevent talking about the matter in Austria.

TORONTO HAILS PRINCE.

Hundreds of Thousands Line Streets to See Royal Visitor.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Great demonstrations of welcome and loyalty, which continued throughout today and tonight, marked the last day of the present visit of the Prince of Wales to Toronto.

The reception given the royal visitor at the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition, and in the Twenty-Four-Mile Triumphal Drive through the streets, was unparalleled in the history of the city. On account of the great crowds and the magnitude of the demonstration, considerable curtailment of the program was necessary. Hundreds of thousands of persons lined the streets to get a view of His Royal Highness and party. The Mounted Police had to charge the crowds at times to get the Prince's car through.

After the scenes in the city streets and at the Canadian National Exhibition this afternoon, where more than 100,000 people assembled to see and hear the Prince, it was decided to cancel his engagement to attend the pyrotechnic display tonight. The royal visitor was reported to be suffering from the strain and excitement of the day's demonstration.

Thousands stood cheering and waving flags as the Prince entered the exhibition grounds to review 30,000 veterans of the great war. Mounted on a dashing charger, the Prince galloped to the front of the grand stand, where the veterans closed around him. The escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons and platoons of mounted police were of no avail. He finally reached the reviewing platform, however, where he was lifted off his horse and away from the crowd which was good-naturedly mobbing him.

The Prince briefly thanked the crowd for the great welcome and told how glad he was to meet his comrades from the battlefields of France. Few could hear the address, however, because of the deafening cheers. Following his address, the Prince presented medals to a number of veterans.

TAKES OVER TOLSTOY ESTATE.

Soviet Nationalizes It in Order to Preserve Author's Memory.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—A dispatch from Helsingfors says the Russian soviet Government has nationalized the estate of the late Count Tolstoy at Yasnaya Pollana, in order to preserve the memory of Tolstoy.

The dispatch adds that the Government has invited the members of the Tolstoy family to enter the service of the Government and reside in the castle and manage a projected institution for the enlightenment of the people.

HOLD ON TO BALTIC LANDS.

German Troops Refuse to Obey Orders to Withdraw, It Is Asserted.

MITAU, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—The German Government has ordered the withdrawal of the troops from the Baltic lands. The troops, however, declared that they had resolved to remain and take advantage of the promise of the Lettish Government to grant citizenship if they settled there.

Field Marshal von der Goltz, although ordered not to return to Mitau, went back on his own responsibility, declaring that he would use his influence with the men. In the meantime disturbances between the Lettish and German troops occurred, and Lettish headquarters was plundered. Von der Goltz then apologized.

RAIL STRIKERS DEFY ORDERS TO RETURN

GOVERNMENT MAY STEP IN

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 27.—Although both Government and the four railroad brotherhoods' officials were straining to prevent its spread, a strike of yard and switchmen and allied crafts was paralyzing steam rail transportation in Southern and Central California tonight.

The men, who went on strike as individuals and without a formal reason, defied orders of their union officials to return. In Southern California telegraphic instructions were received from Warren S. Stone, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, for the men of that craft to resume work. The men had the instructions under consideration.

Railroad officials said it was the worst strike in the history of the State. Throughout the day a scant half dozen trains moved from here for Southern and Eastern points, and but one transcontinental train of the Southern Pacific departed. No trains moved in or out of Los Angeles.

"Unless there is a decided improvement the Government will take steps to operate the lines," said a statement concerning the strike received from Warren S. Stone, chief of the locomotive engineers and made public here tonight.

A message from President Lee of the trainmen pointed out that the strike had not been sanctioned by the international organization, and added that the members in engaging in a sympathetic strike "will only make a bad situation much worse. Advices from the Railroad Administration are to the effect that the Pacific Electric is operating under virtual normal conditions with strike breakers, and that the only roads embarrassed on the Coast are Government controlled lines where our organization holds contracts."

Canneries Seek 1,000 Trucks.

In the great Santa Clara Valley pear picking ceased and canneries were endeavoring to obtain 1,000 motor trucks to bring in and clear their supply. In San Jose an order was issued that gasoline should be sold only for commercial purposes. Milk trains were stalled in many points and freight service over the whole affected area was at a standstill.

An embargo on all freight coming into the San Francisco Bay district over the Southern and Western Pacific lines was put into effect. Mail for the East was cleared on the single Overland Train, and for the South on a steamer.

Officials of the Shopmen's Union here announced that the men would not participate in the strike. In both San Francisco and Santa Barbara, Superintendents and other executives "hooked up" trains. Fresno bankers predicted that half of the green fruit shippers would be ruined unless there was quick relief.

Santa Fe trainmen running between Barstow and Needles and Seligman, Ariz., struck today, virtually putting that line out of business in the entire State. Stations depending on the line for water were virtually helpless.

Individually, the men said they were striking in sympathy with the strikers on the Pacific Electric System who are out for higher wages and improved working conditions. That company recently refused to meet the demand.

An order to all members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen who are on strike in Southern California to return to work, which was received tonight from W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood, contained the warning that members who failed to obey the order would be suspended.

May Return Without Prejudice.

Officials of the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Salt Lake lines announced that the men might return "without prejudice" or without loss of seniority rights.

Those who have mingled with the strikers in the past few days have heard the men declare they would not go back until the striking Pacific Electric men were reinstated without loss of seniority. Late yesterday the Pacific Electric Company reiterated its refusal to take the strikers back, except as new men "and when vacancies occur."

The only other development of importance in the rail tieup here was a statement to the Postal authorities by a delegation of trainmen, who said they were ready to handle exclusive mail trains.

A boatload of mail was to leave the harbor here for San Francisco today. A motor truck service was established all through Southern California, south to San Diego, north to Santa Barbara, and east to San Bernardino. The trucks will handle mail to and from all intervening points.

The street car strike here, which is credited with having started the trouble, was at a deadlock today. The Mayor's mediation commission figuratively threw up its hands and quit yesterday.

The United States Grand Jury for this district convened today for the announced purpose of inquiring into the alleged abandonment of a train carrying mails at Colton yesterday by trainmen who joined the strike there.

After having been on strike but a few hours yardmen at Sacramento, Cal., an important division terminal for both the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific lines, returned to work tonight, according to an announcement at the local offices of the Railroad Administration.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 27.—Warren S. Stone today verified the Los Angeles reports that the men had been ordered back to work. The orders had been issued following several long distance telephone conversations during the night with representatives of the Brotherhoods on the Pacific Coast.

To messages received from striking yardmen of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe Railroads, Mr. Stone replied that under no circumstances would the Brotherhood support a sympathetic strike. "We are anxious to get the men back to work," Mr. Stone said.

Mr. Stone's statement, addressed to the engineers, follows:

Effective at once. Inform all members of division that strike is illegal from start to finish. All members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers will be required to abide by the laws of the organization and carry out the contracts made in good faith both by the individual roads and the Federal Government. Failing to do so, they will be expelled inside of 24 hours. Unless there is decided improvement, the Government will take steps to operate the roads. You all know what this will mean. Impress on everyone the necessity of using sober thought and exercising common sense and not be carried away by a wave of mob law.

In addition to Mr. Stone's statement, the following statement signed by W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, was posted by local officers of the Brotherhood tonight:

Advise all men of the Brotherhood that we will not engage in sympathetic strike, and tell our men that less than two months ago 238 members of the Brotherhood were expelled from the organization at Winnipeg for sympathetic action, while many of them lost their positions. Our members must return to work and uphold their contracts, if they expect to retain membership and support of this organization.

Brotherhood leaders went into executive session to consider the new orders from Mr. Stone and Mr. Lee. They refused to comment on the developments.

LONG ISLAND MEN MEET.

Union Workers Take Up Strike Question, but Decision Is Unknown.

The 1,200 men employed in the Long Island Railroad shops at Morris Park held a four-hour session late yesterday afternoon on the question of whether they would strike for a wage of 85 cents an hour or whether they would submit to President Wilson's plan for an increase of 4 cents. The machinists, boiler makers, blacksmiths, electricians, carmen, pipe fitters, and sheet metal workers attended the meeting.

Thomas Pettigrew, head of the machinists' local, and one of the local advisory board among the shopmen, before entering the meeting said:

"We are going to bring this matter to a head right now. We have been fighting for an increase for the last eight months. Our demands were laid before the Administration on Feb. 7, and we have waited all these months for a decision. Now we are notified that we will get an increase of four cents an hour. This arrangement is not satisfactory to us. We feel that the President could reduce the high cost of living and at the same time we could obtain an increase in pay which would put us on a level with the men of outside trades."

Only shopmen were admitted to the meeting, which opened at 4 P. M. It was said that no statement would be given out as to whether the men had voted to strike, but it seemed to be the consensus that a strike vote would prevail.

PREDICTS A STEEL STRIKE.

Special to The New York Times.

GARY, Ind., Aug. 27.—The refusal of Elbert H. Gary to confer with representatives of the Amalgamated Union will mean an immediate strike in all plants of the United States Steel Corporation, in the belief of heads of the Calumet District Council here.

"I did not know that Mr. Gary is from Missouri, but I guess he will have to be shown that John Fitzpatrick is authorized to represent the organized iron workers by calling out the thousands of steel workers in his shops to enforce the demands," said E. A. Lux, Secretary of the local council.

There are 18,000 steel workers here and 50,000 are employed in steel plants and subsidiaries in the Calumet district.

BAKERS GET JAIL SENTENCE.

Five members of the Journeymen Bakers' and Confectioners' International Union of America were sentenced to ten days each in the workhouse yesterday by Magistrate Francis X. Mancuso, in the West Farms Police Court, on a charge of disorderly conduct. The men gave their names and addresses as Charles Deer, 1,374 Brook Avenue; Henry Shaffhauer, 1,049 Washington Avenue; Henry Herzog, 405 East 182d Street; Joseph Budweiser, 329 East 159th Street, and Ernest Senzel, of 212 East Ninetieth Street.

It was charged that on Aug. 16 the quintet picketed the bakery of Sigmund J. Eller, at 541 East 183d Street. Eller is President of the Master Bakers' Association, and he testified that the defendants by their conduct and interference with his customers that day depreciated his earnings. He said the men wore in their hatbands legends telling the public that Eller's Bakers were on strike, which was a false statement.

Detectives John Lynch, Thomas Egan, Harry Hollinwoode and Edward Pruschen, of Police Inspector James Savage's office, testified that the five defendants told prospective customers that Eller sold bad bread. The District Attorney stated in court to Magistrate Mancuso that he had sufficient evidence against the defendants and the union with which they are identified to present a substantial complaint to the United States Attorney.

In passing sentence, Magistrate Mancuso reminded the prisoners that they should have taken warning a month ago when others in their union were sent to prison by the Court of Special Sessions.

NATION ENTERS STRIKE.

Federal District Judges Issue Order for Arrests at Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 27.—Entrance of the Federal Government into the trolley strike situation followed a long distance telephone conversation today between Charles A. Fagan, one of the trolley company's receivers, and Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer. Mr. Fagan told the Attorney General that efforts to get adequate police protection from the city, since the rioting on Monday, when an attempt was made to run cars, had failed.

Judges Charles P. Orr and W. H. S. Thompson, in the United States District Court, issued an order to Marshal Short to cause the arrest of all persons interfering with the operation of cars. The court declared the city authorities had shown "manifest indifference" in preserving order.

Mayor E. V. Babcock, to whom the receivers wrote numerous letters asking protection for their cars, was denounced at a meeting of 800 members of the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon. Hisses and boos greeted his attempts to explain that he had tried in vain to bring the striking carmen and the receivers together in an effort to end the strike.

A meeting of the 3,000 striking motormen and conductors late today to discuss voting on calling off the strike broke up with nothing accomplished. A parade of the strikers then was held in the downtown streets. Cheers and hisses mingled as the men, with 800 returned soldiers in uniform, passed. There was no disorder.

TO MAKE STRIKES CRIMES.

That Is the Proposition Moorfield Storey Urges Before Bar Association

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—A law to make strikes criminal offenses was urged before the conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws today by Moorfield Storey of this city, a former President of the American Bar Association. The gathering applauded Mr. Storey's assertion that "the same reason which prevents quarrels and fights between individuals must apply where a great body of men undertake to paralyze the community service in order that they may get something from the people."

"What can you consider," he continued, "that the great public service corporations were founded by the public and are given the right of eminent domain, and all those things which are provided for the accommodation of the public—our water, our food, our heat, our light—it is an amazing thing that the men employed to operate these services should claim that they are the owners of them and have the right to operate them in their own way.

"It is an impossible thing that there should be in the body of the community associations of men who do not regard their contracts as of any binding force. I hope this association will soon try to frame a law to make strikes a climinal offense. These men who control the labor organizations threaten us with calamities hardly second to those which happened through the acts of Germany."

Copenhagen Harbor Tied Up.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 27.—All harbor work in Copenhagen was brought to a standstill today as a result of a strike called by the harbor workmen.

VICTORY IN 1920, SAYS HAYS

Massachusetts Republicans Also Hear Watson Assail Treaty.

NEWTON, Mass., Aug. 27.—Senator James E. Watson of Indiana and Chairman Will H. Hays of the Republican National Committee addressed an outdoor Republican rally here today. Chairman Hays predicted Republican success in 1920, and Senator Watson attacked the covenant of the League of Nations.

Senator Watson said that the Senate would demand that President Wilson surrender all of the additional power extended to him because of the war. He asserted that there would be enough votes in the Senate to insure that reservations protecting the sovereignty of the United States would be added to the League of Nations covenant.

He asserted that the high cost of living would be lowered if a part embargo were placed on exports of foodstuffs and commodities.

AMERICAN ADMIRAL WARNS TURKEY

about the Armenian mandate. If she will take it, everybody in Europe will recognize the best solution has been found; but if she will not, let her say so, and thus enable some other arrangement to be made.

"It is not reasonable that armed forces of Great Britain should be asked any further to stop this particular gap. We only agreed to police the Transcaucasian territory as a strictly temporary measure. We have throughout declared our unwillingness to accept and permanent mandate there, and we have quite sufficient responsibilities elsewhere. The costly and thankless task which we already discharged among the Armenians and their neighbors constitutes a disinterested service to the Peace Conference which it has no right to expect us to go on rendering."

NO INSTRUCTIONS TO BRISTOL.

Assumed He Acted on Information of New Massacres.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Unofficial Washington learned today that Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, the American naval and quasi-diplomatic representative at Constantinople, had administered a warning to Turkey to stop killing Armenians only from the Paris dispatches telling of the Peace Council's flurry over the news. As to the circumstances under which the warning was issued, the form it took, and whether it was personally authorized here nothing is known at present.

A high official of the Government intimately in touch with Admiral Bristol at Constantinople and acquainted with his general duties and instructions there asserted tonight that he knew of no special instructions that had been sent to Admiral Bristol, directing him to serve such a warning on the Turks. This same high official said that he had read recent dispatches from Admiral Bristol and found in them nothing indicating that he was about to issue such a warning. If Admiral Bristol had taken such action on instructions from Washington they must have gone direct from the President without passing through regular naval channels, and in well-informed quarters this was not considered likely.

The disposition of the high official talked with was to believe that Admiral Bristol must have issued his warning merely as a protest in the name of humanity on the basis of very definite information reaching him that the Turks were massacring Armenians.

Admiral Bristol is serving the United States at Constantinople, it was learned, in the dual capacity of naval officer and representative of the State Department. While we did not go to war with Turkey we severed diplomatic relations and this Government now has no regularly accredited diplomatic officers in Constantinople, just as the Ottoman Government has no diplomatic establishment here. Admiral Bristol, as observer and American diplomatic representative Admiral Bristol has been instructed to represent the State Department. His flagship at Constantinople is the old cruiser Olympia, which was Dewey's flagship during the famous May day fight at Manilla Bay. He has several minor craft there also.

President Wilson has had the welfare of the Armenians very close to his heart and is understood not to have been opposed to the acceptance by the United States of a mandate over Armenia should this nation be asked by the proposed League of Nations to assume the burdens of such a task. In the speech which the President delivered at Boston on Feb. 24, 1919, upon his first return from the Peace Conference, the President is regarded as having appealed for acceptance of the League of Nations mandate over Armenia.

MISSION TO REPORT.

Crane and King Return from Study of Asiatic Turkey.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—Charles R. Crane and Dr. Henry Churchill King, who went to Asia Minor in June as an American mission to investigate conditions in the Near East, returned to Paris today. They will report tomorrow to the American delegation on the Syrian situation, and the next day on the conditions in the remainder of Asia Minor.

Mr. Crane and Dr. King visited thirty-nine cities of Asiatic Turkey and conferred with committees representing more than 1,200 villages. It was amazing, they say, to find how generally President Wilson's Fourteen Points were known throughout the Near East and how strong was the nationalistic feeling, even among the Arabs, who rode for days in order to meet the commission. Their presence was so widely heralded that the Americans never arrived anywhere without being greeted by a large delegation eager to communicate its aspirations to the United States.

Unlike Russians, who returned from New York's east side to Russia and bitterly denounced America, Mr. Crane says the Syrians who have returned from America have only praise for the United States and American ideals and ideas. At Beirut Syrians of all classes pointed to red-tiled houses and told the mission that these were built by Syrians who had prospered in America. They praised the American schools, declaring that these schools had never attempted to discourage a national spirit.

Asia Minor, according to Mr. Crane, is looking to America so hopefully that it would be a pity to disappoint the people of that territory by refusing to assist in bringing about order and peace there.

STILL HOPE FOR MANDATE.

But Armenians Are Dismayed by Recent Reports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Miran Sevasly, representative in the United States of the Armenian national delegation and Chairman of the Armenian National Union of America, issued a statement on the reports from London in regard to the Armenian mandate.

"The betrayal of Armenia, as foreshadowed in the dispatches from London, constitutes the greatest slur on the civilization of the world and particularly on the British and American spirit of fair play," said Mr. Sevasly. "It is the most despairing note that has come forth shortly after a war which had for its purpose the liberation of oppressed and dependent nationalities from the worst barbarism extant. It would signify to future generations that this war was fought on false pretenses.

"Armenia has just as much claim on the liberal nations of Europe, and especially on America, as Belgium, Greece, Rumania and Serbia. She has held aloft for 2,000 years the torch of liberty and Christendom; she has fought valiantly on the side of the Allies; a million of her people have been sacrificed on the altar of liberty, and now comes the unimaginable and appalling statement that Armenia is to be left in the lurch and at the mercies of the Turks and Tartars combined. The Armenians have waited and hoped, and will still hope and wait, being assured that America will do the needful and safeguard her future through independence.

"The betrayal of Armenia would be the most cowardly act in history by the so-called civilized and free nations of the earth, and if such a betrayal is to become a reality it will be the surest incentive to drive people to Bolshevism and anarchy.

"The Armenian national delegation, the Armenian union and patriotic societies are watching with vigilance the international developments, and they will not rest nor withdraw from their position until complete justice shall have been rendered to martyred and noble Armenia. Whether the League of Nations be adopted or not, America has a duty to perform toward helping Armenia to life and freedom, and I am perfectly sure that this country will extend to her that aid in the immediate future in the name of all the principles which have made the Stars and Stripes the surest asylum of the oppressed and an object lesson to the oppressors."

LIVE STOCK PRICES TUMBLE.

Public Boycott of Meat Causes Packers to Quit Buying.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Following a boycott by many housewives throughout the country on high priced pork and other meats, a storm of protest hit the stockyards today and sent meat prices tumbling. The packers found that the boycott on pork had reduced the demand to such an extent that they were obliged to withdraw their buyers from the pens. They left 14,000 hogs with no buyers, and as a result the price of live pork went on the toboggan.

Hogs, which at the opening of trade were quoted at $18.50 a hundred pounds, fell off to $17.50, a drop of a cent a pound, and later prices were recorded at $17, a net drop of 1½ cents per pound.

Beef also dropped approximately $1 per hundred pounds, a bulk of the cheaper grades of cattle selling at from $10 to $14 per hundredweight, with prime bullocks listed at $18.75.

Sheep went 25 cents lower in sympathy with the rest of the market, which placed the price of prime lambs at $16.25 a hundred and the ordinary run at from $11 to $13.

The packers have virtually withdrawn from the market, leaving hundreds of carloads of livestock in the yards unsold. The packers say their market has vanished. The public is boycotting meat with the result that the coolers here are full of beef which cannot be sold, branch houses are canceling orders, foreign buyers say their market is glutted and retailers are complaining.

This condition of the market is country-wide. Live stock has been forwarded here from the Kansas City market where buying has virtually ceased. From other live stock centres offers have been sent to Chicago packers. Everywhere the revolt of the consumer against high meat prices has caused a reaction in the market.

While the demand for meat has been falling off, the supply has been increasing rapidly. There has been an almost unprecedented rush of livestock, the farmer has become imbued with the idea that the country is in earnest in its campaign against unnecessarily high prices and as a result he is driving to market everything on four feet that he can round up from a quite natural desire to get out at the best prices he can obtain.

Experts seen in the slump the beginning of a break in the high cost of living. Packers announced that the effect of the wholesale decline would be felt in the retail market in two or three days.

Market students ascribed the downward tendency of prices to the fact that living costs have forced the general public to a vegetable diet, and that the packers have found it impossible to dispose of large stocks now in their coolers. Representatives of the big dealers stated in quitting the market that the present supply of dressed beef could not be sold even at a loss of from $1 to $1.50 a hundred weight, and that prospects of further declines made it inadvisable to add to stocks in storage.

and at least there seems to have been no assurances received that the Brotherhoods would be in full sympathy with such a movement at this time, in view of what President Wilson had to say. In the letter which was sent out to the various unions yesterday by the leaders of the shop crafts in connection with the new strike vote it was pointed out that the shopmen would be striking alone.

There are predictions made here tonight that the American Federation of Labor, within the next few days, will issue what will amount to a reply to President Wilson's statement of Monday, and that Mr. Gompers will seize this occasion to define, at some length, the exact position which the federation takes, not only in regard to the present high living costs, but of what the future holds in store for labor. In such a statement, it is reported, the federation will make plain that free privileges must be given to labor in the event that strikes are withheld at this time pending the efforts of the Government to bring down living costs, and to increase the value of the dollar.

The committee of the shop crafts were in session all day at the National Hotel, but did not make any statement. Bert M. Jewell, President of the Railway Employes Department of the A. F. of L., said that he would not discuss any conclusions reached pending the arrival here of Mr. Gompers and the meeting of the Executive Committee of the federation.

No word concerning developments in the situation was made public, either at the White House or the Railroad Administration.

State Department to ascertain whether this Government would look with favor on the appointment of a financial adviser. Viscount Ishii gleaned the impression from his talks with Secretary Lansing that the latter was not opposed to such an appointment being made. At least Viscount Ishii so notified his Government.

That was before Secretary Lansing went to Paris as a member of the American Peace Commission. After Viscount Ishii had indicated to his Government his impression that this Government was not averse to a Japanese financial adviser being sent to China announcement was made that Baron Yoshiro Sakatani had been appointed Japanese Financial Adviser to China. As soon as Dr. Reinsch heard of the appointment he is understood to have reported to the State Department in opposition to it.

The statement is made in a usually well informed quarter that after Dr. Reinsch had made his reports to Washington Secretary Lansing took the matter of the appointment up in conversations with former Ambassador Ishii and that it was after these conversations that Ishii, learning that this Government did not favor the appointment of Baron Sakatani, was placed in the rather embarrassing position, as he felt, of having to report to his Government that the actual view of the Washington Government was not just what he had himself previously led his Government to believe before Baron Sakatani's appointment was announced. The resignation of Viscount Ishii followed and, at his own request, he was recalled to Japan.

One of the objections raised against Baron Sakatani was that he had been actively engaged in certain reactionary intrigue in China, and it was even alleged that he had, in some way, figured to align Southern China against Northern China in an effort to develop disunion instead of unity in Chinese affairs.

Dr. Reinsch was born in Milwaukee four years after the close of the civil war. He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin, studied at the University of Berlin, also at Rome and Paris and has had extended experience in international matters. From 1899 to 1913 he was professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin. Then in 1911-12 he was Roosevelt professor at the Universities of Berlin and Leipsic.

In 1908 he went to Rio de Janeiro as American delegate to the Third Pan-American Conference, also to the Fourth Conference at Buenos Aires in 1910, while in 1909 he was sent to Santiago as delegate to the First Pan-American Scientific Congress. President Wilson appointed him Minister to China on Aug. 15, 1913.

Dr. Reinsch is the author of "World Politics at the End of the Nineteenth Century as Influenced by the Oriental Situation," "Intellectual Currents in the Far East," and many other books.

16 MORE FLIERS COMPLETE TRIP

FEAR ONE MET HIS DEATH

Lieut. Slater, Lost After Leaving Buffalo, May Have Fallen Into Lake Ontario.

AVIATORS BRAVE STORMS

Seventeen of 49 Competitors Have Now Finished in International Air Race.

Nine American and seven Canadian entrants competing for $10,000 in cash prizes and trophies offered by the American Flying Club and Aero Club of Canada completed the round trip yesterday. Undoubtedly many other pilots would have finished the race had they not been held up by torrential rainstorms which struck Syracuse and Buffalo, two of the control stations. Six of the American fliers, who were at the Albany station, decided to buck the storm and arrived successfully at Roosevelt Field, their machines giving visible evidence of the buffeting encountered on the home stretch.

Seventeen of the forty-nine contestants in the International Handicap have arrived at the starting points. Eleven pilots have been scratched in the contest, which leaves twenty-one contestants who are in the race. Members of the contest committee expect the remaining aspirants to arrive at Toronto and Roosevelt Field today. The period of the contest has been extended until midnight tomorrow night to allow the later entrants to fly the course.

The first fatality of the event is feared to have occurred yesterday when Lieutenant H. G. Slater, a Canadian entrant, who left Buffalo soon after noon, failed to arrive at Toronto. At a late hour last night no word had been heard of the aviator, who is believed to have met with an accident while flying over Lake Ontario. Bert Acosta, another Canadian contestant, who arrived back, reported that he had seen a De Haviland plane similar to the one used by Slater while flying over the lake. Fellow pilots and life-saving crews have joined in a search for the missing airman.

Several of the contestants met with mishaps yesterday, but none of them was seriously injured.

Captain C. H. Reynolds, flying a De Haviland plane, wrecked his machine eight miles out of Albany during the rainstorm. Lieutenant C. L. Osborne, a new starter from Roosevelt Field, came to grief near Jericho, L. I., when his machine turned turtle in a forced landing. He and his pilot escaped with a few scratches. Lieutenant F. Honsinger, a Canadian, became lost in the darkness near Farmingdale, L. I., on his way here from Albany, and was compelled to land, damaging his machine. Several other of the contestants had similar experiences along the line of the course.

The Americans to complete the race yesterday in the order in which they landed at Roosevelt Field were: Lieutenant R. F. Midkiff, Captain A. E. Simonian, Lieutenant W. C. Brown, Lieutenant P. H. Logan, Captain H. B. Chandler, Colonel Gerald C. Brant, Colonel H. H. Hartney, Lieutenant Ben Adams and Major Gilkeson.

FLIERS FINISH HERE AFTER A STORMY TRIP

Encounter Rough Weather and Planes Are Badly Battered—New Starter Is Wrecked.

Heavy rainstorms up State seriously handicapped the contestants in the New York to Toronto and return International Handicap race, and many of the fliers were compelled to remain over night at Alabny and Syracuse control stations. Orders were issued at the Albany station that fliers were not obliged to remain there, but could use their own discretion. Nine entrants from Roosevelt Field braved the elements and finished the race during the day, making a total of eleven who have covered the course to Toronto and back since the start on Monday. All of them agreed that rarely had they experienced such rough flying as on the way back.

Lieutenant C. L. Osborne was the only new entry to get away yesterday, and he came to grief near Jericho, L. I., when his machine landed upside down. Lieutenant Osborne reported to Colonel Archie Miller, in charge of the army contestants, that he and his mechanician were "sore but unhurt." The plane, a De Haviland 4, had been used by Lieutenant B. N. Maynard, a clergyman-flyer, in making the trip to Toronto and back. Lieutenant Osborne left at 1:08 P. M. and ran into a blinding squall, compeletly losing his way. When he found it was necessary to make a landing he picked out what he thought was a good place, but it proved to be a potato field. In turning turtle the plane was completely wrecked.

Other crashes brought the total so far in the race up to eleven. In none of yesterday's forced landings, according to word received at Roosevelt Field, was the pilot or mechanician injured. One airman, Lieutenant P. Melville, was disabled just outside Batavia, N. Y., but he was able to repair the minor damages on the plane and left shortly after 3 o'clock. Colonel H. H. Hartney, piloting an SE. 5-D, also met with illluck between Syracuse and Albany, but he was able to make the necessary repairs and continued on his way to Roosevelt Field.

Six of the Americans finished at Roosevelt Field between 5:30 and 8 o'clock, and were greeted by a good-sized crowd of fans. Some of the machines were so storm-battered that they will require extensive repairs before they can be used again. The strong headwinds encountered on the way here from Albany in several cases tore the fabric of the wings. One contestant, Major Gilkeson, was compelled to land when a particularly heavy gust tore loose the fabric of his Curtiss plane, causing it become unmanageable.

Major Gilkeson said he descended at Carmel, N. Y., made temporary repairs, and continued southward on the last lap. On the way here he raced with Lieutenant H. H. George, an American contestant, who started the race over again from Toronto.

The late arrivals in the afternoon and their time of finishing the race were: Lieutenant P. H. Logan, in a Le Pere, 5:51; Captain H. B. Chandler, JN-4 H, 6:52; Colonel G. C. Brant, De Haviland-4, 7:25; Colonel H. E. Hartney, SE-5 A, 7:34; Lieutenant Ben Adams, De Haviland-4, 7:36¾, and Major A. B. Gilkeson, JN-4, 8:05.

Both Lieutenant Logan and Lieutenant Adams were contestants who had made fresh starts in the race on Tuesday. Lieutenant H. H. George landed almost simultaneously with Major Gilkeson. He will start back for Toronto today. According to Major Gilkeson, several other planes were delayed at the Albany control station and no more would arrive until today. Lieutenant F. Honsinger, a Canadian entrant, flying a De Haviland-4, lost his way in the darkness on the way here from Albany and landed at Farmingdale, L. I., at 8:30 last night. His machine was slightly damaged, but he and his mechanician were unhurt. Motor trucks were sent from Roosevelt Field to bring the plane to the hangars.

The fourth American to complete the course was Lieutenant R. F. Midkiff, who reached the field at 11:20. Fifteen minutes later Captain A. E. Simonian, in a similar plane, landed at the field and "taxied" up to the starting line. Both pilots spoke of the unseasonable weather they had encountered. Heavy cloud banks made it impossible, they said, to fly any course except that of dead reckoning by means of a compass.

Lieutenant W. C. Brown, who reached Roosevelt Field at 11:50 A. M., brought with him letters from Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo to John McE. Bowman, donor of the $10,000 prizes in the race. C. S. Jones, a Canadian contestant, who entered the race after he had flown the course to Toronto unofficially, checked in at noon, leaving again two hours later. Jones said that he had found the course so easy to fly that he decided he could not afford to stay out of the race.

Because of many inquiries which have been made at the Flying Club from persons who do not understand the nature of the race, Lawrence L. Driggs, the President, yesterday issued the following statement:

> The order in which the machines completed the race has nothing to do with the awarding of prizes. The contest is run under handicap conditions, which have been worked out to determine which plane can perform the nearest to the theoretical performance credited them by specification. The winners cannot be announced until every machine has finished and the records checked up. This applies to the majority of prizes. The trophies and some of the cash prizes are awarded for the fastest flying time, but the order of finishing has nothing to do with these either, in as much as no two planes started at the same time.

Mr. Driggs also gave out a copy of a telegram he had received from the Prince of Wales. The message was in reply to a letter of invitation from the club, which was carried to Toronto by Colonel H. H. Hartney, one of the contestants, asking the Prince to visit the club while in New York. The telegram read:

> The Prince of Wales desires me to thank the officers and pilots of the American Flying Club for their cordial message of welcome and good wishes. His Royal Highness hopes time will permit him to avail himself of their kind invitation when in New York.
>
> (Signed) PRIVATE SECRETARY.

FEAR LIEUT. SLATER DROPPED INTO LAKE

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Lieutenant H. T. Slater, one of the starters from this end of the route in the air race, and whose departure from Buffalo for Toronto on his return flight was reported at 12:47 Wednesday afternoon, had not been heard from late this evening. In view of the fact that a land crash would certainly have been reported, the conclusion reached by local officials is that he has fallen into Lake Ontario and been drowned.

Early in the afternoon anxiety as to his fate began to manifest itself, and at 2 o'clock Captain H. H. McCruddn, one of the Ericson pilots, set out in search of him. An hour's flight over the waters of the lake, however, failed to reveal any sign of the missing plane, and the efforts of lifeboats sent out from the life-saving stations proved similarly fruitless.

A good deal of interest was manifested today in the arrival of Lieutenant S. S. Moore, more commonly known as "Dinty," an Ericson pilot. He had entered ther ace with one of the old Canadian training "buses," the lowest powered type of machine competing, and his performance was consequently watched with keen anticipation. He landed at 1:34 P. M. after expressing his high spirits in a "loop" and a couple of "rolls."

"We don't care about that flat tire now," he announced, referring to a mishap which had occurred at Syracuse. "She never missed a kick all the way." He had covered the course in about fifteen hours and a quarter, and since the race is a handicap, is expected to stand high in the list of results.

Lieutenant C. A. Schiller, another Ericson pilot, who is the youngest competitor in the race, was less fortunate, an error at Albany resulting in the admixture of a large quantity of water with the gasoline in his Canadian machine. A nose dive within landing range there caused some trouble, but he escaped injury. He was not discouraged over the affair, however, as allowance for the time lost will probably be made.

Colonel Barker, who returned to the field during the latter part of the afternoon, congratulated him on having finished in the face of this and a driving hailstorm over Lake Ontario, which left its marks on the propeller of his plane, and delayed his landing until 5:43 P. M.

"It was certainly a test," remarked the Colonel. "You could not have imagined worse weather for the machine."

Colonel Barker will also probably be allowed time for a delayed landing at Buffalo which was due to the absence of lights on the aerodrome there.

Pilot L. W. Bertaud was the subject of a certain amount of anxiety during the afternoon. He was reported as leaving Buffalo at one minute after noon, but did not appear at Leaside until a much later hour. It transpired, however, that this was due to an error in his instructions regarding the location of the Toronto terminal, which carried him to the northwestern quarter of the city, where he made a landing with resultant loss of time.

Of those who made the start from this end of the course seven had completed the trip this evening, while Lieutenant Lounge spent the night at Syracuse, Major Cook at Buffalo, and Lieutenant Parmer was last reported as on his way from Albany to Syracuse. Pilot Campbell had dropped out at Buffalo of his own volition, and Lieutenant Slater was unaccounted for.

Pilots Bertrand A. Costa and Roland Rholfs, who arrived at 11:53 and 11:45 o'clock yesterday morning, spoke of the tremendous enthusiasm which is evinced over the race in the United States. Where they flew at low altitudes, they stated, large crowds had gathered to wave them "good luck" as they passed overhead.

Those who had completed the race at Leaside yesterday, with their time of arrival, were as follows: Lieut. Col. W. G. Barker, 9:37 A. M.; Roland Rholfs, 11:43 A. M.; Bert Acosta, 11:53 A. M.; O. B. Coombs, 12:50 P. M.; H. S. Moore, 1:34 P. M.; Lieutenant Schiller, 5:43 P. M.

The following left the Leaside Aerodrome after remaining here over night: Lieut. Col. H. G. Slatter, 6:47 A. M.; Lieutenant Charles R. Coutts, 8:56 A. M.; Lieutenant H. B. Chandler, 9:11 A. M.; Lieutenant P. H. Logan, Colonel [illegible] 10:16 A. M.; Lieutenant W. R. Taylor, 10 A. M.

Lawrence Sperry and L. W. Bertaud arrived during the afternoon, and will leave for New York tomorrow. The former has re-entered the race. Owing to a lengthy delay he and Captain H. Smith will commence a round of the course from Leaside tomorrow. Major Simmons, who left at 10:25 yesterday morning, and Lieut. H. H. George, who left at 1:12 P. M., are also making their second start. Both of these latter were reported at Syracuse yesterday afternoon.

TWO FLIERS HURT IN FALL.

Capt. J. A. Reynolds Smashes Plane Near Albany After Losing Way.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Captain J. A. Reynolds, who was in a De Haviland plane, provided the local thrills in the International Air Derby today. He reached Albany shortly after noon and circled around the Roosevelt Flying Field for some time, apparently trying to make out the landing. Failing in this, he started his plane eastward toward the Berkshires.

He was officially reported as "missing," and officials in every city, town, and village for miles east of Albany were asked to watch for him. Tonight word came from Centre Brunswick, fifteen miles east of Troy, that Captain Reynolds and his passenger were being cared for there by a doctor. They were injured when their plane crashed into a tree during a driving rain and threw them out. It was said they were not seriously hurt.

The airmen are said to have fallen in a lonely spot. Near nightfall some farmhands heard groans from the aviators, and went to their aid. The plane was badly smashed.

Captain Reynolds left Syracuse at 11:18 today. Many other fliers came through, and all of them told of the heavy storms. These were especially severe from Buffalo to Albany. In this city showers obliterated the markings of the flying field, so that the first of the aviators to arrive could not find the place.

Colonel Hartney said when he reached Albany that tomorrow he would go over the course again and see if he could not make the round trip in a day. He is confident he can better his time.

One Canadian entrant brought a message to Attorney General Charles D. Newton from Attorney General I. B. Lucas of the Province of Ontario. Mr. Newton promptly replied.

Lieutenant C. D. Jones, a Canadian flier, arrived at 9:09 o'clock in the morning. He continued to Mineola and returned in the afternon to remain until tomorrow. Jack Binns, wireless operator when the steamship Republic was in collision several years ago, was a passenger with Lieutenant O. S. Palmer from New York, arriving at 11:42 o'clock.

Lieutenant H. W. Brown fell at Canastota in an attempt to take off after a landing forced by engine trouble. The plane was wrecked, but Lieutentnt Brown was unhurt.

The condition of Lieutenant Austin B. Crehore, who is in the Homeopathic Hospital, was reported as satisfactory, although still serious, tonight. His plane was smashed while he was trying to land Tuesday.

SAYS HIGH PRICES ARE COMING DOWN

'BUY NOW' SLOGAN HARMFUL

Reports of Projected Large Increase in Price of Shoes Not Likely to be Borne Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. — Reports from all parts of the country indicate that the Government's campaign against high living costs is meeting with results, and the ultimate consumer soon should feel the effect of the efforts, Attorney General Palmer said today.

A spirit of co-operation was being found in the majority of quarters, Mr. Palmer added, and he believed that even greater headway would be made as soon as additional power is given to the Administration by the legislation now pending before Congress, which will make possible the effective prosecution of profiteers.

There was one feature in connection with the general high living cost situation, Mr. Palmer said, which deserved attention, and that was the report received from more than one source, that propaganda was being used to keep up prices.

"The most damage is being done," he said, "by the kind of propaganda calculated, if not intended, to make prices higher. The kind of propaganda which urges people to buy now because higher prices are coming serves to increase demand, and increased demand makes for higher prices."

Some of this propaganda, Mr. Palmer said, probably was not intended to defeat the efforts of the Administration, or at least was not put forward entirely with that intent. The effect remained, however, and he did not believe that the price outlook warranted many of the assertions made.

Salesmen on the road were engaging in this propaganda in no small degree, Mr. Palmer added, but he did not believe that blame should attach to the salesmen as individuals, as they were acting under instructions from their employers.

"We find it difficult to reach this kind of propaganda," explained Mr. Palmer. "I doubt if the laws apply unless it can be shown that there is a combination formed guilty of a conspiracy to keep up or advance prices by such methods. In that event, of course, the laws could be brought into action."

Mr. Palmer said that while the campaign for lower living costs might not have reathed the stage where people felt much relief in regard to the cost of what they wore on their backs or put on the table, he believed such a result would be brought about within a very short time.

That the work of the fair price committees would accomplish much, Mr. Palmer was convinced. Talk that there might be legal objection to such price fixing, he said, was ill founded. He felt that it certainly was within the law for persons to agree not to go beyond certain prices.

"I don't believe that will be construed as restraint of trade," added Mr. Palmer, with a smile.

As to the general situation, Mr. Palmer believed the President was exactly right in the statements he had made about high living costs and the best way to cure them. He said that many interests were offering to do what they could to relieve the situation. In regard to the shoe prices and the reports which had been current that there would be a large increase in the cost of shoes next year, Mr. Palmer said that "the shoe people are coming across very nicely." He expressed the belief that the consumers would find much for satisfaction in the way this feature of the high living costs situation worked out.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture today reported the House bill extending the jurisdiction of the anti-hoarding and anti-profiteering sections of the food control act to a number of other commodities than food, with two amendments. One related to the control of rents in the District of Columbia, the other dealt with the "fair price" situation, providing that profiteering should not be charged where dealers did not exceed the prices fixed by the recognized "fair price committees."

Senator Gronna, when the report of the amended bill was made to the Senate, said there had not been an agreement as to all details in the committee and that several members reserved the right to propose amendments when the bill was before the Senate for debate.

BLAME DAIRYMEN FOR HIGH PRICE OF MILK

Members of Distributors' Board Testify Before the Special Grand Jury.

The Dairymen's League is blamed for high milk prices by William A. Levy, a member of the Milk Conference Board, whose activities are now being investigated by the Extraordinary Grand Jury in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court. Mr. Levy was a witness yesterday, together with D. E. Austin of the Nestlés Food Company, who also is a member of the board.

District Attorney Edward Swann and Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley refused to discuss the case. Levy, in previous statements to the District Attorney, said milk could be sold at least 2 cents cheaper if it were not for the demands of the Dairymen's League.

He said that the basis given by the farmers for the prices they ask is false. For example, he said, the farmers set out as part of their cost the price of feed. He contends that the farmers do not have to buy feed for five months in the year, meadow grass and clover sufficing during that time. The farmers, he said, say they have to pay $4.52 a day for farm labor, although they need no labor except for thirty minutes at night and thirty minutes in the morning for milking.

Mr. Levy said one reason for the high price of milk was that the farmers required New York dealers to take their entire output.

"After listening to the milk distributers," Mr. Talley said yesterday, "I marvel that they continue in business. Only a deep-seated feeling of philanthropy and obligation to the public, it would seem, could induce these men to keep their capital invested in such an unprofitable and hazardous enterprise."

The District Attorney is investigating a report that milk prices are fixed by what is known as the butter and cheese formula. No agreement is necessary to fix prices under this arrangement. The scheme is to figure out the price of milk for every month on the 20th of the preceding month, using as a basis the market value of butter and cheese.

D. E. Austin was questioned about the activities of the Conference Committee of the Milk Conference Board. He said that since April he had attended only one meeting. The price of milk to the consumer was never discussed by the board, he said, although the board discussed the price dairymen were to charge.

Mayor Hylan yesterday wrote to the District Attorney, asking him to look into the increase in the capital stock of the Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Company. The letter follows:

> City of New York,
> Office of the Mayor.
> Aug. 27, 1919.
>
>
> My dear Judge Swann: As you are investigating the milk conspiracy, would it not be proper for you to likewise look into the increase of capital stock by the Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Company from $2,700,000 to $9,000,000, and find out if possible what the $6,300,000 in capital stock represents, who got the additional stock and what was paid for it.
>
> If this $6,500,000 represents in whole or in part water pumped into the company to enlarge its capitalization and presumably a greater cost of operatinon, you may find that the raise in the price of milk is an endeavor on the part of those in control to pay a return on this tremendous increase of capital stock.
>
> We hear the milk trust harping on the increased cost of operation. If this stock represents water pumped into the company it is one method whereby the cost of operation is increased illegally and improperly.
>
> Very truly yours,
>
> JOHN F. HYLAN, Mayor.

Preston B. Lynn, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, and Senator Charles E. Russell of Brooklyn were appointed yesterday by the Mayor to serve on the Fair Price Milk Committee.

The District Attorney's charges of conspiracy between the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the Brotherhood of Interborough Employes, growing out of the recent strike, have been temporarily sidetracked, as has the inquiry into anarchistic and seditious activities, for which the Extraordinary Grand Jury was convened. The milk investigation will be resumed this morning.

STOCKMEN OPPOSE REGULATING PACKERS

Assert They Have Helped Competition in Livestock and Grocery Markets.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—A procession of witnesses, representing sections from Texas to New York, all opposing passage of the Kenyon and Kendrick bills for regulating the packing industry, were heard today by the Senate Agriculture Committee. Stockmen were in the majority, but grocers, farmers, feeders, bankers, and commission men were represented.

Frank Currie of Gard, Neb., a cattleman, opposed the bills "because they would Germanize the United States."

"They are used to being licensed and regulated over in Germany," Currie said.

W. D. Williams of Omaha, operator of a chain of grocery stores, said that the packers helped competitive markets on groceries.

"You regard this opposition as an indication of combination among the wholesalers?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"I do," Williams replied. Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co., obtained permission to insert correspondence in the record, showing that grocery jobbers had refused to supply Williams.

J. G. Curtis, for the New York and New Jersey livestock exchanges, was positive that packers competed in purchasing livestock.

"There is absolutely no necessity for regulation," he said, "I am sure of that after forty-three years of experience as a livestock salesman."

"I'm for competition," C. Niemier, a Princeton, Ind., retailer assured the committee. He said one of the reasons for the fight against the packers by the grocers was that "they are eliminating some of the profits between the producer and the consumer."

UPHOLDS FOOD SEIZURES.

Ohio Supreme Court Decides Against Columbus Packing Company.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 27.—The right of the State of Ohio to seize and sell at public auction food which has been held in cold storage longer than specified by the Smith Cold Storage law, was upheld by the State Supreme Court in a decision handed down today.

The decision fully upholds the constitutionality of the cold storage law under which seizure of seventy-five tons of pork owned by the Columbus Packing Company had been made by the Franklin County Common Pleas Court. The meat had been held in cold storage longer than the six months' time limit allowed under the cold storage law.

Seizure of millions of pounds of meat and other cold storage products in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Columbus, and other large cities are expected to follow immediately. Officials of those cities have only been waiting the State Supreme Court decision to take similar action, it is said.

U. S. FIXES WHEAT GRADES.

Scale of Discounts for Lower Qualities Announced.

The United States Grain Corporation, 42 Broadway, issued last night through its various zone offices to the 20,000 licensees buying wheat from the producers a complete scale of discounts for lower grades of wheat which have been decided upon after two days of consideration of the problem raised in respect to this year's crop owing to the large percentage of the crop which has suffered from the effects of adverse weather during the growing season.

These discounts, according to a statement issued last night by the Grain Corporation, are calculated to give the producer the benefit of every doubt as to the relative value of lightweight wheats, in order to protect as far as possible crop developments with the production of an unusual quantity of lower grade wheat.

This scale is effective Sept. 2, and all dealers will be required to pay producers not less than the proper country point reflection of the terminal guaranteed price for No. 1 wheat, and with the relation for other grades as follows:

No. 3 wheat .....3 cents under No. 2
No. 4 wheat .....4 cents under No. 3
No. 5 wheat .....4 cents under No. 4

The following instructions were issued:

"For all wheat otherwise conforming to the specifications of No. 5 or better, but deficient in test weight, discount No. 5 price three cents for each one-pound deficiency in test.

"Wheat grading below No. 5 for reasons other than deficiency in test weight shall be bought on its relative merits.

"Smutty Wheat—To be discounted from 2 cents for slightly smutty to larger discounts, according to degree of smut.

"Mixed Wheat—Will be taken at discounts ranging from 2 to 5 cents, according to quality, in the judgment of each Vice President.

"Mixed Wheat and Rye Grading Mixed Grain'—Will be discounted as follows: Estimate the average value of the wheat and rye separately at their proper value and in their proper proportion, (figuring the rye at sixty pounds per bushel,) make allowance for dockage or other inseparable foreign material, and make such deduction as seems justified, but not less than 5 cents per bushel as a penalty for the mixture.

"Garlicky Wheat—To be discounted 2 cents."

GOVERNOR NAMES FAIR-PRICE MILK COMMITTEE

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Announcement of the appointment by Governor Smith of a "Fair Price Milk Committee" was made at the executive chamber today. It consists of Francis Martin, District Attorney of the Bronx; Sophie Irene Loeb of the Childs Welfare Committee of New York, and Lee Kohns, who has long been associated with Nathan Straus in the distribution of milk to the poor.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Governor Smith, answering the question today concerning what official power the Fair Price Committee named by him would have, said:

"The Fair Price Committee has no official power. It has been appointed under the recommendations of Commissioner Finley and former Governor Glynn to investigate prices, negotiate with producers, wholesalers, and retailers where prices are deemed exorbitant, with a view to lowering the prices by pointing out alleged injustices.

"If the Fair Price Committee is given official authority it will be done by the Legislature. If the Fair Price Committee fails to reduce prices which are exorbitant and unjust the committee will be given necessary powers for dealing with the situation."

BUTCHERS PROMISE CUT IN MEAT PRICE

curacy with which the margin has been applied, members of the association agree to explain to him or to any representative of the field force of the Fair Price Committee, the reason for the difference, and will, if requested, produce the bill from the wholesaler.

"Likewise, should there be any question as to the fairness of these margins, the committee will be glad to confer upon them with the Fair Price Committee or to go to Washington and discuss the matter with the Attorney General, A. Mitchell Palmer, or with any one he may appoint for that purpose in their desire to convey to him and to the people of New York their determination to cooperate in establishing fair prices and fair practices.

"The committee urges that, in the weekly purchases of the home, stew beef and lamb, pot roast, corned beef, and soup meat be included as a help in solving some of the high cost of living problems. One difficulty is that so large a percentage of our people insist upon purchasing only the higher-priced cuts of meat, to the exclusion of the others, for all meals of the week.

"The committee urges that some of the meals of the week be served with the lower-priced cuts, which are equally nutritious, and in some instances more so. The committee points out that a meal at which stew beef or lamb is served with vegetables costs about half as much as a corresponding meal of sirloin steak. The nutrition is just as great, or perhaps greater."

Sees Early Drop in Meats.

Mr. Williams said the advance of 2 cents over the wartime margin did not point to an advance in meat prices.

"The butchers have assured me, and I believe it will prove a fact," he said, "that meat will be cheaper, now that we have reached a working agreement with the butchers. How much cheaper I cannot tell, but I think the reduction will be substantial in some cuts.

"Ever since the war stopped, the butchers have been working with no check on them but that of competition. Now, they agree to follow our fair price list. In the next bi-weekly list the Fair Price Committee issues, we will have prices of the meat to the consumer set down, and the housewife will know just what she ought to pay. The margins in the list given out are the margins of profit, and must not be confused with the retail price.

"Under our agreement with the butchers, the list may be used in this way: Say a housewife goes into a shop to buy a certain cut, and is charged what she considers an exorbitant price. She can demand to see the wholesaler's bill to the butcher for that meat, and then add the margin of profit to it. If the butcher refuses to show her the bill, she can report him for investigation as a profiteer.

"In getting cheaper meat for the public, we have met many difficulties which time alone will straighten out. We are going to try to be just to both the dealer and the consumer. There are many cuts of meat and four grades. The Government allows a variation of 10 cents a pound in the wholesale price list of these grades, and we must follow accordingly. We are relying on the common sense of the American housewife to see that she gets the grade of meat she asks for."

Show Increased Costs.

The butchers presented to the Food Administrator the following itemized account of the way in which the cost of conducting their business had mounted in the last twelve months.

	P. C.
Rent increase	26.25
Cartage increase	25.00
Salary increases	25.00
Supplies increase	20.00
Living expenses increase	12.00

Decrease in profits in hind quarters and ribs:

	P. C.
Suet	2.66
Flank fat	.94
Waste	2.16
Chucks	1.93

It was explained that since the signing of the armistice the butchers had lost the army market, and that from September, 1918, to the present the overhead cost to butchers had increased from 19.6 per cent. to 24.67 per cent., figured on a basis of sales.

Mr. Williams said he had received a letter from the New York Wholesale Grocers' Association, promising the hearty co-operation of that body with any steps the Attorney General might decide to take against profiteers. The association has appointed four members to confer with the Fair Price Committee on the biweekly lists of fair wholesale food prices.

Commissioner of Markets Jonathan C. Day, in charge of the food sales at schools, said last night he thought yesterday's sales were considerably greater than those of any previous day. Estimates placed the day's receipts at $75,000.

The new school which will be opened today will be No. 169 at 168th Street and Audubon Avenue. Those which will be opened tomorrow are: Public School 179, 171st Street, east of Amsterdam Avenue; No. 90, between 147th and 148th Streets on Seventh Avenue, both in Manhattan, and the following schools in Brooklyn: No. 12, Adelphi and Myrtle Streets; No. 145, Central Avenue and Noll Streets, No. 59, Leonard and Nassau Streets.

Day and other schools were being stocked with food, and sales would be opened as soon as possible. The hours for the sales are from 10 to 12 o'clock in the morning and from 1 to 4 in the afternoon. If the food supply is not exhausted when the schools open for the Fall term, Sept. 8, Dr. Day said, permission will be asked of the Board by Education to conduct sales from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 9 o'clock at night.

"We have the system of delivery checked up now," said Dr. Day, "so that we will avoid duplication of foodstuffs at certain schools. We are going to keep up a fair distribution at every building of our whole line of supplies. Today and yesterday we have delivered approximately 100,000 pounds of bacon. More than 1,000,000 pounds of other foods was put in the schools yesterday when we transported 22,500 cases from the army bases to the five boroughs."

Hampered by Union Rules.

The Rosemary E. Guinan carried 15,000 cases, or about 750,000 pounds, of food from Port Newark to the Recreation Pier at Twenty-fourth Street and the East River for distribution in Manhattan. Today other barges will be employed between the army bases and the Bronx, Richmond, Brooklyn, and Queens.

The Deputy Commissioner of Markets, Edwin J. O'Malley, told of the trouble with labor unions.

"I went to the East Twenty-fourth Street pier," he said, "to see how we were getting along unloading the barge. We are paying a big price for our trucks, and I wanted to be sure they were being kept busy. When I got to the pier I found the bargemen lying on the boxes, their rolled-up coats being used as pillows. The drivers of seven trucks were sitting half asleep in their machines.

"I asked a man on the barge what the trouble was. I was told that just as they were starting to work a delegate of their union happened along and told them they were not permitted to load the boxes on trucks. They could only put them on the pier. It was the job of another labor organization to get the food from the pier to the trucks.

"As the tailboards of the trucks extended over the barge, I pointed out that it was easier to load the boxes on the truck than to carry them around the truck and put them on the pier. Finally the men offered a compromise. They would load the boxes on to the tailpieces of the trucks, they said, but I would have to get men from another union to haul the boxes to the middle of the truck.

"I found the delegate of the proper union, who got the men who are permitted to load the trucks. We paid the barge helpers 60 cents an hour, I believe. The newcomers got a cent a box, and each driver and truck cost us $32 a day. After we got things under way it didn't take long to have a string of trucks running from the pier to the varied schools.

"But I think I got one of the real reasons for the high cost of living. That is, the number of men who handle the various commodities before they reach the consumer. Just think, for one truck, a driver who can't do anything but drive, one man to put a box on the tailboard, and another to pull that box to the centre of the truck."

Mr. O'Malley feared the extra charge would slightly increase the price of food at the schools.

The other case where the rules of organized labor threatened to interfere with the fight against high prices occurred at Public School 109, at 178th Street and Audubon Avenue. Laborers are receiving $4 a day for unloading trucks and $7.50 on Sundays and holidays. The men work eight hours, with an hour off for lunch. Dr. Day said the men had been working splendidly. Yesterday four trucks arrived at the school just before 4 o'clock. No inducement of extra pay or double wages could persuade the workmen to stay after the hour. Ordering the policeman in charge to keep the school building open, Dr. Day rushed an automobile load of men to the place to do the work. The food was all in the building by nightfall.

> All who work here are volunteers
> To help you fight the profiteers.
> So please be patient, kind, polite,

Complaints reached THE TIMES yesterday from housewives patronizing the sale at a school in the Borough of Queens. It was complained that persons waiting on foot in a line outside the school were ignored for men and women who drove up in automobiles. The Department of Markets will investigate the complaint.

The sale of 30,000 pairs of shoes made for the army, which had been announced for today by the Meade Shoe Company, at 102 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, began unexpectedly yesterday. Hundreds of people who had seen a notice of the sale went to the store. Many were policemen, letter carriers and firemen, who said they could not get away today, and James Meade, President of the concern, ordered the clerks to supply the visitors. About a thousand pairs were sold.

Army Shoe Sale Opens Today.

The real sale will open at 9 o'clock this morning. The shoes, made for army use, will be sold at $5.50 a pair. They are of tan, and are made in all sizes on the broad toed last which the doughboy found so popular.

In his inquiry into food profiteering, United States District Attorney James D. Bell of Brooklyn yesterday summoned twelve retailers who are alleged to have charged excess prices for sugar to appear before him tomorrow. The dealers have been requested to bring books and papers pertaining to their business. If any fail to respond to the request they will be subpoenaed. The inquiry will be conducted by Assistant District Attorney Charles J. Buchner.

ATTACK CARRANZA'S RULE BY DECREES

Supreme Court and Congress Beginning to Oppose Legislation by the President.

AFFECTS FOREIGN RIGHTS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. — Reports from private Mexican sources which have reached the State Department indicate that the Supreme Court and Congress of Mexico are out of step with President Carranza, and that there is a definite movement on the part of these branches of the Government to put an end to legislation by executive decree. It has been by decrees that Carranza has tried to put into effect measures jeopardizing foreign interests in Mexico under the constitution of 1917.

Recent tactics of Cabrera, Schiaffino, and others of the Carranza circle, it is reported, were prompted by the existence of a definite movement in the Mexican Congress to withdraw from Carranza extraordinary powers in finance. It was urged by the anti-Carranza faction that the withdrawal of such powers would prevent a recurrence of attempts at confiscation and would indicate to the world how far the new legislation might go toward enforcing radical measures authorized by the Constitution.

Editorial articles in all the Mexico City newspapers are taking Cabrera to task for his attitude. In an interview Cabrera had accused the Mexican people of a lack of patriotism in these critical moments. It had been declared repeatedly in Mexico City that 80 per cent. of the Mexican people would look upon American intervention with indifference while 90 per cent. of the educated class would welcome it.

"From our first years of school life," says the Excelsior of Mexico City, "we are taught to bear ill-will toward the United States. That is the very first lesson we are taught in the schools. As the years grow older, then they talk to us about two sister republics, inspired by the same ideals, economic relations and diplomatic relations. The result is the Mexican public adopting a policy of 'watchful waiting.' Then one day along comes a Government official who, for his own improper ends, attempts to incite and excite the people by demanding that we organize manifestations against the White House. Why? Because of the errors committed by our own Government. Then, the next day, because it suits a new turn in political affairs, we are told to go easy and we never know what is the reason for this."

This newspaper cited the time of the occupation of Vera Cruz when Huerta used the same manoeuvre to increase his forces on the plea that they were needed to be sent against the Americans on Mexican soil, and declared that instead of sending the recruits against the Americans, he sent them north against Villa and Carranza. Complaint is made in this Mexican paper that patriotism in Mexico is only "to be called up by such fellows as Cabera. Every one in Mexico wants an honest settlement of the petroleum question, but Cabrera comes along and tries to create antagonism among the people against the Americans."

Cabrera, who is Secretary of the Treasury, in addressing the Supreme Court of Mexico and recommending that no undue haste be taken in the decision of the Amparo cases now pending before it, lest it seem that Mexico was allowing herself to be influenced by the United States, was acting officially, according to advices from Mexico City today. The cases before the Mexican Supreme Court, and brought by American oil companies, are aimed directly against the Presidential decrees of Feb. 19, July 31, and Aug. 12, 1918, which evoked protests from the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, France, and Holland.

Denial that the Carranza Government itself had offered any reward for the capture of Francisco Villa was authorized in a statement issued at the Mexican Embassy this afternoon. The reward was offered only by the Governor of Chihuahua.

MORE IMMIGRANTS TO MEXICO.

Government Sending Out Films Showing Opportunities.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—Secretary of State Berlanga has issued a statement showing the immigration of the past six months. The immigrants number 60,048, against 47,978 for the previous six months, a gain of 12,070. The Government claims the increase shows a returning confidence in the present Government.

The Government is manufacturing films on a large scale. Eighty thousand meters of national films have been made for exportation, showing natural resources, customs of Aztec and modern civilization, ancient monuments, public feasts, railway system, farming, &c. Hundreds of views are parts of Mexico almost unknown to Mexicans. Each State shows its natural resources, opportunities for investment, objects of art and customs of all classes. The films are now being shown in all cities of the republic.

Secretary of State Berlanga has ordered the films shown in all parts of the world where there are Mexican Consuls. The authorities in New York refused to permit the Mexican Consul en route to Switzerland to ship films. The Government is now treating to arrange this with the State Department.

Sinaloa Bandit Dead.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17 (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The death of Silverio Soto, a bandit leader, who has been operating for some time in the State of Sinoloa, is reported in a communication to the War Department by Lieutenant Antonio Palazuelos, a Federal Army officer in that State.

DRY BAN TO STAY TILL PEACE COMES

is in the statute books we are going to make the people live up to it.

"The steps taken in New York will be followed by action in other cities. We are going to clean up. We have the information and warrants will be issued.

"Out in the country districts we find that the people obey the law because it is the law. In the big cities the feeling apparently is that they can't 'get away with it.' So far, the big cities have treated the law with contempt. It is not the hotel as a rule, but the saloon. There is no reason why the people in the country should observe the law and the people in the cities be permitted to defy it. That is the only way to have a square deal, and the law will be enforced everywhere, to the best of the ability of this department of the Government."

Mr. Palmer said that the attitude of the Department of Justice toward the dispensers of beer containing but a small percentage of alcohol would still be guided largely by local conditions. This phase of the prohibition legislation, he said, was in the courts and there was some difference of opinion in different districts. He said that it was the dispenser of "hard liquor," whether it was in the form of whiskey, gin, wine, or other intoxicating drinks containing a large percentage of alcohol, that was the real offender. Such classes of dealers, he said, would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, whenever evidence against them could be obtained.

The Department of Justice is keeping its eye open, it was stated, to catch any who might endeavor to dispose of stocks of liquor in violation of the law, where such persons had about given up hope that the ban would be lifted before the Federal amendment went into effect next January, and sought the opportunity to unload in time to escape a big loss.

The campaign will not be restricted to the cities, it was made plain, but will reach to such seashore resorts as Atlantic City, and to other big Summer and Fall colonies.

PUSH "DRY" LAW ROUNDUP.

Federal Agents Make More Arrests Here—13 Are Held.

Additional arrests yesterday of alleged violators of the Wartime Prohibition act brought the total number up to twenty-one since the general round-up by Federal agents started Tuesday afternoon. Warrants are out for some twenty-odd more, and the Government agents continued their work last night. Thirteen defendants were arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock, these being in addition to the eight arraigned before him Tuesday afternoon. The prisoners, mostly bartenders, waived examination and furnished bail for examination on Friday before Judge Rufus E. Foster in the United States District Court.

The activity of the Federal agents is reported to have caused the saloonkeepers to be more cautious in dispensing drinks containing more than 2.75 per cent. of alcohol and even regular customers well known to the bartenders are said to have met a refusal. It was reported on the other hand bartenders were much freer, having concluded that the round-up is not to be as extensive as was at first promised.

The Federal authorities said that the arrests now being made are only the beginning of a wholesale clean-up, and that it was the purpose to close up every saloon and hotel bar in the city which is violating the law.

There was only one proprietor arraigned. He was J. H. Martin, the owner of a saloon at Forty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue, who was held in $1,000 bail. The Federal agents arrested Michael Ettlinger, cashier of the bar at the Hotel Hermitage, Seventh Avenue, near Forty-second Street, and he was released in bail of $500. When arraigned Ettlinger made the point that as cashier he never offered for sale any intoxicating liquor, and that he accepted payment for the amount of checks tendered without knowing whether the payments were for food, spring water, or liquors.

Others arraigned yesterday, bail in each case being $500, were:

Assistant United States District Attorney Ben A. Matthews, in charge of the Criminal Bureau, reiterated yesterday that liquor was being sold in some of the leading hotels of the city. Mr. Matthews yesterday received from W. H. Rorke, assistant manager of the Biltmore Hotel, the following telegram, copies of which were also sent to the press of the city by Mr. Rorke:

> Your statement in today's papers that liquor was being served in high-class hotels is a lie, and you knew it was a lie when you made it.

Mr. Matthews characterized the telegram as "outrageously offensive and entirely unjustified."

Marty Moran, a bricklayer, who while out of a job on Aug. 15 worked as a waiter in a saloon at Seventh Avenue and 125th Street, pleaded guilty before Judge Foster to a charge of selling a glass of sherry wine to a man named J. J. Tuite. As Moran has since left the saloon business and is now working at his trade, he was fined $10, which he paid.

Last night agents of the Department of Justice visited six places in the "White Light" district and served eleven warrants. None of the men was taken into custody, but they were ordered to appear before United States Commissioner Hitchcock in the Federal Building today.

The first place visited by the operatives was "Shine's" Café on Seventh Avenue, near the Pennsylvania Station. Three warrants were issued, one each to the cashier, bartender, and a waiter. The next place was Corcoran's saloon at Seventh Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, where the proprietor and a bartender were served. Daly's, in East Forty-second Street, followed, where one bartender and the cashier were ordered to appear, and the Café Arras, 54 East Forty-second Street, where two bartenders were given papers.

A bartender in the Hotel Hermitage and James Murray, manager of Gallagher's, at 1,480 Broadway, were included in the papers served. In all instances but one the warrants were made out to "John Doe."

PARIS, Aug. 26.—When the former King Ferdinand fled from Bulgaria he took refuge in one of his castles in Austria and it was by the formal order of Emperor Charles that he was compelled to leave his place of retreat, according to the Journal des Débats, which says it received its information from an authorized source.

Count Leopold von Berchtold, (former Austrian Foreign Minister and a close friend of Emperor Charles,) came personally to deliver the order, arriving at the castle at midnight, the newspaper continues. The abdicated monarch was sound asleep, but when the Count entered his bedroom, thrust his head from the bedclothes and then seated himself on the bed. His nightgown was of mauve and heavily embroidered. Ferdinand wore gold bracelets on his arm, and rings, with rubies and other precious stones, on every finger.

When the former King understood what was wanted, he cried, "It is infamy, treachery!" Affirming that he had always sacrificed himself for Austria, he sent for his son, Prince Cyrille, to testify to his noble sentiments. When the Prince arrived in the room Ferdinand cried: "Kiki, swear that your father was never a traitor!" The son, hardly awake, failed to grasp the situation and remained silent, whereupon his father burst out: "Get out! You re only an idiot! Kiki, you understand nothing. Send for my faithful General."

This General proved to be a Bulgarian who spoke only his native language. A triangular conversation followed, the former King translating Count von Berchtold's German into Bulgarian and the General's Bulgarian into German.

Despite Ferdinand's plea that "Now you have a witness that I never was a traitor," Count von Berchtold reiterated the order, making Ferdinand understand that his life was in danger if he remained. This argument convinced the former Monarch and within a few minutes an automobile carried off into the darkness Ferdinand, Kiki, the General and the millions Ferdinand had succeeded in bringing with him.

ALIENS ESCAPE IN ROWBOAT

Seven Men, Some to be Deported, Flee from Ellis Island.

Seven aliens on Ellis Island escaped from the detention ward late on Tuesday night and got across the harbor to New York in a rowboat after breaking their way out of the building. Some of the men had been ordered deported and others were awaiting further examination.

The guards on duty at the island, who have been accustomed to aliens escaping by swimming to the Jersey shore, did not attempt to stop the merry party in the rowboat as they thought they were workmen on their way home singing in the fullness of their hearts at their day being done.

Superintendent Baker said yesterday afternoon that one of the men had returned and given himself up because the New York streets were too crowded for him and food was too dear. The missing aliens are being looked for along the waterfront by detectives from Ellis Island.

RUMANIAN PREMIER FORCED TO DEFIANCE

HIS CASE LIKE ORLANDO'S

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The Rumanians continue to give the Supreme Council considerable trouble and to cause some of its members, especially Americans and British, a great deal of annoyance.

In diplomatic circles it is fully realized that the apparent politeness of the form of the Rumanian notes does not mitigate the almost impertinent spirit of opposition they reveal, which is confirmed by the continued high-handed behavior of the Rumanians at Budapest.

The key to the Rumanian attitude is the position of their Premier, Bratiano, and the key to Bratiano's position is its parallel with that of Sonnino and Orlando in May and June. As in the case of the Italian Ministers, Bratiano's foreign policy is the logical consequence of the opposition he is encountering at home. Though nominally a liberal he represents the "old gang" of privileged classes surrounding the King.

The political equilibrium in Rumania was disturbed by the addition to the Kingdom of millions of new subjects in Transylvania and elsewhere. Serbia, faced by the same problem, solved it by admitting them to a share—a preponderating share—in the Government. Bratiano, though he returned home from Paris somewhat discredited by what the Rumanians regarded as unsatisfactory terms of peace, refused to do so. His opponents, notably Take Jonesco, were quick to take advantage of this situation with the result that to maintain his ground Bratiano was forced into an aggressive foreign policy whose success was necessary if he was to remain in power.

Here comes the parallel with the Italians, as his opponents immediately began "bidding up" the external advantages that Bratiano held out in the hope that a public appetite would be aroused that Bratiano would be unable to gratify and that like Sonnino and Orlando he would fall as a result of the popular disappointment.

As the Transylvanian areas have been subjected to Hungarian Bolshevist propaganda urging the population to reject the yoke of the Rumanian boyars, Bratiano was able to convince the King that his throne never would be safe until a reactionary government was established at Budapest. At the same time he pleased the whole nation and for the time being blocked opposition by the successful expedition against the hated Magyars.

The trouble is that his opponents are still bidding him up to destruction, and thus to save himself he is compelled to pile aggression upon aggression, no matter what difficulties these may involve with the Paris Council. Even in the Banat of Temesvar the Rumanians are showing haughtiness toward Serbia which is gradually reducing the latter's doughty warriors to a state of frenzy. They are only restrained from "giving these Rumanians a lesson," as a prominent Serbian here told me yesterday, by fear of trouble with France.

Rightly or wrongly the French pass as Rumania's backers. A French military mission reorganized the Rumanian Army, and it is said that many French officers are still holding important positions there.

The fact is the keynote of French foreign policy in Central Europe to bolster Poland and Rumania as a barrier between Russia and Germany has brought the Quai d'Orsay, whose gospel it is, into conflict with the Supreme Conflict. Though Clemenceau and Pichon are in agreement with their colleagues, the French agents on the spot must support Rumania. Thus they are in an impasse from which the fall of Britano and the termination of his breakneck policy appear to offer the only possible exit.

FRIEDRICH HOLDS ON TO POWER IN HUNGARY

Socialists Refuse to Join Premier and Attempt to Form New Cabinet Fails.

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—According to information from Budapest attempts to constitute a new cabinet yesterday failed. Stephen Friedrich, Premier in the cabinet formed Aug. 16, is holding onto the power, and the Socialists refuse to form a cabinet with him.

It is reported that the clerical current, in which there are both bourgeois and working-class elements, seems to be coming to the top, and deputations of all classes are continually arriving and begging the Friedrich cabinet to remain.

Addressing a representative crowd of 5,000 in front of the ministry yesterday, Friedrich declared that Hungary must, before all, remain a Christian State, and Socialists and non-believers were not entitled to a larger field of action than their numbers warranted.

"Although we have sacrificed the symbol of Christian Hungary in the person of Archduke Joseph," he added, "we will yield no further."

A trans-Danubian delegation, Herr Friedrich said, had informed him that their territory would cut loose from Hungary if the present Government withdrew.

SILENT ON BARRING MAURER

State Department Gives No Reason for Recalling Passport.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Other than to announce that their passports had been recalled, State Department officials would give no explanation today of the removal of Chairman James A Maurer and Director A. Epstein of the Pennsylvania Old Age Pension Commission, from the steamer Lapland yesterday at New York. The men were taken from the steamer but customs agents just before the Lapland sailed for Europe.

Reports that the department's order recalling the passports had been issued at the request of the British Government were denied.

READING, Penn., Aug. 27.—James H. Maurer today advised his wife that he is returning home to await results of an inquiry into the reasons for his detention. Maurer is Chairman of the State Old Age Pension Commission, and was going to Europe ostensibly to study pension systems there. He is President of the Pennsylvanian Federation of Labor and a leader of the Socialist Party.

BANTON RESIGNS POST.

Assistant District Attorney Will Resume Private Practice.

Assistant District Attorney Joab H. Banton, who prosecuted and convicted sixty of the sixty-one election inspectors who made fraudulent returns of votes in the Republican primaries contest between William M Bennett and the late Mayor Mitchel in September, 1917, presented his resignation to District Attorney Swann yesterday.

Mr. Banton has been appointed counsel for large insurance interests at 95 William Street, with privilege of private practice. He had cleared his calendar of all but three cases, and notified the District Attorney he would return and prosecute them, if requested, without charge for his services. Mr. Banton wrote to the District Attorney:

"As a citizen I thank and commend you and your staff for the able, efficient, and conscientious efforts that you and they are making toward an effective enforcement of the law. You have done this without fear or favor to any one or any class of persons." Mr. Banton had been a First Assistant District Attorney since Jan. 1, 1918.

Boy Hurt Testing Home-Made Bomb

Gerald H. Murphy, Jr., 9, of Auburndale, L. I., is in the Flushing Hospital, in danger of losing his sight, as the result of the explosion of a homemade bomb the boy had constructed. The boy's mother said last night she thought he got his bomb-making ideas from something he had seen in moving pictures. He had placed powder in a tomato can and packed it down with rags. He fixed a fuse and lighted it. When it failed to explode at once he peered into the can. As he did so the explosion occurred and the burning powder was blown into the boy's face.

SLAYS PEDDLER TO EARN RIVAL'S $100

Pushcart Man Shot to Death in His Harlem Shop by Two Assailants.

PRISONER CONFESSES PLOT

Says Business Competitor Offered Money if He Would Wound Isaac Miller.

The promise of $100 by a business rival for shooting Isaac Miller, a vegetable pushcart peddler of 76 East 100th Street, led yesterday to Miller's murder in daylight, according to one of the assailants, who, the police say, confessed last night in the East 104th Street Station.

Robbery was first believed to have been the motive for the crime, but the prisoner, who said he was Joseph M. Mahon, 24, of 450 West Forty-first Street, a chauffeur, insisted that the crime had been committed to gain $100, which Miller's rival promised to deliver to himself and another gangster at Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue, upon assurance that Miller had been wounded. The police are looking for McMahon's companion, who, he said, was a former Sing Sing convict, and also for the peddler, who is said to have offered the money for the crime.

"The man with whom I went to Harlem to shoot Miller was an ex-convict, having been released from Sing Sing but a short while ago. We both needed money because of a long layoff in work, and he said to me yesterday morning: 'If you want to make $50 easy just come with me.'

"I went with him to Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue and met a man who said he was a peddler. That was just before noon time. He offered us $50 each if we would go up to Harlem and shoot Miller.

"My pal, who, by the way, I met only three days ago in a saloon in the Gas House district on the west side, got two 'Gats' and handed me one of them. Then we went up to Harlem.

"On the way up to Miller's place we arranged to shoot the peddler in the leg. We did not have to kill him, said the man who hired us, so we decided that a bullet in the leg would just about be the right thing to do.

"After waiting some time for an opportunity to get Miller, the chance came when the old peddler went down the stairs leading to his cellar. We followed him and I plugged him in the right shoulder.

"Miller toppled down, but got up and chased up the stairs after me, getting hold of my left leg. We struggled. I saw the crowds surging around and knew I was to be pinched. I wanted to get away, and seeing there was only one chance, plugged Miller again through the heart. He let go of me, and I ran."

Miller had $191 in bills and $150 in Liberty bonds in his pockets when he was killed. After the first shot he cried loudly for help.

McMahon ran into the street, through the crowd which had gathered at the cellar entrance, and started to run east along 100th Street. Patrolman Watson of the East 104th Street Station came up at this moment and started in pursuit. As the chase neared Lexington Avenue the policeman fired four times at the fugitive and the latter, pausing for a moment, answered with two shots from his revolver. Neither shot took effect.

The chase led down Lexington Avenue and across Ninety-eighth Street. There the policeman lost sight of the robber for a moment, but he was soon traced to a clothing store between Lexington and Third Avenues. When the policeman entered there was no one in sight, but at the appearance of the uniformed policeman the storekeeper said that a man had run into the store and asked to be hidden, saying that he had been in a fight. He had taken refuge in the dumbwaiter.

The police pulled out McMahon, and several persons identified him as one of the two men who had attacked Miller. A revolver, found on him, with four empty shells, was held in evidence.

Miller was 41 years old, married, and had three children.

Yesterday's murder was pointed to as indicating that gangsters in this city may be hired for a trifle to commit murder and that the practice of hiring them is resorted to to satisfy hatred arising from business rivalry. Following the murder of Herman Rosenthal by hired assassins came the Baff case, in which rival poultry dealers paid for the killing. Less than a month ago Joseph Cohen, a fur dealer, was killed at Coney Island by gangmen believed by the police to have been hired by business rivals.

ADMITS $45,000 THEFT.

Brokers' Messenger Boy to be Sentenced Sept. 4.

Harry J. Millham, 18 years old, of 127 West 127th Street, the broker's messenger who began a sightseeing trip on Aug. 12 with Liberty bonds valued at $45,000, taken from his employers, Simmons & Slade, at 5 Nassau Street, pleaded guilty yesterday in General Sessions to grand larceny. Judge Wadhams remanded him to the Tombs for sentence Sept. 4.

The charges against two youths arrested with Millham Sunday at Saranac Lake, where they were paying $100 a week for hotel accommodations with proceeds of some of the bonds, the police said, have not been disposed of. All the bonds were recovered except $4,000. These, it is charged, were cashed to pay the expenses of Millham and his companions in their jaunt through half a dozen States.

Assistant District Attorney Goldstein told the court that Millham last Winter admitted stealing Liberty bonds valued at $36,000 from a firm of Wall Street brokers and had gone free on a suspended sentence. Goldstein said he would ask Judge Malone to sentence Millham for the old offense, and Judge Wadhams will sentence him on the second offense. Commenting on the large number of bond robberies by messengers in the financial district, Mr. Goldstein said he thought it would be wise for bankers and brokers to employ mature and trustworthy men in such work. Inexperienced boys, he said, were too easily tempted.

BRITISH GENERAL VISITS DON FRONT

Holman Makes a Picturesque Journey Over the Voronesh Steppes to Fighting Line.

ANTI-RED ARMY IN RAGS

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TAGANROG, South Russia, Aug. 14.—After witnessing the capture of Poltava, General Holman and his party went on a visit to the section of the Don front which is now advancing.

It was a long, roundabout journey. We climbed slowly up the Rostov-Voronesh Railway, halted at Novo-Cherkask, where General Holman visited the commander of the Don Army, General Disorin; crossed the frontier of the Don territory and the Voronesh Government near Chertvoyo, and finally arrived at the small wayside station of Saguny, where we detrained and rode out on horseback eastward into the Voronesh steppes.

That was a wonderful four days' journey, crowded with impressions of every kind. Out there in the wilds it seemed as though we had plunged into the very heart of this world struggle that Russians are now carrying on for civilization.

We rode over beautiful downs and along broad, winding valleys with white chalk bluffs, and dim blue forests on the shimmering horizon, and fields of oats and millet and barley which the peasants were reaping with scythes, and such golden expanses of sunflower as have probably never been seen before.

We passed through long villages adorned and beautified with two and sometimes three churches, often of curious architecture. We saw peasants in the fields along the roads and talked with them in villages—slow-moving little Russian peasants completely dazed by the revolution and war that had invaded their remote and obscure existence—and all along the brown, broad macadamized roads we saw the traffic of war, Cossacks of the Don army riding or marching to the front, and wounded coming from the front lying on straw in joulting peasant cars.

Whole Journey Like a Dream.

The whole journey was like a strange dream, at once exhilarating and heartbreaking, but there one felt as never before the extraordinary complexity of this gallant effort to translate into terms of human happiness the great spaces and beauty and abundance of Russia.

On the evening of the first day we crossed the Upper Don and came to the district town of Pavlovsk, looking, at a distance, with its spires and domes, like some fairy city set as a goal for wanderers high up against the sky. This quiet town of gardens and broad streets had been heavily bombarded by the Bolsheviki from a monastery on the other side of the river, and several buildings had been completely destroyed. Most of the educated class had had to flee from Bolshevist rapine and murder and had just begun to return.

Next day we rode northward and halted in the large, populous village of Losevo, whose church had been slightly damaged by shellfire and whose population was still very uncertain whether the Bolsheviki might not return.

Then we crossed the broad swampy bed of Bityug, a tributary of the Don, and mounting on the other side to a high plateau came in the evening to a small village where divisional headquarters are situated. The priest's cottage was the best in the village. There General Holman was installed and there we dined with the divisional commander and his staff.

The commander was a brave, simple Cossack General, roughly dressed in a soldier's tunic, with the signs of his rank traced in pencil on the shoulder straps. He had driven the Bolsheviki fifteen miles north at one blow, and had just pushed forward his staff across the river. Two days previously the house in which we were had been vacated by the Bolshevist staff.

Over dinner the General indulged in reminiscences. He had fought through the German war, had been wounded near to death, and when, after the war, he returned to his home on the Don he thought, "Now I have experienced everything."

Then came the Bolsheviki. He was arrested twice and the second time was on the point of being shot when the entry of the Germans saved him, and then he thought:

"Clearly I have not yet had all the experience allotted me. And what of these Germans? For four years they were my enemies. It cannot now be that they are my friends. Even though they saved my life, they are worse enemies than ever, for all this evil through which we are pow passing comes from them."

After dinner the priest and his wife came in and told of the Bolshevist régime in the village. He personally was in his native village and the peasants protected him. He was allowed to hold service, but not to preach. The Bolsheviki introduced civil christening, civil marriage and civil burial; but the peasants always insisted on going through the religious ceremony afterwards in the church. The peasants detested the commune which the Bolsheviki tried to force on them and groaned under the arbitrary requisitions.

We talked to the peasants later. They were in profound melancholy.

"Russia," they repeated, "has perished. No one will restore order. If only the foreign powers would come and bring order. Liberty has brought us to slavery."

On the other hand, there were evidences of Bolshevist propaganda. One peasant said: "The Cossacks are going to bring back serfdom."

In drizzling rain we went out into the night. The commander went off to the front to supervise the operations. Two of us went to a peasant's cottage, where, by the light of an ikon lamp, we lay down to rest.

"Keep your horses near you," an officer said. "This is guerrilla warfare and sometimes the front jumps backward and forward very suddenly."

Awakened for Night Battle.

At 4 o'clock in the morning a peasant woke us.

"Time to get up. There's a big battle going on," he said.

We heard a fairly lively din of field gun, machine gun, and rifle fire. Our host's daughter rushed in:

"Go back, go back," she said to us. "The Bolsheviki are advancing."

She was quite wrong, as it happened, but going out into the village we found the peasants up and listening with strained faces.

"Good morning, father," I said to a priest; "fine morning."

"Yes, we are still alive," he said solemnly, and though it was Sunday morning he refused to ring the bell for services because of the battle.

General Holman insisted on seeing with his own eyes the needs of this particular division, so after breakfast we rode out to the front lines, five miles off. In the meantime the battle had ceased and all was tranquil.

We found regimental headquarters living in booths of green branches close to the trenches, the officers roughly dressed and many of the soldiers in rags and bootless, without overcoats to protect them from the cold and rain. One soldier we saw had the St. George's Cross but no boots. Yet this badly clothed and badly equipped division was stubbornly pushing against a numerically superior Bolshevist force and steadily beating it. This was the mere drudgery of civil war without any of its heroics.

We walked to the top of a slope to see the positions. A deep valley lay between us and the Bolsheviki. On the crown of the bluff opposite stood a village inhabited by German colonists, and defending it was a line of Bolshevist trenches. Where we saw figures moving our battery fired a shot or two, otherwise all was still.

Spires indicated the sites of neighboring villages. To the west of us was the valley of the Don and to the east the valley of the Bityug and Don. Troops were pushing northward to a transverse railway running eastward from Libki. General Holman made careful note of all the requirements of this gallant little force and his visit seemed deeply to impress the officers and men.

Returning along the edge of a wood we stopped and my horse began munching a pile of green stuff. This was a field dressing station which had a few British dressings but little else.

On the return journey we halted at Losevo Village, on the other side of the Bityug. Here the unprecedented sight of a British General and his party caused a sensation, and the peasants who had been reduced by Bolshevism to a complete dearth of goods and had to make their own rough boots and their own substitute for soap, timidly asked whether the British could send goods. They were amazed to hear that the big European war was over, and that we had made peace with Germany. They thought this was the same old war, and in a sense they were right.

A volunteer army propagandist had just arrived from Pavlovsk and a large meeting had gathered in the village square. A member of our party made a speech, explaining the British aims in helping Denikin. The older peasants bowed low and took off their hats and said "Thank you," but there were some glum faces in the background.

That evening at Pavlovsk we formed part of a crowded audience at a theatrical performance, which was certainly a sign of returning animation, and next evening after another long ride and some pleasant adventures we reached our train. Several peasants seeing our cavalcade asked, to the great delight of our merry Cossack escort, whether General Holman was not there.

Conclusions From the Trip.

Three things stand out clearly as the result of this journey:

First, any British sympathy or aid is appreciated with an intensity and confidence that are almost embarrassing.

Secondly, medical aid is urgently required at the front, both for the army and civil population. The Russian medical staff is doing bravely, but this staff is lamentably insufficient. We saw a number of hospitals where the wounded and sick had no linen, no change of clothes, no medical comforts, where there was a great lack of instruments and medicaments.

Thirdly, the chief thing necessary to establish confidence in the bewildered civil population is to supply manufactured goods of which there is a total lack. The co-operative stores I visited are simply crying out for British goods. Further, at every turn one is reminded that this great struggle is a continuation, a subtle development of the European war, and for our own security we must assist with all possible energy.

At the railway station on the way south we met the Don Ataman, General Bogdiovsky, a most attractive personality. He had just completed a tour of the Don districts recently liberated from the Bolsheviki, and said that everywhere he had found loathing of Bolshevism and keen appreciation of the British.

PSKOV IS RETAKEN BY THE BOLSHEVIKI

Moscow Soviet Also Announces Further Successes Against Denikin in the South.

MARCHING ON TSARITSIN

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Pskov, southwest of Petrograd, has been recaptured by Bolshevist forces, according to an official statement issued at Moscow.

The Bolsheviki also claim successes on the Volga, in General Denikin's territory. They confirm the reported capture of Kamishin, on the Volga, 120 miles southwest of Saratov, by their forces, which are declared to be advancing toward Tsaritsin, 100 miles further south on the Volga.

In the district to the northeast of Kamishin the Bolshevist statement reports the reoccupation by Soviet forces of the towns of Borissogliebsk and Povorino.

Another Bolshevist communication, received by wireless, says that the Cossacks of General Mamantoff succeeded in breaking through the Red Army, whose heavy masses closed behind them, cutting off their communication with the anti-Bolshevist forces.

RED MANIFESTO TO CHINESE.

LONDON, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—The Russian Soviet apparently is making a bid for the support of the Chinese, to whom a manifesto has been sent. Attention is first called to the Soviet campaign in Siberia, and the Chinese peoples are then promised liberation "from foreign bayonets and from the yoke of foreign gold."

"The People's Commissaries address fraternal words to all the peoples of China on the day when the Soviet troops, having crushed the counter-revolutionary despot Kolchak, victoriously enter Siberia.

"Soviet Russia's Red Army, after two years of struggle and incredible strain, is marching onward to the east across the Urals. Not in order to enforce their will on other nationals, not to enslave them nor conquer them—we are bringing freedom to the people, liberation from foreign bayonets and from the yoke of foreign gold, which is throttling the enslaved peoples of the East, particularly the great Chinese nation.

"We are bringing help not only to our own working masses, but to the Chinese."

JUDENICH ISSUES BILLS.

350,000,000 Rubles Raised This Way by Northwest Government.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 27.—A dispatch from Helsingfors says the Northwestern Russian Government is printing 350,000,000 rubles in new banknotes for the replacement of its interim notes. The notes will bear the signature of General Judenich, head of the new Government in Helsingfors, and the circulation throughout Russian territory will be compulsory.

Three months after Petrograd is taken from the Bolsheviki the notes are to be redeemable against State bonds. The new issue is to be guaranteed by Russia's entire assets. Forty rubles are to be considered equal in value to a pound sterling.

PERSHING WELCOME HERE TO LAST 3 DAYS

Mayor's Committee to Submit Program by Cable for the General's Approval.

PLAN FOUR-HOUR PARADE

Head of Army in France Expected to Arrive on the Morning of Sept. 8.

Preliminary arrangements for New York City's official welcome to General Pershing upon his arrival here were made yesterday at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mayor's Committee on Receptions to Distinguished Guests.

It is planned to have the homecoming welcome continue from the hour of General Pershing's arrival on board the Leviathan on Monday, Sept. 8, until he departs for Washington after a parade in his honor to be held in Fifth Avenue on Wednesday, Sept. 10.

Not only will the First Division, A. E. F., take part in the parade, but all other branches of the American armed forces.

According to views expressed by Major Gen. McManus, Chief of the Port of Embarkation, the parade and review will occupy not less than four hours. It is expected that General Pershing will ride at the head of the column with the First Division in full war panoply and with field kitchens, ambulances, and artillery in line. There will be three regiments of artillery, 2,000 vehicles of war, 6,000 ambulances, and contingents of all arms of the service.

The official reviewing stand will be in front of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, at Eighty-sixth Street, and it is expected that members of President Wilson's Cabinet will be present. State and city officials, as well as representatives of foreign Governments, will have places in the stand.

It is expected that the Leviathan, with General Pershing and his staff and approximately 10,000 men of the 1st Division, will arrive at Sandy Hook at 7 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 8. A Flotilla of steamboats and Government vessels, as well as several squadrons of airplanes, will be on hand to greet the homecomers. The Leviathan will be escorted to the embarkation piers at Hoboken, where she will be berthed at about 9 o'clock, and if possible General Pershing will be taken from that point aboard the steamboat "Patrol" by the Mayor's Committee and landed at the Battery. Immediately following his arrival it is planned to have the General go to the Waldorf-Astoria, and then make an official visit to the Mayor at City Hall.

The program for the following day is subject to the approval of Secretary of War Baker. The public demonstration and review will begin on the morning of the 10th, although a considerable portion of the fighting forces may come to the city the preceding evening. It is planned to have the parade pass down Fifth Avenue from 110th Street to the Arch of Victory at Madison Square, where a portion of the artillery may be diverted while the marching men continue down the avenue to Washington Square before being disbanded. The parade is scheduled to begin at 10 A. M.

In the early evening of the 10th there will be a great public concert under the direction of City Chamberlain Berolzheimer in Central Park. It will be given by the New York Symphony Orchestra of which Walter Damrosch is director. The concern will include patriotic and operatic selections by well known artists. Following the concert at which General Pershing will be the guest of honor, there will be an official banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria which will be attended by the reviewing officials of the parade and by the members of the Mayor's Committee. Rodman Wanamaker, Chairman of the committee will preside.

There was some comment yesterday on the fact that in the Mayor's Committee of Welcome no women were included. Some of the women who have been active in war work in France were quoted as regretting this omission in view of the excellent work done by New York women at home and abroad.

The Mayor's Secretary has extended invitations to the President, Secretary Baker and other members of the Cabinet, and to Governor Smith and the commanding officers of the army and navy to attend the official exercises. The committee arranged to communicate by cable with General Pershing and ask his approval of the program.

HELD ON EXTORTION CHARGE

On a charge of extortion made by Mrs. Bessie A. C. Hansmann of Bethel, Me., Magistrate Curran in the Tombs Court yesterday held Preston L. Ford in bail of $10,000 pending action by the Grand Jury. Mrs. Hansmann told the court she had received a letter signed "P. L. Fant," threatening the kidnapping of her son Carl, 5 years old, and demanding payment of $1,000 for the protection of the boy. She testified that she had placed ten $100 bills in an envelope and had addressed it to "P. L. Fant," in care of the general delivery window of the City Hall Post Office.

No one called for the "Fant" letter, but when Ford asked for mail at the window he was arrested by Detective Murphy of the Beach Street Station. Murphy said he had found an envelope in Ford's room at 207 East Forty-fourth Street addressed to "P. L. Fant" and bearing an address in Cincinnati. A sailor's uniform was also found in the room. Nelson Ruttenberg, attorney for Ford, said that Ford did not know the person who had left the discarded uniform, and that the letter had been left in the place by a sailor.

Mrs. Hansmann told the police that she had known Ford and had loaned money to him. Ford, who is a salesman, did not testify. It is said that Carl Hansmann is the heir to $100,000 from the estate of his father.

PUBLISHER TOLD TO MOVE.

Justice Lauer Upholds Agent Who Ordered Radicals to Vacate.

Municipal Justice Edgar J. Lauer, in the Third District Court, yesterday upheld the action of Thomas Ford, agent of the house at 133 East Fifteenth Street, who served the lessees, Yunfohmsky and Peter Beanski, notice to move, despite the fact that they held a lease on the place made out to run until October, 1921.

The agent complained that the lessees conducted a Russian radical newspaper, The Workingman and Peasant, at that address and that in a raid made there on Aug. 14 much radical and objectionable propaganda literature was found.

The Court upheld the contention of the agent that further occupancy of the premises by the lessees was undesirable and directed that Yunfohmsky and Beanski vacate by 9 o'clock next Tuesday morning.

POLICE SIGNS ASK MORE PAY

"Give the Cop More Pay" posters about six inches square appeared yesterday in store windows and on the windshields of motor vehicles in the downtown sections of the city.

Patrolmen in uniform solicited the placing of such posters in the windows of the storekeepers and on the motor vehicles.

Patrolmen stated that immediately upon the receipt of the news at Police Headquarters many "shoofflies" were put to work to watch patrolmen and particularly traffic patrolmen with orders to report them to the office of Chief Inspector John Daly.

CAPITOL THEATRE TO OPEN.

Gen. du Pont and F. H. Hitchcock Directors of New Big Movie House.

Officers and Directors of the Capitol Theatre enterprise were made public yesterday, and it is now planned to open this theatre, said to be the largest motion picture house in the world, in the course of the next few weeks. The new house is on Broadway at Fifty-first Street, and has a seating capacity of 5,300.

It is owned and will be operated by the Moredall Realty Corporation, of which Messmore Kendall, lawyer and financier, is President. Edward J. Bowes, Vice President of the company and managing director of the theatre, is the only officer of the company who has been previously identified with the theatre. He was for several years associated with the Selwyns.

The Directors, in addition to Messrs. Kendall and Bowes, are William Braden, copper operator; George Armsby of the California Packing Corporation; Robert W. Chambers, the writer; General T. Coleman du Pont, George H. Doran, the publisher, and Frank H. Hitchcock, former Postmaster General.

CHICKEN ENDS FOOD STRIKE

Lured from their hunger strike by the visible evidence of better food in the shape of a chicken dinner last night, and coffee, toast, cereals, orange juice, and poached eggs this morning for breakfast, the ninety-five nurses in the Kings County Hospital decided to call off the war temporarily and return to work. Should the food become poor again they say they will strike again. They hoot the idea credited to Dr. Mortimer D. Jones, Superintendent, of seeking substitute workers from the Red Cross.

"In the first place," said one of the nurses, "we resent the remark that we ever 'quit' the patients. We never did that, and at all times we gave them the same treatment we have always given.

"We refused to eat last night and went to the restaurants half a mile away for supper. When we returned we heard that the dietitian had served chicken for supper. Think of that, chicken, and on a Tuesday. I bet it is the first time in the history of the place that chicken was ever served on that day. We always get beans and hash on Tuesdays.

"This morning we decided to try our luck again and sat in to breakfast. There on the table, nicely spread, were dainty glasses of orange juice. Cereals, bacon and eggs, and coffee. That looked good, and the strike was over for a time; but we are only waiting. We have other grievances, but we prefer not to air them at this time. If the food is again bad we will eat outside and bill the hospital."

MELLON VILLA ROBBED.

Robbers Scaled Pergola and Took Costly Jewelry at Southampton.

Villa Maria, the handsome Summer home of Mrs. E. P. Mellon at Southampton, L. I., was robbed of costly jewelry while Mrs. Mellon was a guest at Mrs. H. H. Rogers's big garden fête last Friday night. The gems were on a tray on Mrs. Mellon's dresser when she left the house at about 8 o'clock in the evening, and her maid and the other servants did not visit that part of the house until midnight, when the family returned.

A high wall surrounds the grounds, which are at the extreme western end of the village, among the sand dunes. The robbers scaled this wall, it is believed, climbed up on a pergola, and crawled through a second-story window. There was no watchman on the place.

On the following night Mrs. George C. Clark, whose Summer home is on Gin Lane, was awakened by some one entering her room. She switched on the electric light and a strange man leaped from her window and escaped.

Two years ago there was a long series of robberies among the wealthy Southampton Summer colony.

PREPARE FOR GAS FAMINE.

Sheepshead Bungalow Colonists Get Ready for Ordeal.

Bungalow dwellers at Sheepshead Bay were startled yesterday by a report that their gas supply was to be cut off this Saturday while a larger main is put in. They began purchasing canned goods, combing the beach for firewood and setting up temporary and borrowed stoves in preparation for the gas famine.

Miss M. F. Dillon, manager of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company at Coney Island, said she hoped the work would be completed in two or three days. About 2,000 bungalow dwellers are affected. The change will be made as a result of complaints by bungalow owners and renters that the gas main supplying them was too small for efficient service.

HONORS DAVISON FOR HIS WAR WORK

IS EULOGIZED BY BAKER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Secretary of War Baker, in behalf of President Wilson, today presented to Henry P. Davison of New York a Distinguished Service Medal for his work in behalf of the Government and the American Red Cross during the war. Mr. Baker, after saying that it would be useless to explain the significance of the medal or to enlarge on the reasons for its award in Mr. Davison's particular case, read the citation of Mr. Davison as follows:

"Mr. Henry P. Davison, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service, as Chairman of the War Council, American Red Cross. He assumed general direction of the war measures of that society and by the exercise of rare tact and consummate powers of construction and direction brought it to a perfection of organization which made it possible to extend relief promptly and bountifully to our armies and to those of the allied nations. His dynamic qualities as a financier and his forceful personality assured to the soldier in the field and to the inhabitants of the devastated countries of Europe systematized measures of relief beyond the limits of specific statement."

Secretary Baker said that as the world reads this citation it might seem to be a generous recognition of the services of Mr. Davison and the great society of which the latter was President, but that it was nevertheless "a very restrained estimate of a very great and noble service."

"The society which Mr. Davison controlled," said Mr. Baker, "has left the touch of its relieving hand on every battlefield and in every hospital, and in the homes of the poor and the oppressed throughout the world. Without that society I do not know whether the world would have been able to bear the horrors and devastation of this fearful war. Perhaps, now that the war is technically over and fighting has ceased, society can look with confidence upon the great reservoir of good-will which has generated by the healing influence and built up among men by the presence of this non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-national society. It had as the basis of its work and activity that broader emotion which makes all mankind kin and cuts across all the sectionalism and restricting limitations of race and creed and followed only the precepts of mercy.

"It is true that the world is at present in sad need of healing influences, and sober men everywhere, I think, will look with most hopefulness for those healing influences in the capacities for co-operation which men have developed. The fact is that the best of our culture and civilization is that which comes from co-operative effort and therefore the spirit which makes that co-operation possible is the basis upon which our future building must be made. What the Red Cross has done and is doing and is to do will play an incalculably important part in that historic reconstruction, for it has shown and taught a spirit of co-operation on a basis as broad as humanity and as fine as our best emotions. Those of us who were more or less intimate with him know that Mr. Davison is responsible in a very peculiar and personal way for the work the Red Cross did. The American Army, for whom the medal was primarily designed, will feel that those of its members who wear the medal are honored by its being worn by Mr. Davison, whose services with the Red Cross have been so distinguished."

Disease Has Its Agents In Your Office

Yes, the agents of many contagious diseases lurk in your establishment—in toilet-rooms, in cuspidors, on your floors, window-sills—everywhere.

These agents are there to spread disease. And they attend strictly to business.

Nothing could be more persistent in its work than the deadly disease germ—and its persistency often succeeds. That's why we have grippe, diphtheria, typhoid, influenza, or any contagious disease.

But fortunately you can employ an agent to work harder to protect health than germs do to spread disease.

Lysol Disinfectant

No germ life can exist where the smallest indication of Lysol Disinfectant is present.

Kills disease germs at the moment of application, or prevents their creation.

Use Lysol Disinfectant at home and in the office. A few drops sprinkled wherever germs might lurk or be created is ample precaution against serious illness.

Lysol Toilet Soap
25c a Cake

Contains the necessary proportion of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to protect the skin from germ infection. It is refreshingly soothing and healing and helpful for improving the skin. Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it, ask him to order it for you.

Lysol Shaving Cream
In Tubes

Contains the necessary proportion of the antiseptic ingredients of Lysol Disinfectant to kill germs on razor and shaving-brush (where germs abound) and to guard the tiny cuts from infection, and give an antiseptic shave. If your dealer hasn't it, ask him to order a supply for you.

BY THE MAKERS OF LE PAGE'S GLUE

Of course, if the business is a "free and easy" one, any old ink will do. But if it's a business that's "right all through" only an absolutely safe and efficient ink measures up to the requirements.

SIGNET
THE PERMANENT INK

It is only a matter of ordering Signet from your dealer to have the ink that is safe. It is safe because it positively will not fade. And, what is more—Signet really likes its work. You know it! Signet feels good to your hand as soon as you touch your pen to paper.

Very few leading dealers today who do not carry Signet Ink in all sizes. When you order for the office, order a bottle for the home. The larger sizes are the most economical.

LePage's Glue has always been the standard glue. LePage's White Paste and LePage's Mucilage are its twin brothers. Signet is of the same reputable family.

"PAGLIACCI" AT STADIUM.

"Pagliacci" will be sung at the Stadium tomorrow night in concert form, for the first time since the death of the composer, Leoncavallo, in Italy. In the cast will be Anna Fitziu, Zanco de Primo, Philip Benyan and Earle Tuckerman. The Metropolitan chorus will assist, and William Tyroler will conduct. Before the operatic numbers Rene Pollain, a French musician recently arrived here, will lead Mr. Volpe's orchestra in Cesar Franck's symphony and works of Lalo, Debussy and Berlioz.

Leoncavallo's work will be sung in its operatic dress at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, on Saturday evening of this week, in a double bill with Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana." In the last named will appear Roda Marzio, Lavinia Pugliolo, G. Puliti and A. Boscacci, while the singers in "Pagliacci" will be Eva Leoni, Alfredo Salmaggi, Angelo Antola, and G. Interrante. The production will be under the musical direction of Carlo Peroni, and under the auspices of the Italian Lyric Federation.

Fire In Locomotive Cab Put Out.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Aug. 27.—Fire broke out in the engineer's cab of a locomotive on the Greenwood Lake branch of the Erie Railroad at the Mountain Avenue station today. The train was bound for Greenwood Lake when the fire was discovered. A call was sent in to the Montclair Fire Department and a stream from the chemical tank extinguished the blaze, which is believed to have started from a spark from the firebox of the locomotive. The engineer was not hurt.

Gold Rush On to Copper Lake.

THE PAS, Man., Aug. 27.—A sensational rush to the Copper Lake district, where gold finds have been reported, is taking place from here. Every prospector living in The Pas has departed. Quartz and nuggets of gold were found close to the surface, according to reports to Government Commissioners.

Rush of Army Recruits in Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—There was a rush of applicants for service overseas at Army Recruiting Headquarters today as a result of the announcement that soldiers would be taken on for one year. Forty-six men, all veterans, were accepted for duty with the American Expeditionary Forces.

RAILWAY RATES AND WAGES.

If railway wages should not be increased because they increase the cost of production and of living, it follows that, by equality of argument, railway rates also should not be increased. The point was plain to the President, and he explicitly said that railway wage increases under present conditions should be covered by "appropriations "from the public Treasury, * * * "for it is neither wise nor feasible to "take care of increases in the wages "of railway employés at this time by "increases of rates." Hitherto increases of rates had been looked to as the sole salvation of the railways, so that the President raises a new situation by classing rates and wages together. Here is another hardship for the railways, since their rates are halted in rising when near the minimum, wages being at the absolute maximum. It would be a gloomy outlook for the Treasury if there were to be charged against it railway deficits at the present rate for an indefinite future. Such is not the President's intention, for he limits his proposals to the interval before conditions become normal.

Here there seems to be an implication of much significance from which it will be difficult for the beneficiaries of the wage increases to escape. They are demanding that their wages shall be raised until they shall command the same quantities of goods and satisfactions as they enjoyed before the war. What could be more fair than to concede the demand, on condition that the increased wages shall command equal efficiency and results in operation? When the workers shall serve the railways as well as the railways serve the public there will be little left of the railway problem, and the Treasury will be relieved from a burden which otherwise would be of threatening proportions.

It is notorious that the deficiency of the railways is mostly in wage costs, although there are other large cost increases in materials, cost of capital and otherwise. But it is not so well appreciated that the railway wage increases are burdensome both by increases in totals and by decreases in services. There is nothing singular about that. It has long been remarked of other wage increases that they were followed by decrease in production. At the moment it is being remarked that the wage increases in the steel trade have been accompanied by a fall in production per worker per year from 62 tons to 52. Producers and consumers are both exploited by labor under such conditions. The same is true of the railway industry. Wages have been increased beyond the effect in stimulating effort, and it costs more to accommodate shippers and passengers. The broadest statement of the fact is that 100,000 more workers are producing less transportation, of lower standard, and are giving less satisfaction than when the wage scales were lower. Within the past two years the railway roster has increased more than 6 per cent., and the wage bill has increased more than ten times as much as the number of workers. But the operating income has fallen a half billion, and that is proportioned to the services rendered, for railways are paid for piecework, by the ton and mile.

That suggests a comparison between the efficiency of the railways and their workers, between capital and labor if it be desired so to put it. Piecework payment is objected to by muscle workers because it is so exhausting. It has been stimulating only to railway capital. Railways have steadily increased their investment at the service of the public and had steadily reduced their rates per piece of work done, until the combination of Government operation and labor demands reversed the falling tendency of rates. It is true that the fall was not voluntary, being accelerated by a regulatory system designed to be punitive for faults long since expiated. But that leaves unshaken the fact that the railways over a long term of years constantly worked harder and cheaper, until they have become so reduced by anaemia that they can no longer continue their efforts, and the President finds it necessary to sustain them from tax moneys. The labor cost of moving a ton a mile has doubled while the capital cost has been halved. That is what it means to pay railway workers more than Governors of States, and to pass eight-hour laws in the name of humanity and social welfare.

When the community perceives that it is necessary either that labor should earn its wages or else that the community must make up the deficiency or go without, the worst will have been passed. Then it will only remain to impress that conviction upon organized labor as a class apart from the community. The President's letter opens a larger subject than railway wage payments or profits, and the result is not one to be foreclosed by votes either at the polls or by labor unions. Economic discussions are best conducted dispassionately, even appealingly in the President's manner, but within the velvet glove there should be a firm hand.

FIFTEEN DOLLARS A WEEK.

Wanted—One hundred young women to whom life is not altogether a matter of dollars and cents, to take a position in New Hampshire's rural schools at, say, $15 a week.—Manchester Union.

It seems that New Hampshire "has "set about building a first-rate edu-"cational system," under which school teachers will be splendidly pampered, as usual. The young women to whom this appeal is made can get $30 a week all the year in a shoe factory or a cloth factory, but the century of teachers called for must love to teach, must feel that "their lives are counting for a good deal more than" if they were weaving cloth or making shoes. Finally, our Manchester friend tries to cheer them with the hope that the pay of teachers will be made adequate after a fashion, some time.

Too flattering a hope, perhaps. Teaching is so supremely momentous to the State that the molding of each generation is paid for at rates a scrubwoman would despise. Still, the hundred young women asked for will be found. There are yet in the country plenty of persons who love to work. If the ill-paid school teachers can but communicate that fading passion to their scholars, the United States will be all right in secula.

DO THEY KNOW WHAT THEY ARE DOING?

Do these rabid men at Washington ever pause even for one instant to inquire what is the controversy in which they are engaged? In the lead are the Republican members, eight or nine of them, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which ex-President TAFT declared was packed against the League of Nations. It is charged that they are prompted chiefly by motives of partisanship—the desire to destroy WOODROW WILSON politically. The fact that some of them, or most of them, are aspirants for the Republican nomination next year lends appreciable confirmation to this charge.

Upon one side, then, we have, as the assaulting body, a small number of Republicans, very active in politics. Whom and what are they attacking? The immediate object of the assault is the Peace Treaty, embodying the League covenant. In the direct line of their assault also stands the President of the United States. This is far indeed from being a complete picture of a battlefield. In attacking the Peace Treaty these men are seeking to destroy the work of the chief statesmen of the civilized world, the product of months of their toil and deliberation, the world's bulwark against war, the safeguard of its peace. They are doing their utmost to destroy peace, again to deliver the world over to war, and perhaps war not very remote. In tearing to tatters the constitution of the proposed League they are destroying the actual league of nations formed during the war. Their Shantung amendment expels either the United States or Japan from the close association of Powers banded together to make Germany obey the world's laws. It is pretty certain that Japan will not go out, for Great Britain and France will respect their engagements; the United States will go, will remain outside without friends. Can it be seriously contended that by destroying the association of Powers this country would not deserve to lose its friends?

By our plenipotentiaries, by the Chief Executive himself, who is the negotiating power, we have come to agreement with other nations in respect to the Treaty. This small body of Senators repudiates the work and the signatures of the plenipotentiaries, it maims and transforms the whole meaning of the Treaty by amendments—some fifty of them in a day, we might say in a bunch. If such things can be, what respect and consideration will be shown to plenipotentiaries of the United States in future serious negotiations? All the Powers are put on notice that our international engagements are to be held always subject to the strifes of our party politics.

The new organization of the world for peace, law, and justice will proceed without our help. Because certain Republican Senators insist the way must be made clear for the election as President of one of themselves or one of their party we withdraw from the worldwide organized peace movement. To insure the success of a party we are willing to shatter the new safeguard of peace, again to deliver the world over to war; at least we declare that we do not care whether peace is preserved and war abolished, we are concerned only with party plans and triumphs. That is what it means, that is what the adoption by the Senate of the committee's amendments would mean. The battlefield is infinitely broader, the forces engaged are vastly more numerous, the issues involved are very much more momentous than the members of the Foreign Relations Committee have imagined.

COLD STORAGE AND PROFITEERS.

It isn't necessary for the packers and canners to make out a case for the cold storage of food products. The packers and canners could not be spared, but their business should be regulated; also, the consumers must be protected against the speculative wiles of their benefactors, who protest too much that economic service is their only concern. The welfare of the people, physical and fiscal, requires legislation like that proposed by Representative HENDERSON of New Jersey. They will be the healthier for it, and they will have more money in their pockets.

The Henderson bill would limit the time within which foodstuffs could be held in cold storage to ten months, all articles to be tagged as of the date of admission. It would lie within the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture to allow certain products to be held longer than ten months. Failure to attach the date required or to file an invoice when containers are used would be punishable with a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for a year, or both. All persons operating storage plants are to transmit quarterly reports to the Secretary of Agriculture, and his agents may inspect warehouses. A very important section provides that courts may order the sale or destruction of perishable foods; and the Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct investigations to ascertain supply, consumption, distribution, transportation, costs and prices. The Henderson bill is based upon an admirable New Jersey statute.

To enlighten and guide the House Agricultural Committee, which has charge of the bill, Dr. HARVEY W. WILEY, author of the Federal pure food laws, appeared to testify on Tuesday. He laid down the wholesome principle that food obtainable from producers every month in the year should not be put in cold storage—that is to say, in warehouses to be kept in stock and distributed to suit the pleasure of the owner. Veal and some kinds of fish and game should never be hoarded, he said. Beef is better for keeping, providing the period be limited to four or five months. Eggs and butter might be "cold stored" for ten months, but Dr. WILEY advised that the housewife preserve fresh eggs by the waterglass method. If this were done generally, the packers would not find it to their advantage to "hold out" eggs. Dr. WILEY may not be infallible as an authority on pure foods or on cold storage, but dissenters will have to prove to the committee that they are wiser than he is.

IN WHOSE INTEREST?

It is significant that the "higher leaders" of the railroad shop unions "are represented as believing that public opinion would not be with" the 500,000 railway shopmen who are now to vote for a second time on the question of a strike. There is no doubt that public opinion is against a strike, as it is against the Plumb Plan. Before voting in favor of a strike that would affect not only themselves but all railroad men, would interrupt and dislocate transportation and industry, and array against it the majority of the people and therefore be destined to failure, if undertaken, the railway shopmen should ponder seriously not only the certain effects but the real determining causes of the proposed strike. Whom would it serve? The country stands with Mr. WILSON in holding that these continual demands for higher wages, made fruitless as soon as granted by the consequent rise in the cost of living, must stop. The railroad men themselves would be injured, the United States would be injured, by the strike. Are there behind it, unknown to the sincere and eager spirits, mostly young men, who favor this extreme measure, a project to choke American production, those sinister forces of Bolshevist and German propaganda that are busily at work in many ways in this country and in many other countries?

In spite of whining and pretended fears, Germany expects to get to work, to work harder and for longer hours than its rivals, to beat them economically. All the malingerings and strikes of the British miners, the pernicious activity of the "Triple Alliance," the plans for the nationalization of industries, the attempts at "direct action," the prattle of "Bolshevism without bloodshed" in Great Britain, are meat and drink for her enemies across the North Sea. The Germans used to sneer at the British love of sport, the frequent holidays and week-ends. Now they see great associations of workmen lowering their output steadily as their wages go up, the policy of "ca' canny" too flourishing in many industries, the price of coal up, the quantity down. The primary and master industry of Great Britain shattered or weakened, steel and iron made too high for export, the great foreign trade sadly shrunken—that is the picture which British Labor presents to German eyes.

Is the United States likewise to contribute in this way to the happiness and prosperity of Germany? In Russia she hopes to gain from the utter disorganization produced by Bolshevism much more than her old mastery of Russian trade and industry. In all Eastern Europe she looks for German economic control. If the United States can be checked and hampered by grave labor disturbances, by increased costs of production, by the introduction of even a diluted Sovietism into the trade unions, by the substitution of class consciousness for national consciousness, by the spread of that uncompromising, selfish, particular interest, reckless of the general, that has been fomented so assiduously and mischievously in Great Britain, Germany would gain an even more notable economic victory.

Is it not more than a little curious that certain British labor leaders, tainted with Bolshevism, advocates of nationalization and a radical labor policy that would be destructive, if carried out, to British trade and industry, are soon to come here? Who has invited them? Who is to pay their bills? The Plumb Plan is evidently of exotic origin or suggestion. These threats of a general strike are borrowed from the other side, however innocent the makers of them may be of the borrowing. Is it possible that the railway unions have been enmeshed, quite against their knowledge or their will, in the universal subtle net of Bolshevist and German intrigue and propaganda? At any rate, they should be able to see into whose hands they are playing; and that nobody but the foes and rivals of the United States can be the beneficiaries of the dangerous course upon which they are lightly asked to enter.

WASHING OUR HANDS OF ARMENIA.

The shade of PONTIUS PILATE must be getting a good deal of entertainment out of the efforts of various countries to put off the responsibility for the Armenian blood which quite possibly may be shed by the Turks in the next few months. Mr. LOVAT FRASER, in The London Daily Mail, becomes excited over the statement of an American relief official who lays all the responsibility on England because there is a prospect that the British troops now protecting the Armenians may be withdrawn. He comments:

> We have not the smallest special interest in Armenia or the Armenians, political or otherwise. It has nothing to do with the defense of India. * * * It seems to me that impoverished Great Britain is always being handed the hot end of the poker. If Armenians are in danger of extermination, their fate is a matter for the Allies as a whole, or the League of Nations, and not for Great Britain alone. If the United States is unwilling to accept a mandate for Armenia, then, however awful the prospect, Armenia and the Armenians must disappear.

Now, this is based on the assumption that the Senate will refuse to permit an American mandate for Armenia. It is not at all certain that the Senate will refuse; if it should refuse, and Great Britain should take over the work of protecting Armenia, the Senate would ring with denunciations of British land-grabbing.

But there is a double responsibility for Armenia—immediate and ultimate. The Armenian leaders say that they have 70,000 trained men who would be sufficient to protect the country if they were armed, supplied, and organized. To do this will take some months. To install the mandatory Power, whoever it may be, will take some months. Until a mandatary has sent its officials to Armenia, until the Armenian Army is armed and organized, the sole protection of the Armenians is the British army now in the Caucasus. If the British should be asked to keep that army there forever, they would have a reasonable ground for complaint; but if America is to take over the mandate, they will not have to stay there more than a few months longer.

It is ridiculous to suppose that the British cannot keep their troops there for, say, six months, if they are assured that after that time somebody else will look after Armenia. There is no talk of withdrawing troops from Egypt. Objectors such as Mr. FRASER may reply that in Persia and Egypt the British are looking after their own interests; it is not a matter of altruism. Quite so; but Great Britain can afford to expend a little altruism on Armenia just now. That much is due, if only to clean up the British record in Turkey. At Gallipoli England paid part of the price of 1854 and 1878; the retention of a few thousand troops in the Caucasus a few months longer is not a very heavy additional burden.

But after that the blame will lie heaviest on us. The Armenians prefer us as a mandatary to any other nation; the other allies want us in Armenia; Americans who would not favor acceptance of any other responsibilities in the Near East feel that Armenia is in quite a different category.

Admiral BRISTOL, commanding American naval forces in Turkish waters, has scandalized propriety-loving diplomats by issuing a private warning to the Turks that there must be no more massacres. This is excellent, but Admiral BRISTOL will not be there forever, and sooner or later the rest of us will have to decide whether we are willing to give the Armenians some practical help, or will confine ourselves to kind words.

We cannot expect the British to stay there indefinitely, and when they go we should be ready to step in. A mandate for Armenia will involve no great amount of trouble; with a little initial help the Armenians will soon be able to govern themselves and protect themselves. If the remnant of the Armenians are massacred because the British army is withdrawn, or because America refuses to concern herself with their fate, neither the British people nor the American people can expect to cleanse their consciences by rivers of pious tears.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Russian Amazon Who Cried.

Out of the chaos there comes, now and again, a human note to remind us that elemental nature will probably endure. On the Murmansk Railway front, Canadian troops captured a party of Bolsheviki in the Red Guard uniform, among whom was a young woman of 22, OLGA SEMENOVA PETOMTZEVA, fully armed and with a bandoleer of cartridges across her breast. She submitted mutely to being disarmed; but when her captors took a little scrapbook of pictures she broke down in tears. This mystified the officer in charge, for the scrap-book contained only a number of photographs of babies cut from magazines.

Mme. PETOMTZEVA left Petrograd on April 4 to join her husband, who was in the Red Guard. In order to remain with him she donned a uniform and joined the fighting. In the action in which she was taken, at Urosozero, she was separated from PETOMTZEFF, who escaped. Questioned as to her interest in the photographs, she at last explained that she had had a child, who died, and of whom, owing to the disorder of the time, she could get no photograph. So she was collecting photographs of children of his age, intending to keep the one that most resembled him. When The Associated Press correspondent cabled these homely details, Mme. PETOMTZEVA was serving as cook for a Canadian mess.

A great philosopher to the contrary notwithstanding, clothes do not make the man—nor yet the woman. Even war may not wholly unmake them.

The Public as Strike-Breaker.

Unless all signs fail, as the old almanacs used to say in the prophetic vein, the near future will mean a step up in the world for the strike-breaker. In Germany they are talking of nationalized trade-training as a means of providing reserves of skilled workmen, who are to be called out in order to keep public utilities going. In England no less a personage than a former Lord Justice of Appeal, Lord WRENBURY, proposes to attain the same end in the more British manner of volunteer organization. In America the cry is raised on all sides that the striker has become chief among profiteers—and is to be dealt with as such. No one denies the right of labor to organize and to strike if it sees fit. But the public has rights no less—and the right to assert those rights by all constitutional means.

The unions have at last become aware that, even for their own selfish interests, it avails little to gain an increase of wages if the result is an increase in the cost of commodities. But it seems not yet to have occurred to them that the resultant increase of prices hits the brain worker with redoubled force, because he has no increase of pay to meet it. Five millions a day is the official estimate of what current strikes are costing us. It is the clearest possible case of the oppression by one class of all the others, to the harm of the nation as a whole.

The situation, when one thinks of it, is amazingly simple. How long would it take a brain worker of average ability to master the art of sliding a subway door backward and forward and calling out the stations? How long to keep track of the nickel trap? If a man can learn to drive an automobile in a week, guiding it through crowded traffic, how long will it take him to learn how to turn on and off the power of a car which runs forthright in grooves? Would a competent accountant find much trouble in "conducting" a train? Suppose that in each commuting district there were a volunteer organization trained to take over the service in case traffic were held up, as it has lately been in Brooklyn and Westchester?

Strikes would give way to arbitration, and arbitration would be of a kind to prevent any one class from preying upon another and upon the community at large. In the past, when such a case became too flagrant, the United States Army took a hand. Which is more in tune with our traditions, a strike-breaking regiment or a strike-breaking public?

In this overbusy, friendless world few will grieve at the fate of our correspondent "Perplexed." When he lived in the city too many people loved him, especially the kind that never "push the bell." Being himself of a more liberal nature, he did push it, with the result that, to avoid destitution in his old age, he moved to the country. And now they swarm upon him weekly, eating him out of house and home. When he locks his door and takes to the timber, they break in at the window and picnic all over the place, leaving notes to express their heartbreak at his absence. What can the poor man do "to be saved from his friends"?

Nothing, alas! Positively nothing! It is a gift, inborn and ineradicable. As well might the song sparrow study how not to sing. But there is no such place in the Gazetteer as "Liberty Hall, N. Y." So it must be the name of his house. Another evidence that "fate" is but a different word for "character"! What does a man expect who flees from reluctant bell-pushers, yet advertises his asylum as Liberty Hall?

One possible comfort does suggest itself. EUGENE LABICHE wrote a play about a man in similar affliction, "Célimar le Bel-Aimé." Let our friend Perplexed read it and read it again. In his declining years of poverty it will make him weep, perhaps; but it will also make him laugh. Either way it should help him, contemplating the fate of a man even more dearly beloved.

Army Shoes and the Understanding.

Much more than a bargain is promised by the sale of army shoes, attractive though the prices are. To any one who has to keep on terms with his understanding, in business or in recreation, the doughboy's footwear is the acme of perfection. The last has been evolved, through long experience, for the needs of men liable to hikes of from ten to twenty-five miles a day, under equipment weighing fifty pounds and more. NAPOLEON said that an army marches on its belly; but that is a matter on which any Quartermaster Sergeant could give the Little Corporal points. Many an ill-shod recruit has wished that he could march in the Napoleonic manner. When shod in army gear he finds that his feet not only give him little trouble on the severest hike but positively become easier. Many of the minor ills which civilian shoes produce—ingrowing nails, calluses, and the rest—are mitigated or disappear. According to the beauty standard of magazine advertisements, the army shoes are very rudely shaped, resembling a toothpick in no manner whatever. But to those who believe with SOCRATES that the basic element in beauty is utility, or with Aunt Miranda that "handsome is as handsome does," they are a vision of delight.

WAR INSURANCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you grant me space to reply to the letter of H. H. in today's TIMES in regard to the alleged "disadvantages of war insurance"?

The writer happens to be in a position to speak with some knowledge and authority, having recently come from serving in the correspondence section of the War Risk Insurance Bureau in Washington.

The Government has arranged that service men may reduce their insurance to $1,000, if necessary, which would cost in the neighborhood of only 60 cents a month, and this may be held for five years from the official close of the war, but at any time within that period they may increase their insurance to the original amount.

If they want the insurance paid in a lump sum, all they have to do is to choose the twenty or thirty year endowment policy. Moreover, it may be of interest to know that the Government at the present time has the matter under advisement of having the insurance paid in one sum or other forms of policy than the endowment, if the insured so desires.

The permanent disability benefits H. H. does not mention, and possibly they have not been brought to his attention. This clause provides that if at any time while carrying this permanent policy the insured should, through accident, or any cause whatsoever, become totally and permanently disabled his policy would mature at once and the insurance would be payable to him without further premiums on his part.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's issue of THE TIMES you published a Washington dispatch concerning the visit of Eugene J. Pivany, Secretary of the American-Hungarian Federation of Cleveland, to the Secretary of State urging upon him to exert America's influence to reopen mail service between the United States and Hungary.

Your readers may not realize that there are hundreds of thousands of loyal, law-abiding, hard-working Hungarian workmen in this country, working in coal mines and steel mills, &c., doing the rough work of the nation, who have not heard from their families for nearly four years. Can you and can they possibly imagine the state of mind of these people, innocent victims of a world chaos?

Letters are coming from Czechoslovakia, from Rumania, and from Jugoslavia, but no mail is received from Hungary. Do you blame these people for being restless—to use a very mild term—and for being fertile soil for the Bolshevist ideas?

There may have been justification for not reopening mail service between Hungary and the United States while the former was dominated by Bolshevikl, but now that Bolshevism in Hungary seems to be a thing of the past it is downright carelessness and cruelty to these hundreds of thousands of Hungarians on this side of the water and to their millions of relatives on the other side.

The longer the reopening of this service is delayed, the more disillusioned Hungarians will return to their native land, to the loss of our own American industries.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The farmers are not the only ones who object to daylight saving.

I have charge of a day nursery, and if you could see the poor little children under 5 years of age, taken out of bed an hour before they need be and brought in here half asleep and irritable by poor, tired working mothers in the cold, dark, rainy mornings, I don't think you would be so keen for it either.

INDIFFERENCE.

Over my garden
An airplane flew;
But nothing there
Either cared or knew.

Cabbage butterflies
Chased each other:
A young wren cried

Gay zinnias
With heavy heads
Flaunted yellows,
And mauves, and reds.

On the late larkspur,
Never knew what
Went over her.

Crickets chirped,
And a blinking toad
Watched for flies
On the gravel road.

They don't care
How smart men are—
To go through heaven
In a flying car!

To a yellow bee
On a marigold
The adventure
Seems a trifle old.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While there is so much talk and action over wages and salaries paid to skilled and unskilled labor, has it occurred to the residents of this city that the municipal employes have had to make many sacrifices in order to live these days, when all the necessities of life have increased approximately seventy-five per cent., while Father Knickerbocker has done practically nothing for those who work for him?

My case may be cited as one of many in order to point out the injustice to which city employes are being subjected. My duties are of a very important nature, receiving and transmitting fire alarms. When on duty I am responsible for the movements of the fire apparatus in the borough to which I am assigned. I must be active and wide awake, know the location of each company, the location of each fire alarm box, receive all telephone calls telling of fires, use sound judgment in assigning fire companies to these calls, see that the nearest company is called, know when to send an engine company, when to send a truck company, when to send both, when to send only a fireman, &c., &c., know where each piece of apparatus is and if in or out of service, know what to do and how to do it when three or four calls come in from the same location at once.

For doing all of the above, I am compensated at the rate of approximately thirty dollars per week, while my son, a telegrapher, earns from thirty-seven to forty dollars. I am with the city over ten years; my son is with the Western Union three years; both of us are "Morse" operators. My salary is about five dollars a day, but the paper hanger sent around by my landlord receives his eight dollars, and he is not a citizen yet. The conductor who takes my nickel every morning has had his wages raised several times within the past few years, and now makes in the neighborhood of six and a half dollars per day, and he came from the upper part of the state last Spring, while I have lived in the city most of my life, and so on all along the line; in fact, every one I come in contact with is earning more than I am.

I am being penalized just because I happen to work for the city, which has given me one increase of $100 per year, $1.92 per week, since the cost of living started to increase. I am but one of many thousands in the same relative position. Is such treatment fair? Is the city giving its employes the same square deal it expects from them? We do not threaten to strike, we have been on the job without a murmur, going along quietly in the hope that the matter would be adjusted, but let me assure you that the point has been reached where it is impossible to continue further without some action. Myself and those dependent on me must get sufficient nourishment to keep ourselves together. Unless some action is taken in connection with the budget for the coming year, something will happen. Why can't the city officials be broad enough to adjust our salaries to meet the great economic change which has taken place in the past few years?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I made my debut as an actress at the age of three, and have played for more than twenty years, but in all that time I have failed to see any legitimate actor or actress "look over the heads" of reputable musicians. I have heard of small time vaudevillians speaking disparagingly of "Traps" because he failed on a cue that was important; but B. B. E., who writes to THE TIMES that actors despise musicians, is not helping the variety artist or vaudevillian.

Many is the time I have talked to the "boys" in the pit, for I love music and understand it, and they have told me of the wonderful new overture they were rehearsing and were going to "spring" on us some night. I have seen actors stand behind the curtain and applaud the clarinetist, or perhaps it was the flute, when an obbligato was particularly well rendered.

Your union, B. B. E., if you have one, would have given you assistance in your bereavement if you really needed it. If you were working for your dear manager, you should not have needed his charity, particularly if he had paid you a living wage.

I could tell you of hundreds of wives whose doctor bills have been paid and whose funeral expenses were contributed by the actors and actresses you are trying to flout. Of course, we have to have lights, scenery, lines, and teaching; we don't claim to have dropped from the lap of the gods full fledged and anointed. If you are something more than a mere note reader you surely had instruction; and you have a score to read from unless, perhaps, you compose everything you play.

A Boat Service Around Manhattan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the emergency created by the sudden deprivation of the subway and elevated service, the practicability of a long-neglected method of relief was demonstrated by the immediate aid afforded, on the North and East Rivers, by boat transit. With the finest water fronts in any great city New York has entirely failed to utilize the means ready at hand of conveying very large numbers of persons by water in the direction in which traffic conditions are most deficient.

The establishment of a line of passenger vessels around the Island of Manhattan in opposite directions at regular intervals would undoubtedly serve the needs of a very large number of persons and help effectively in reducing the pressure upon the subways and elevated systems.

Such a service could very readily be established by the use of the many steamers employed only in Summer duty, or perhaps by some additions to the fleet of ferryboats now operated by the Department of Plant and Structure. It would seem that instead of further congesting the traffic conditions by the addition of a multitude of municipally operated buses, the authorities would do well to take up this form of service which lies ready to their hand.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is there no dilettante class in this country? Why is it that every one who cares for art must paint and exhibit? Why is it that every one who cares for books must write a "work of genius"?

Why must every American be a genius? Why are there no appreciators of genius? When a man shall receive the admiration he deserves for being the first to appreciate the genius of writers, artists, and musicians, and shall be willing to let the real greatness of others remain unobscured by the smoke from his amateur fire, and that man shall represent a respected class in this country, then may Americans begin rightly to claim the distinction for civilization they so undeservedly insist upon at present.

Then, too, shall the fakers who live by "teaching" fumbling little minds to turn out vast quantities of "works of art," whether books or paintings, (which serve only as the burial mounds of the authors' hopes,) be added to the ranks of those who rightly dig sewers as a means of livelihood.

NEW PARTY TO BEGIN FIGHT FOR JUDGES

ASSAIL TAMMANY LEADERS

Independent Democrats, who resented the action of the Tammany Hall executive committee in refusing to renominate Supreme Court Justice Joseph E. Newburger and Judge Richard H. Smith of the City Court, held a meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday, and after several speakers had denounced the chief Tammany leaders for attempting to dictate judicial nominations, formed a Committee of Nine to prepare the petitions, which will put both Justice Newburger and Judge Smith on the official ballot in the November election. A committee of 250 is to be selected later to conduct the campaign of the two judicial candidates.

County Clerk William F. Schneider, head of the Cleveland Democracy, an organization of independent Democrats, presided at the meeting, which was attended by about 100 men and women. The committee appointed by the Bar Associations of the city to further the re-election of Justice Newburger and Judge Smith were represented, as well as the Citizens' Union and other organizations.

Among the individuals present were Frederick Kime, President of the Manufacturing Jewelers' Association; Nathaniel Phillips, President of the League of Foreign-Born Citizens; Walter A. Johnson, former State Chairman of the Progressive Party; John H. Boschen, President of the Commonwealth Savings Bank; Isaac Ringel, former City Magistrate; Harry H. Schlact, President of the East Side Protective League; William Ballin, President of the Ballin Company; former Senator John V. Sheridan, former Congressman Daniel C. Oliver, Christian F. Becker, President of the Bronx Independent Democracy; Dr. O. L. Moser, Dr. I. M. Spetnagel, Bella L. Cox, Deputy County Clerk Charles A. Hale, former Assemblymen Hyman, Keleher, Ellis, Levy, Eckman, and Moore, and former Aldermen Kunze, Rooney, Stern, and Dicker.

Schneider as Chairman.

After a temporary organization had been effected by the election of County Clerk Schneider as Chairman and Deputy County Clerks William B. Selden and Bella L. Cox as secretaries, Mr. Schneider said:

"This meeting has been called to deal with one of those crises in the political life of this community which periodically reminds our citizens that liberty is a reward of constant vigilance. All too frequently have the men who mistake party leadership for the right to satisfy their greed committed such grave offenses that citizens of independent political views, or those usually indifferent to politics, have been forced to enter a campaign in order to protect their city from political profiteers.

"These profiteers are the chief Tammany leaders, whose civic pride and patriotism are of microscopic proportions as compared with their magnified arrogance and their overwhelming contempt for the public welfare. You are invited to contrast the words of that Democrat of conscience and service, Grover Cleveland, who said with a simplicity and earnestness which those who knew him best at once comprehended, that 'Public service is a public trust,' with the brazen words of the leader of the party organization in this city that 'He's had the job long enough, let him give some one else a chance.'

"As men and women of pride, spirit, and self-respect you should find that contrast a compelling force to drive you to the sternest efforts to rebuke the arrogance, greed, and cynicism that leads the inner council of a political organization to turn down Judges of long, honorable, and faithful service in order that their places may be given to unknown favorites of doubtful capacity."

Mr. Schneider said that two years ago the Tammany leaders, chastened by their defeat in 1913, were most anxious to nominate for city and borough offices only such men as would attract the support of independent voters of principle.

Says Viewpoint Has Changed.

"Made drunk this year," he said, "with success in the city and State elections of 1917 and 1918, the chief Tammany leaders do not know caution and have no sense of political decency. With brazen defiance of the tradition for the safeguarding of our courts, they have reached out boldly and thrust aside able and efficient Judges and put in their places their own particular favorites.

"Why were Judges Newburger and Smith refused renominations after long and faithful service upon the bench? No answer having been given to this question, we must keep on repeating it every day during the coming campaign. Remember that next year there will be many nominations to be made to the Supreme Court and the Court of General Sessions.

"If Tammany Hall succeeds in throwing over Justice Newburger and Judge Smith, next it will turn down perhaps a dozen Judges of proved honesty and service and give their places to instruments that will advance Tammany's interests and not the public's. The fight upon which we are entering is not the first of its kind in New York City politics, nor will it be the last. We appeal for the support of all citizens who believe in the cause of honesty in government and decent and fair play in nominations irrespective of party politics."

Former Representative Daniel C. Oliver of the Twenty-third District, who was refused a renomination last year by Tammany, introduced a resolution for the appointment of a Committee of Nine and it was unanimously adopted. The members of the committee are himself as Chairman, and Nathaniel Phillips, John H. Boschen, John V. Sheridan, William T. Ellis, Harry A. Schlact, F. J. Collins, Joseph P. Edelson, and Miss Bella Cox.

"If the public conscience is awakened there will be no doubt of the result," said Mr. Collins. "Everybody knows about the Daly incident. That was a decent affair compared to this arrogant abuse of power."

William T. Ellis, former Assemblyman, then introduced a resolution that the committee establish suitable headquarters, and John V. Sheridan, once refused a renomination for Senator by Tammany, offered a resolution that the committee invite all other independent organizations to join them. Both were adopted. John P. Edelson, Assistant District Attorney, explained that he was a friend of Justice Newburger, and said: "I came here today to throw off the yoke of Tammany Hall because if I wore it any longer I would be strangled."

Mr. Edelson, who was a Deputy Attorney General for six years, declared that he had tried to reform Tammany in his district from the inside and finding it impossible had decided to fight it from the outside and drive it from his district. John F. Cronin, who is an independent candidate for Alderman in the Sixteenth District, made an attack upon Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, and Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, which led Benjamin E. Moore of the same district to say:

"I object to the committee taking any action on local affairs. For the protection of this movement don't let us drag in any local issues. If we stick to the judiciary issue and steer clear of petty politics we can elect Justice Newburger."

Chairman Schneider assured the speaker that the committee had no intention of taking part in local fights. The committee then adjourned to meet at the call of the Chair. The

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 27.—Asbury Park's twenty-eighth annual baby parade, held under bright skies here this afternoon before 75,000 spectators, was a peace and victory pageant. Children posed in tableaux on floats, as well as marchers in the ranks, proclaimed the supremacy of allied arms and the return of peace. There were many workaday themes presented by the more than one thousand children in line and hundreds of pretty babies in flower and ribbon bedecked carriages.

Governor and Mrs. William N. Runyon and Miss Alice Brady were the guests of honor at the parade. A procession of children dressed as elves and fairies and as folk from Mother Goose led the procession, with the three musketeers, mounted, clattering along the line.

PHARMACY SECTIONS MEET.

American Association Divisions Discuss Special Papers.

While there was no general meeting yesterday of the American Pharmaceutical Association at the Hotel Pennsylvania, the several sections that have come together in the sixty-seventh annual convention of the association met separately.

Before the Section of Education and Legislation Henry J. Goeckey, biologist and chemist of the Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, read a paper on "Pharmaceutical Education and Opportunities." Professor Jacob Diner, Dean of the College of Medicine at Fordham University, in discussing the paper said pharmacists take more interest in the study of bacteriology than do physicians, and such colleges of pharmacy as had hospital facilities, he thought, would be likely to graduate better bacteriologists than the medical colleges.

In the scientific section, W. W. Stockberger, physiologist in charge of the office of the Drug, Poisonous, and Oil Plant Investigating Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, sent a paper on "Commercial Drug-Growing in the United States."

Mr. Stockberger gave some statistics of drug-growing last year. There were sixty growers of belladonna, in twelve States, with 273 acres, producing 22,277 pounds, which was more, he said, than the market would readily absorb. Of cannabis, there were eighteen growers, in five States, producing 50,650 pounds. Digitalis was grown in four States, but there was no report of the amount. Calendula was grown in three States. Sage was grown in quantity production in five States by twelve growers and about 10,000 pounds produced.

The section on practical pharmacy and dispensing also held its first session.

Theo. P. Shonts Still Seriously Ill.

The condition of Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, who has been ill for the last three months, was said last night to be about the same as it had been for some weeks. Mr. Shonts, one of the attending physicians said, continues to be seriously ill, but he is not considered to be in any immediate danger. Two months ago Mr. Shonts underwent an operation at his home, 930 Park Avenue, following a severe attack of pleurisy, and it is said that there has not been any decided change in his condition since that time, though there were periods when he seemed improved and at other times he was reported as not doing so well. Late last night it was said that he was resting comfortably.

JONES TO HEAR VETERANS.

War Risk Bureau Chief Will Listen to Grievances.

Announcement was made last night at the national headquarters of Veterans of Foreign Wars, 32 Union Square, that a telegram had been received from R. G. Cholmeley Jones, Director of the War Risk Bureau in Washington, stating he would be glad to discuss with members of a committee appointed by the veterans at the encampment at Providence last week any grievances they may have regarding the inefficiency of the department.

At the encampment last week, the veterans criticised the War Risk Insurance Bureau and the Federal Vocational Board for alleged inactivity. Many of the veterans related instances where it was alleged both boards failed to benefit the men who had paid for their insurance and who had been wounded. Complaint was also made of the alleged failure of the Vocational Board to prepare them properly to earn a living after they had been maimed in battle. Among the speakers were men who had lost limbs or their sight in France. It was voted that the full strength of the 200,000 membership of the organization should be used to correct the evils if the accusations were found to be true.

The committee appointed to investigate said report was: Jack J. Singer, senior Vice Commander in Chief, Jersey City, Chairman; E. H. Hale, Washington, D. C., and John J. McGrane of Providence.

BOOST HARD COAL OUTPUT.

Anthracite production for the first half of August shows an increase over the output for that period in 1916, the last normal year in the coal trade, according to the statistics issued by the Bureau of The Anthracite News, which says:

"While shipments in July showed an increase of 7.7 per cent. over June, and amounted to 6,052,234 tons, or 619,456 long tons more than was shipped in July, 1916, the first half of August is showing a further increase and production is well in excess of production for the first two weeks of July.

"According to figures issued by the United States Geological Survey the production of anthracite in the two weeks ending July 5 and July 12 was 3,282,000 net tons. For the two weeks ending Aug. 9 and Aug. 16 the production was 3,512,000 net tons, an increase of 230,000 net tons, or almost 20,000 net tons per possible working day as compared with the two weeks in July."

2,200,000 Pounds of Commodity Destroyed—Shortage Causes Riots.

PARIS, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—Fire today destroyed 2,200,000 pounds of tobacco in a factory at Pantin, near Paris.

Tobacco recently has been virtually unobtainable. This morning long lines of men awaiting the weekly distribution of tobacco were to be seen in front of the tobacco stores. When the supply was exhausted many persons who had not been served started a demonstration on the boulevards and smashed the windows of two of the tobacco depositories.

MOVIE TO AID IN BABY HUNT.

In an effort to get a clue to the whereabouts of the missing Wentz baby, who was kidnapped from his carriage at 150th Street and Third Avenue, the Bronx, July 29, stereopticon slides have been made showing a picture of the boy and giving a description of his supposed kidnapper. Persons who may know where he is are asked to telephone Police Headquarters. The slides will be sent to every moving picture theatre in New York and vicinity.

A letter was received yesterday by Mrs. Elsa Wentz, the baby's mother, at her home, 725 Home Street, the Bronx, from a man who signed himself William H. Macabee. The letter contained what is supposed to be a horoscope of the missing child, a description of a woman who was said to have kidnapped him, and said the boy would be returned when he was about six years old.

COL. J. HAMILTON HUNT HURT

Colonel J. Hamilton Hunt of the Confederate Army, who is 82 years old, and lives at 900 East 179th Street, the Bronx, was knocked down at Marmion and Tremont Avenues, the Bronx, last night by a bicycle ridden by John Phillips of 2,201 East 170th Street.

Colonel Hunt got to his feet, dusted off his clothes, and started to walk away, when he was stopped by Patrolman John Lowe of the Bathgate Avenue station, who noticed he was bleeding from several cuts in his scalp. He was treated at Fordham Hospital, but insisted on going home, saying that his wife, who is 79 years old, could care for him better than any doctor or nurse.

Colonel Hunt, who retired from the real estate business in the Bronx a year ago, fought throughout the civil war with the Confederate forces, and his wife followed him until the battle of Gettysburg. She cared for thousands of wounded officers and soldiers.

SEAMAN TO MAKE DEFENSE.

MINEOLA, L. I., Aug. 27.—Sheriff Phineas Seaman of Nassau County, accompanied by ex-Representative Martin W. Littleton, as counsel, and a party of fifteen friends, will go to Albany tomorrow to appear before Governor Smith to answer charges of malfeasance in office. The charges were brought by the Nassau County Association, following the suicide in jail of Dr. Walter K. Wilkins, the wife murderer of Long Beach.

The association charged laxity by the Sheriff in his management of the jail. A committee of the State Prison Commission which investigated reported itself unable to discover how Dr. Wilkins obtained the rope with which he hanged himself, but declared that laxity in carrying out the orders of the former Sheriff and Sheriff Seaman was discovered. Sheriff Seaman tonight called the charges "unjustified."

OCEAN PASSENGER RATES UP

Beginning on Sept. 1, the Atlantic passenger rates will be increased by an additional $15 first, $10 second and $5 third-class to the existing fares. Under the new scale the minimum fares on liners like the Olympic, Aquitania and the France, from New York to England and France, will be $260 first, $125 second, and $80 in the third-class or steerage.

Before the war thousands of school teachers and stenographers from all over the United States used to save up for a short trip to Europe through Cook's agency, which used to cost from $350 up, inclusive of steamship trip, hotels and carriage drives in the principal cities. These opportunities to see the world at a modest cost have gone forever with many other things of the past.

CAMPS FOR FARMERETTES.

New York State Land Army Calls for Funds.

At a rally of the New York State Land Army at the Amsterdam Opera House last evening there was a call for funds to recruit farmerettes for the Land Army and to open camps for them in different parts of the State. The farmers have heartily co-operated with the army, but outside assistance is necessary if the shortage of labor is to be met and proper care of crops undertaken.

The rally is a small part of a drive for education as well as funds, which is now going on in the upper part of the State, where farmerettes, in their working costumes, are driving through the cities in truck loads, making cart-tail speeches in the interest of the work. There will be entertainments in connection with the drive given under the direction of the Volunteer Entertainment Bureau of the War Camp Community Service, and later these will be turned into shows to be given for the farmers during harvest time.

In Memoriam.

CHAMBERS.—In loving memory of Alice, our only beloved daughter and sister, who fell asleep in Jesus Aug. 28, 1916, aged 15 years and 6 months.

IT WAS GOD'S WILL.

That one He gave must go to Him again;
That one we loved, our pleading all in vain,
Should so His will fulfill. We will but pray
The path should be not dark, but bright
With glory of His kindly light
Clear shining all the way.

GIESER.—Entered into life eternal Aug. 28, 1916, Henry Gieser, husband and father. Sweet is the calm of Paradise the Blest.

PHILLIES' MISPLAYS HELPFUL TO GIANTS

FOUR RUNS ON A SINGLE

New Yorkers Have Easy Time in Ninth Inning, When Eight Toe Plate and Only One Hits Safely.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27. — The Giants found scoring a difficult art up to the late innings of today's game with the Phillies, but once they found the way to the home plate, run getting became very simple and they finished up on the heavy end of a 7 to 2 score. Errors by the home team had much to do with the scoring of McGraw's men. In the last two frames, which produced five runs for the visitors, they made only one hit, a single by Burns in the ninth.

Jess Barnes, who did the pitching for the Giants, was hit much harder than usual, but he kept the blows well scattered after the first inning, when the Phillies nicked his delivery for a trio of safe hits and pushed their first run over the plate. This inning and the eighth, in which Williams and Meusel punched out two-baggers to start the frame, were the only innings in which the New York boxman was hit to any extent.

Lee Meadows, the bespectacled flinger of the Cravath forces, deserved no such one-sided defeat as was his portion. He did some brilliant pitching in the pinches which developed in the early innings, but naturally he could not offset the flock of errors which his supporting cast turned in in the late chapters. In three of the first five innings the Giants got a runner around to third base, once with none out and once with only one out, yet they were not able to drive the run over the plate. Errors presented the Giants with two of their first three runs, and in the ninth inning Meadows's poor control, coupled with his own fumble, paved the way for the quartet of runs that made the game one-sided.

The victory of McGraw's men ate away a half game of the lead enjoyed by the Cincinnati Reds this morning and added a half game to the advantage held by the Giants over the Cubs, in third place. McGraw's men are now eight and one-half games behind the league leaders and ten full games ahead of the 1918 champions. As the Reds have only twenty-five more games to play, while the Giants and Cubs have only thirty, there is little likelihood that there will be any change in the relative standing of these three clubs at the close of the season.

Phils Score in First.

Meadows made a strong start this afternoon by fanning Burns and Young, the first two batsmen to face him in the opening inning, but a minute later he was in difficulty. Fletcher singled to left and raced all the way to third when Tragesser made a poor throw to catch him napping off first. There was no scoring, however, as Zimmerman closed the inning with a fly to Williams.

The Phillies, in their half of the first inning, picked up the run which kept them in front up to the sixth inning, when the Giants tied the score. After Callahan had popped to Frisch for the first out Blackburne singled to right and went around to third when Williams hit to the same section for another single. Meusel's sacrifice fly to Young sent Blackburne home, Williams holding first base. Cy moved along to second while Luderus was beating out a bounder to deep short, but the pair were left when Bancroft grounded to Zimmerman.

The Giants made a dismal failure of their second inning after Frank Frisch had opened with a smash to left centre for three bases. The Fordham flash was left on third while Kauff and Chase went out on pop fouls to Luderus and Tragesser, respectively, and then Gonzales closed the inning with a grounder to Bancroft.

The Phillies also got a runner to third in the second inning, but failed to score. Paulette opened with a pass and was forced at second by Tragesser. After Meadows had gone out on strikes Tragesser stole second and moved along to third on Callahan's single over second. Blackburne fouled to Chase for the final out.

In the third neither team threatened, but in the fourth the Giants went out with runners on second and third. Fletcher singled to right, Zimmerman flied to Williams and Frisch also singled to right, sending Fletcher to third. While Kauff was grounding out to Luderus Frisch reached second and Fletcher held third, putting the case up to Hal Chase, whose effort was a roller to Paulette.

Giants Get Busy in Sixth.

McGraw's men tied up the game in the sixth. Young beat out a grounder to Luderus to start the inning, and Fletcher hit weakly in front of the plate. While Meadows was throwing out the Giant captain at first base Young showed his sprinting ability by moving around to third. Zimmerman followed with a single to centre and Young scored. Zim tried to make two bases on his hit, but Callahan's throw to Paulette beat him to second base.

In the seventh the Giants went to the front. Chase beat out a grounder to Blackburne, and when the latter made a throw to Luderus that was as poor as it was late, Hal hustled along to second. He reached third while Luderus was fumbling Gonzales's bunt and scored on Burns's long fly to Meusel.

Two errors by Paulette handed the Giants a third run in the eighth inning. Fletcher reached first on a fumble by the Phillies' second baseman and moved along to second while Meadows was throwing out Zimmerman. Frisch followed with a grounder that rolled through Paulette's fingers and Fletcher scored from second on the misplay.

The Phillies came back with a run in their half, the result of some solid stickwork. Williams greeted Barnes with a double to right field and scored easily when Meusel followed with a double to left. It appeared that Barnes might be weakening, but he got the next three men in order and before he did any pitching in the ninth the Giants were far in front.

Four Runs on One Hit.

Eight men toed the plate in the New York ninth and only one single was made by the visitors. Chase opened with a walk and Gonzales was hit. Barnes bunted and Meadows fumbled the ball, Chase showing speed enough to score from second base. Gonzales reached second on the play, and while Catcher Tragesser was arguing at the plate with Umpire O'Day the Cuban made a dash for third base, making the bag safely. Burns singled to right, the only hit of the inning, and Gonzales scored, Barnes going to third. Young hit to Paulette and the latter made a throw to the plate, but too late to get Barnes. Fletcher followed with a long fly to Williams, Burns taking third and Young second after the catch. Zimmerman's sacrifice fly to Williams scored Burns and sent Young along to third. Frisch ended the big inning by rolling to Luderus.

The Phils threatened in their half of the ninth but a fast double play prevented any scoring. Tragesser singled to left and advanced while Barnes was throwing out Clark, who batted for Meadows. Callahan walked and Blackburne grounded to Fletcher, who touched second and then threw out Blackburne at first base.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Philadelphia hit Hoyt hard today and won a six-inning game, 6 to 4, from Boston. It was scheduled as the first game of a double-header, but was called in the first half of the seventh because of a heavy downpour. Ruth's high fly to centre in the first inning was so difficult to judge that it went for a triple.

Indians Beat Tigers, 7 to 5, and Occupy Second Place Unmolested.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—Cleveland made it two straight from the Tigers today, winning 7 to 5, and thus breaking the tie that existed for second place. Dauss was knocked from the box in the first inning. Love was effective until the seventh, when he was relieved by Boland. It was off the latter that O'Neill made a single that scored the winning runs.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 27.—The 225 mile Autumn Classic at the Uniontown Speedway on Labor Day will start promptly at 1:30 o'clock. The fact that the day is the great national labor holiday makes it possible to start the contest early in the afternoon. Word received at the Speedway offices through seat reservations is that thousands of racing fans from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, New York and other cities at a distance will drive to the races, starting on Saturday, spending Saturday night and Sunday at leading Summer resorts en route and arriving in Uniontown early Monday morning. Ample arrangements have been made to accommodate the crowds at the speedway.

BASEBALL ON FOREIGN SOIL.

Diamonds Now Abound Where American Soldiers Have Passed.

PARIS, Aug. 2, (By Mail.)—When the last of the American doughboys leave the fields of France, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany for home, behind them will be hundreds of baseball diamonds cut in the countryside of these lands, and a host of people from all the nations intensely interested in a game that before the war was foreign and strange to them.

More baseball has been played this Spring and Summer by the boys of the Army of Occupation, and those awaiting embarkation, than any area of similar proportions in America saw. Hundreds of carloads of baseball equipment were distributed among all the Yankee units by the K. of C. athletic directors.

The Knights of Columbus realized the necessity of sending a man to France who had played the game and knew how to teach it. That man was Johnny Evers. He not only paved the way for success for the game in the A. E. F. but encouraged the sport among the soldiers of the other allied nations. He staged games with enemy airplanes swooping overhead, and was first to handle the enormous supply of athletic equipment which was given the boys by the K. of C.

Bill Friel, the St. Louis star, was placed at the head of the athletic department managing baseball games, and he gathered about him a number of stars from the big leagues. Bill Coughlin, former Captain of the Detroit Tigers, was one who assisted in the baseball program. He organized a team in Southern France, and in a month's time captured the honors in that section. Later he went to Coblenz, where he coached the Army of Occupation champion team.

Pete Noonan of the Philadelphia Athletics developed a strong team at Esch, and was later one of the umpires in the A. E. F. finals. Tommy Rowd, another big-leaguer in the K. of C. uniform, developed the 4th Division league. Jim Fogarty, former Manager of the Jersey City, N. J. team, managed the American Embarkation Centre team, and Jack Barry, a member of the New York Giants in 1908, assisted in the baseball activities. Johnny Carroll, Tommy O'Mara and J. B. Kerin, onetime umpire in the National League, held the indicator in the soldier games. O'Mara set a new baseball record when he flew in an army 'plane from Colombes les Belles to Trier, Germany, to umpire a game.

In these last months of the American occupation of Germany and entertainment in France, baseball has been the favorite sport fostered by the K. of C., but its record in the furtherance of boxing as a sport and not a profession even surpassed the Summer pastime. It made boxing to the tired doughboy what the light musical comedy has always been to the tired business man. In every area where American troops were billeted in barns, poorly lighted halls, in open fields and in the spacious recreation halls, interesting bouts were staged.

The program of the K. of C. boxing chief, J. J. Carey, provided amusement as well as exercise for the enlisted men. He pitted French boxers against the best in the A. E. F. and to the surprise of the American boys, the French made an impression which was hardly in accord with the popular idea of their fistic prowess. Sam Fitzpatrick, who twenty years before brought Peter Jackson to France, and later visited Paris with Kid Lavigne, discovered that the French boxers could fight with their fists this time. Formerly they used their feet continually.

Boxers and fight promoters of national reputation conducted the bouts for the K. of C. The army athletic officials gave the organization the exclusive privilege of staging contests, and approximately a million soldiers saw the bouts in Paris, Coblenz, Le Mans, and other centres. Alex McLean, K. of C. Director with the Third Army, alone staged 400 bouts. Billy Roche, Danny Dunn, Biz Mackay, Eddie Conway, Frank Flynn, Judge Duffy, Tommy McFarland, and Eddie O'Rourke were big factors in the success of the program.

The greatest race ever staged in France was the marathon the K. of C. arranged from Château-Thierry over shell-torn roads to the Place de la Concorde, Paris, which was won by Matthew Lynch of Newark, N. J. It was on the anniversary of the day the American machine gunners were making their attack on Château-Thierry bridge. The runners coursed their way under canopies of flowers in some of the cities along the route.

NEWARK DROPS TWO GAMES BY ONE RUN

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Buffalo took two hotly contested games from Newark today, winning each time by the margin of one run. The first game was a pitchers' battle between Devinney and Lyons. Buffalo scored the lone tally when Letter dropped Bengough's fly in the eighth, Barney scoring from first while Bengough took two bases.

The second game was a see-saw contest. Buffalo broke the tie in the tenth by falling heavily on Stryker's offerings and scoring the winning run before a batter had been retired.

GRAYSSIAN LUCKY TO BEAT FAVORITE

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The running of the Adirondack Handicap, of $5,000, for two-year-olds, which was the feature on the card here today, was marred by an accident at the barrier which undoubtedly had a bearing on the outcome of the race and brought disappointment to those who had looked for a keen contest without mishaps. The race was won by A. H. Diaz's Grayssian, but only after Commander J. K. L. Ross's King Thrush had been caught by a part of the barrier, held up and entangled and finally forced to run the six furlongs carrying with him the webbing of the starting machine. Walter M. Jefferds's Kinnoul, an added starter, took second, while H. P. Whitney's Sammy was third.

This incident followed closely upon a disqualification in the Greenfield Steeplechase, when Robert Oliver was disqualified for a foul after he had easily defeated E. M. Weld's Weldship, the only other starter. The accident at the barrier and the foul, along with a drizzling rain, which fell most of the afternoon, tended to spoil what otherwise promised to be a good day of sport.

The Adirondack brought out nine starters, among them some good youngsters, but none of them rated among the real topnotchers. However, the handicapper had made it a promising contest, since King Thrush, which was apparently the best on his recent form, had been allotted the top weight, 124 pounds. Carmandale, Cinderella, the sensation of the Spring, and David Harum were the other entries which had made good this season.

King Thrush Well Supported.

Johnny Loftus had the mount on King Thrush and, as a result, the Ross colt was well supported, being a second choice, with Kinnoul favorite. There was considerable skirmishing at the post, and finally, when the horses had been lined up for what looked like a good start, the barrier was sprung. The webbing cleared all but King Thrush, which had the outside position. A part of the tape caught in the nose band of the Ross colt and, as the others bounded away, King Thrush reared up on his hind legs and was left standing at the post. Loftus nudged him and he dashed after the flying leaders, but was beaten from the very beginning.

Grayssian went into the lead soon after the barrier was sprung, and showed fine courage by holding on against the repeated challenges of Sammy and Kinnoul. As the horses reached the stretch Grayssian seemed to be slowing up and Kinnoul with a great rush of speed came up close to the leader. But Grayssian again moved away and won handily. Kinnoul was able to hold the place safely against Sammy, which attempted to

WILLIAMS BEATS RICHARDS

Rain tried its best to hold up the national tennis championship at Forest Hills yesterday, but a late start foiled the elements and by sundown the entire second round of the all-comers' singles had been completed, with the veterans', boys', and junior championship events well under way. In spite of discouraging weather conditions all week the turf courts of the West Side Club maintained their almost perfect surface, while every detail of management continued to be carried out with the scrupulous care that has consistently marked the work of the Tournament Committee.

Among the thirty-two players who survived yesterday's competition were National Champion Robert Lindley Murray, who disposed of Dean Mathey in straight sets; three ex-champions, R. N. Williams, 2d, W. M. Johnston, and Maurice McLoughlin; Ichiya Kumagae, William T. Tilden, 2d, and the Australians, Norman Brookes and R. V. Thomas. Gerald L. Patterson also remaining in the draw through the default of his team mate, Randolph Lycett.

The only upset of the day came late in the afternoon, when Robert Le Roy unexpectedly triumphed over Clarence J. Griffin of California in five sets, scoring at 4—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—0, 6—4.

Murray in Rare Form.

The national title-holder was in rare form when he took the court against Dean Mathey, and the former Princetonian did exceedingly well to carry the final set to a score of 10—8, after losing the first two, 6—2 and 6—4. Murray showed again, in addition to his old serving and volleying game, the aggressive and steady ground strokes which carried him to the top last season. He was able to do a lot of practicing from deep-court, as Mathey volleyed well, and it usually required great speed to carry the ball past him. Murray occasionally succeeded in inserting a terrific backhand drive, with complete follow-through, a new and valuable stroke in his repertoire. His forehand also seemed more powerful than at any time in the past, while his overhead was absolutely murderous. Playing the kind of tennis that he showed yesterday, the champion will demand a super-game from any one who seeks to deprive him of his laurels.

With Mathey serving first, three games were required before Murray got his first break, but after increasing his lead to 4—2, he upset his opponent's delivery once more with a tremendous drive to the extreme corner of the court and then quickly ran out the set, 6—2. Mathey lost the second set when he served a double fault in the fifth game, after being beaten by a wonderfully accurate backhand shot which dropped exactly on the side-line. Murray then smashed away for a 4—2 lead, keeping his advantage with the alternation of service until the set was his at 6—4.

The champion took things easily in the early games of the third session, trying out all his strokes, but succeeded in winning consistently on service, while his rival did the same. The Princetonian's fine volleying and desperate court-covering kept him in the game up to 8 all, with the rallies growing constantly faster and more thrilling. Murray finally drove the loser into errors, a smash into the net, after a remarkable backhand volley, starting Mathey on the road to disaster. He just missed the line in an attempt at a close placement and then smashed out for the crucial game, the ball again barely escaping the court. With the break in his favor, 9—8, the champion put on full steam and served a love game, ending with a cannon-ball ace, for the set and match, 10—8.

Williams Defeats Richards.

The thousands who saw Richard Norris Williams 2d in his impressive straight-set defeat of young Vincent Richards yesterday witnessed a reincarnation of the tennis wizard who won the national title in 1914 and 1916, a Williams of the old unbeatable type.

After an exceedingly shaky start the ex-champion suddenly came to life when trailing at 1—4, and throughout the rest of the match exhibited the most dazzling play that the tournament has yet produced. During this extraordinary streak he had everything that the science of the game admits as a possibility, his service coming off with consistent speed and break, his ground strokes catching the lines in amazing fashion, and his volleys shooting away at the sharpest angles from every position. No shot seemed too difficult for his magic racquet, and the youngster on the other side of the net was completely baffled by a display of versatility and daring such as he has probably never before encountered in his brief but sensational career. The youthful holder of half a dozen national honors put up a plucky fight against overwhelming odds and was always ready to take advantage of any errors that Williams might let slip. His lack of a dependable fast drive was his greatest handicap, for Williams was able to hook his short chops to the corners at will and was seldom troubled even by the most accurate shots.

At the start it looked as though Richards would surely win at least a set, with an even chance of holding his own throughout the match. He served successfully for the first game, winning it with a clean ace, and then drew applause from the crowd by going through the ex-champion's delivery for a love-game, keeping a very steady defense and scoring on his opponent's errors. Williams, however, playing in his Harvard varsity sweater which he kept on throughout the three sets, refused to become flustered even when the boy prodigy increased his lead to 3—0, with two more service aces to his credit. He broke in with a single tally, and then watched another love-game fade away, with a consequent 4—1 score against him. He was in the hole, 30—40, with a double fault before the mysterious power of control suddenly descended upon him. A clean service ace marked the turning point. Two more of the same lightning deliveries decided the game in his favor, and then the slaughter began. Three astonishing placement shots and a delicate stop-volley accounted for a love-game against the youngster's service. Another love-game made it 4—all, with Williams crowding his luck to the limit, trying everything he had and succeeding with it.

Richards Wins His Service.

Richards made a desperate effort to stop the overwhelming rush of his opponent's play, and actually succeeded in winning his service once more for a 5—4 lead. But Williams tied it up with the loss of only one point, and then broke through without difficulty by the simple process of driving the ball consistently within a fraction of an inch of the baseline, from corner to corner, taking the winning rally with a splendid backhand shot to the boy's left. Four fast services in a row gave him the set 7—5, with a love game.

Richards was completely upset by this whirlwind attack, which had caught him utterly unprepared. In the first game of the second set he fell down on an easy chance to put away a high bounder, deciding at the last moment to drive instead of chopping the ball, and netting it in consequence, with a break resulting immediately as Williams shot another low one to his backhand. A steady continuation of super-tennis gave Williams a lead of 2—0, and he broke through again for 3—0 with a net-corder. Spectacular volleying from mid-court raised the score to 4—0 before Richards succeeded in tallying on service. Williams progressed to 5—1 with an uncanny control of ground-strokes and volleys, and a wonderful backhander, landing on the side-line, brought still another break for the set, 6—1.

It was 2—0 in favor of Williams in the final session before the boy could score again. Then he managed to break through the Harvard man's delivery with some effective chopping off service, passing Williams cleanly as he came in. His own serve made it 2 all, and it looked like a real contest again. But this was only a momentary lull. Williams won a deuce game on service and then upset his rival's delivery in a similar affair, scoring with a great cross-court shot after Richards had apparently beaten him with a spectacular volley. A love game on service made it 5—2 in favor of Williams. Facing certain defeat, the national indoor champion lost his grip, and brought up the match point with a double fault. Williams needed no further opportunity. He drove the ball to the exact and precise corner of the court. Richards took one look at the intersection of the chalk-marks, ran to the net and shook hands. It was all over with the 6—2 victory.

Mahan's Errors Help Lycett.

In the first match of the day, staged within the grandstand inclosure, Lyle E. Mahan began like a winner against the Australian, R. V. Thomas, but fell into disastrous errors after losing his early lead. At the start the tall westsider was hitting harder and more accurately than his rival, winning his first service at love, and breaking through for a 3—2 advantage by lobbing neatly to the baseline, as Thomas stood close in, and then back-handing a fast one to the Anzac's left which could not be volleyed.

But Mahan missed a good chance to put the set on ice against Thomas's next delivery, and then dropped his own on errors, squaring the games, 4—all. Both players then won on service up to 6—all. Mahan, however, gave a foretaste of errors to come by missing an easy volley which allowed the visitor to reach 6—5, and then almost lost his own service by flubbing a set-up overhead. After taking the odd, 7—6, through the faulty execution of the New Yorker's well intended shots, Thomas put away the set, 8—6, with a beautiful smash from deep court, and was never thereafter in danger. A remarkably quick two-handed volley gave him an immediate break in the second set, and as Mahan threw back the balls with good-natured disgust, he seemed to realize that his chances for victory were gone. His slump became more and more abysmal after this timely shot, his missing of the side-line with the easy smash of a high bounder being the last of his troubles. Trailing at 2—5 he again dropped his service and was two sets down with the 6—2 decision.

The third was even easier for the Australian. He ran ahead to 4—0 without serious opposition, winning his own opening service at love and twice breaking through that of Mahan. Then the losing player managed to score, with the delivery against him, but immediately lost his hold again and threw away his last chance as the score mounted to 5—1. Thomas served carefully, and quickly completed his triumph with a 6—1 score.

Leroy's Sensational Victory.

Leroy's sensational victory over Griffin was staged on an outside court and was one of the last matches of the day to be completed. The former doubles champion looked like an easy winner when he romped through the first two sets at 6—4 and 6—2, outguessing the Columbia veteran in his placements and cutting off most of his drives at the net. But eventually the pace began to tell on the little Californian, and Leroy's depressing steadiness gradually took the edge off his game. Driving ahead methodically from deep court and coming to the net only to finish off the sure points, Leroy proceeded to win a set at 6—2, and then, gathering speed and confidence as his opponent tired, rushed on to square the match with a love set. The rubber was hard fought, but Leroy had just a little more strength left for the pinches and pulled out a well-earned victory at 6—4.

Another back-court player of the steady old school, G. A. L. Dionne, gave a lot of trouble to Griffin's fellow-Californian and doubles partner, William M. Johnston. The 1915 champion, using his fast forehand drive and accurate volleying to good effect, captured the opening set without great difficulty at 6—2, but required a 7—5 score to land the second, as Dionne became more and more familiar with his shots. The West Side veteran, continuing to cover his court superbly, and going after everything with splendid courage, actually took the lead in the next set and eventually won it 8—6 in spite of the Californian's best efforts. In the final session Dionne tired under the fast pace and Johnston battered his way to victory at 6—4.

Brookes Is Unworried.

Norman Brookes was not worried by the left-handed shots of young Walter Wesbrook in his first two sets, winning both without the loss of a game. But in the third the Detroit junior steadied down and had a lead of 4—2 before the Australian could recover his stride. Good volleying, however, saved the situation for the veteran, and he ran four games in a row for the set and match.

Ichiya Kumagae was not extended in defeating Ludlow Vandeventer, and William T. Tilden 2d had no trouble taking three sets, at 6—2 each, from "Duke" Thomas. McLoughlin's win over Clyde Curley was also one-sided. C. B. Doyle followed up his sensational elimination of S. H. Voshell by a decisive defeat of the Brooklyn junior. Cecil Donaldson, while Frank Anderson, another young Brooklynite, triumphed in straight sets over Von Bernuth, the former Columbia captain. Washburn, Parker, Niles, Wallace Johnson, Peil, Hall, Biddle, Garland, Hammett, H. H. Bassford, Beekman, Chambers and Kynaston were among the remaining winners of the day, the last named receiving a default from R. C. Seaver, who had to return to Boston to manage a local tournament.

Today's pairings are as follows: L. E. Williams vs. R. L. Murray; C. B. Doyle vs. F. T. Anderson; W. M. Washburn vs. G. L. Patterson; H. S. Parker vs. W. M. Johnston; N. W. Niles vs. J. B. McLOUGHLIN FOOLS POLICE.

Tennis Wizard Leaves $10 Deposit for Speeding and Escapes Trial.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, the tennis "comet" of California, was summoned by Motorcycle Policeman Repp to appear in police court today for speeding along the Boston Post Road at a rate of forty miles an hour. McLoughlin told the officer he was on his way from the opening match of the national series at Forest Hills, L. I., to keep a dinner engagement with friends in Connecticut. He was driving a high-powered car. He said he was 29 years old and a merchant, when not playing tennis. McLoughlin deposited $10 with the court when told he would have to appear for examination. This morning he failed to appear and the deposit was declared forfeited.

MISS BJURSTEDT WINNER.

Former and Present Champions Among Survivors at Cedarhurst.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the former women's national champion; Miss Helene Pollak; Mrs. Marshall McLean; Mrs. Edward Raymond; Mrs. George W. Wightman, the present title-holder; Miss Margaret Grove; Mrs. S. E. Waring, and Miss Marion Zinderstein are the eight survivors in the invitation tennis tournament held this week on the turf courts of the Rockaway Hunting Club, Cedarhurst, L. I., and will meet in that order today for the honor of playing in the semi-finals.

Among the prominent teams still left in the doubles event are Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver, and Mrs. Wightman and Miss Zinderstein, the indoor national champions. The tournament has drawn the largest and most representative entry list in its history. All matches are played in the morning, so as not to conflict with the men's national championship at Forest Hills.

WARD RETAINS NET TITLE.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 27.—In a decidedly well played match that produced exceptional tennis Holcombe Ward of Davis Cup fame today succeeded in defending his title of singles champion of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club on the club courts by defeating Bernon S. Prentice, the many times club champion, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

The former internationalist displayed astonishing cleverness in returning the slashing cross-court drives of his more limber competitor. Although compelled repeatedly to drive from the base line the club champion watched his opportunity to come to the net, and he worked across deceptive returns.

In the opening set Prentice showed unlimited speed and accuracy. With the games 4 all, Prentice failed to take his service game, due to constant netting. Then Ward, leading at 5—4, took his service game and first set at 6—4. Prentice failed to keep his stride in the two following sets.

In defeating Prentice the singles title holder retains the crown for his third consecutive year. In 1917 Ward won from Prentice, who had then held the title seven successive seasons.

TENNIS IN ARGENTINA.

Buenos Aires Clubs Want British Teams to Compete There.

Lawn tennis has always been popular in Argentina, but never so much so as at present. An indication of this fact is contained in the invitation just sent by the Argentine Lawn Tennis Association to the British Association to organize a team to compete in Argentina. Among the leading players in the highly popular tennis clubs in Buenos Aires are the brothers E. S. and H. B. Knight, who competed in the English championships at Wimbledon in 1909, the latter losing to S. N. Doust only after a hard five-set match. Mr. Doust was twice a member of Australian teams competing in Davis Cup matches in this country.

It is understood that Mlle. Lenglen, the French tennis marvel, who many now regard as the premier woman player of the world, and who is expected to visit the United States, is also being approached with regard to a visit to Argentina. The Argentine clubs have sent a representative to England and the Continent—Mr. Villegas—to confer upon tennis matters.

WOMEN GOLFERS IN THIRD ROUND

DETROIT, Aug. 27.—Six Chicago women and one each from Detroit and Memphis will play tomorrow in the third round of the women's Western golf tournament at the Detroit Golf Club for places in the semi-finals Friday, as a result of their victories today in the second round. They are Miss Dorothy Higbie, Mrs. F. C. Letts, Jr., Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson, Mrs. E. Foreman, Miss Marjorie Edwards, and Mrs. P. Fisk, Chicago; Mrs. W. G. McGiverin, Detroit, and Mrs. David Gaut, Memphis.

The only missing player, previously counted among the favorites, is Miss Frances Hadfield, Milwaukee, who was eliminated, 4 and 2, today by Miss Higbie, an unheralded Chicago girl. Their play on the first nine was strong. Miss Higbie gained 1 up on the third hole. Both became wild on starting the second half and from then on played erratic golf. Poor putting at this stage cost Miss Hadfield two holes.

Mrs. E. F. Byfield of Chicago collapsed when Mrs. W. G. McGiverin of Detroit holed her putt on the seventeenth green, ending the match, 2 and 1. She recovered immediately and was able to walk to the clubhouse. The match was hard fought and the strain told on Mrs. Byfield.

Mrs. Gaut continued in the play only after a hard contest with Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago, which ended on the eighteenth green. The Memphis woman was compelled to take the last three holes to win. She squared the match by holing a long putt on the seventeenth, and ended it on the eighteenth when Miss Cummings pitched into a ditch at the green.

Mrs. Letts played her best golf of the tournament while winning from Miss Jeannette Kinney, Cleveland, 7 and 6. Mrs. Jackson eliminated Miss Madge Miller, Grand Rapids, 6 and 5.

KEMBLE WINS AT MERION.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Francis W. Kemble of the Merion Cricket Club won the final round of the invitation golf tournament of the Merion Cricket Club this afternoon by defeating A. Kammer of Baltusrol, 3 up and 1 to play. A silver vase was presented to Kemble.

In the final round of the second sixteen G. E. Morse of Rutland, Vt., won over C. C. Ingraham of Huntingdon Valley, 2 up and 1 to play.

At the turn in the final match Kemble was leading Kammer by 5 up. The Baltusrol player, however, settled down and at the sixteenth hole he was 2 down, with a chance to even the match on the next two holes. Kemble, however, won the match when he sank a thirty-foot putt.

Their cards:

Kemble—

Kammer—
Out	5	6	5	4	6	5	7	4	5—47
In	5	3	5	2	4	4	4	4

In the semi-finals Kammer defeated W. J. Platt of North Hills this morning by 2 up. Kemble defeated J. B. Rose of the Allegheny Country Club, 3 and 2.

The entry of Kammer was a surprise. One of the officials declared that Sidney C. Sharwood of Merion, who was returned a winner over Kammer, was unable to play today. A vote of the golf committee, however, decided that Sharwood lost the match on a technicality.

Playing the eighteenth hole yesterday Kammer and Sharwood were all square. Sharwood knocked his ball into the woods, and it was finally found after a search that lasted nearly fifteen minutes. No protest was made by Kammer, although the rules provide that after five minutes' search without the ball being found the hole must be given [illegible] he therefore gave the match to Kammer.

[illegible] morning match between Rose and Kemble proved another upset, as Rose was the decided favorite. Kemble, who has just returned from service in France, played steady golf, and Rose never had a chance.

Their cards:

PROTECTING TENNIS COURTS

Postponements because of rain have occurred in both the national doubles and national singles tennis tournaments this season and in both cases, more as a result of the soggy condition of the ground than because of an actual downpour at the scheduled time for the matches. Thus far no covering for the courts sufficiently protective to keep them ready for use, immediately after the rain has ceased, seems to have been devised in this country, but reports have reached here from England as to the effectiveness of a water proof cover used at the championship matches at Wimbledon this year. The use of such a protection, at least for the championship court, might well solve a difficult problem for the committees in charge of American tournaments.

The cover used at Wimbledon is constructed of specially waxed rot-proof canvas made up in two sections, each measuring 10 feet by 39 feet. Along the inner edges of the two sections and pocketed in the material are two steel hawsers terminated by shackles at either end. Each outside edge of the cover is secured by lashing to hooks cemented into the concrete bed in which the drainage is laid. For the purpose of uniting the two inner edges of the cover, wooden toggles and rope loops at intervals of about one yard are attached. To the centre of the cover is sewn a canvas storm flap to protect the join. This is fastened at its other edge to metal loops on the main cover.

At each end of the court are specially selected pitch pine masts, measuring 20 feet in height. These can be lowered laterally into the concrete trench. The masts are pivoted at the ground level, and the lower parts heavily weighted on the cantilever principle. When erected they are secured by wire stays, which are adjusted and pulled up to tension by screw dogs. From winches bolted to concrete beds at each end of court, steel hawsers (at the ends of which are hooks) are passed over the tops of the mast, the hooks being attached to the shackles already mentioned. The cover is then ready to be raised; two men working each winch are the only power required.

The drainage, constructed in concrete covered by an iron grill, runs down both sides of the court. These channels are joined up by means of drain pipes, running into a cesspool which is connected up with the main drainage.

This cover is said to be highly practical. It was invented by Edward Clive, who spent much time in experimenting, and has since carried out various improvements, including the raising of the height at the centre. The All England Club is with its aid able to defy the weather. Within two minutes of heavy rain falling the whole of the centre court surface with its surrounds can be completely protected and rendered waterproof.

QUAKERS LOOK DANGEROUS.

Philadelphia Promises Strong Golfers for Lesley Cup Matches.

One significant feature of the national amateur golf championship held recently at the Oakmont links in Pittsburgh was the fine showing made by youngsters from the Philadelphia district, which forecasts a formidable team from the City of Brotherly Love in the Lesley Cup matches, which will take place in October over the difficult national course near Southampton. Usually the Lesley Cup contest is strictly a New York-Boston affair, and the principal part of Philadelphia in the program has been generally confined to taking a graceful defeat and furnishing the trophy for the winners, as Robert W. Lesley, donor of the cup, is one of the oldest of Philadelphia golfers, and a moving spirit in the Merion Cricket Club.

When Howard Perrin was elected to the Presidency of the U. S. G. A. in 1916 he admitted the weakness of his home section in prominent players at that time, but he spoke enthusiastically of the younger element which he saw developing, and he predicted the rise to prominence of the youngsters who have lately rushed to the fore. Of the four youthful Philadelphians who made such a good showing at the national title tilt, three only are really products of the Quaker City training ground, George Hoffner of Bala, E. D. Cleary of the same club, and J. Wood Platt of North Hills. The fourth stellar member was Paul Tewksbury of Aronimink, but although he is now a member of a Philadelphia club and a resident in that district, he is properly a New England golfer, as he learned the game and was quite a shining light in the Boston area a few years back. He attained publicity, if not prominence, by being included in the famous ruling of the U. S. G. A. which barred himself, Jack Sullivan and Francis Ouimet from playing amateur golf under the jurisdiction of the parent golf body.

Tewksbury was the only golfer in the qualifying field to break 80 twice over the difficult Oakmont course. He scored two 79s and tied for the medal with J. S. Manion of Forest Park, St. Louis, and "Davie" Herron, the new amateur champion. When Manion left Pittsburgh without waiting for the play-off, Tewksbury fell heir to the medal, as Herron concluded he had gained enough honors by winning the championship and the American golfer team trophy with Grant Peacock.

In addition to these four golfers, who figured so prominently at Oakmont, Philadelphia has at least two more youngsters in reserve, Norman Maxwell, now playing from Woodbury, and Fred Knight of Atlantic City, without counting the veteran, Maurice Risley, who holds a hereditary right to win the Atlantic City Spring tournament each year. Taken all in all, this improvement in the golf prospects of the Quaker City team should furnish fine competition at the National links, as Francis Ouimet will undoubtedly lead a strong band of determined Bostonians to Southampton. And even if the metropolitan stars were somewhat dim at Oakmont, it is not to be expected that Marston, Kirby, White, Anderson, Travers et al. have permanently retired as high-class golfers.

Just how deleterious prolonged teaching can be to the game of a good professional is showing in the case of Frank Eastman of Van Cortlandt Park. Not so long ago Eastman was playing a fine game that promised much for future open competitions, but teaching the average Van Cortlandt "dubs" year in and year out, without much competitive play to keep him in shape, has put him off his game. He explains much of it himself by saying that he is used to showing beginners their faults that he unconsciously imitates them himself nowadays. With hardly a single letup, he instructs all Summer on the hillside above the thirteenth tee, and through the Fall, Winter, and Spring he is industriously endeavoring to persuade the duffers to "keep that head down" in the combination indoor-outdoor school which is placed between the golf shop and the lake.

The many experts, most of whom are self-styled, who have been debating for years over the position of the left-hand and the fingers in the interlocking and overlapping grips, to the great advantage of the white paper trade, will have a chance at the Engineers' links to realize how little they know about the royal and ancient game. In fact, this was shown at Shackamaxon, but as the discussions still continue, it is probable the experts kept to their usual courses and disregarded all facts that run counter to their theories. The rift in the lute is the playing of Louis Martucci, the White Beeches professional, who was one of the twelve pros from the metropolitan section of the P. G. A. to qualify for the championship of the association and the Wanamaker Trophy over the Engineers' links this coming month. Martucci plays without any left-hand at all, as his entire left arm was lost in an accident when he was a small boy. In spite of this handicap, he does everything that experts say cannot be done without use of the left hand. He gets fine distance, has good control, and putts well, thus totally disarranging the highly technical chart drawings and force diagrams of "those who know."

FRENCHMEN WIN DOUBLES.

DEAUVILLE, France, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—In the doubles tennis matches played today, in connection with the selection of a team to meet the Australians for the Davis Cup, the French team, consisting of Andre Gobert and W. H. Laurentz, defeated the British pair, H. Roper Barrett and R. M. K. Turnbull, 6—0, 6—1, 12—10.

The final matches in singles will be played tomorrow, with Gobert, France, pitted against Algernon R. F. Kingscote, England, and Davson, England, against Laurentz.

If the Frenchmen win one of the matches, their team will be entitled to meet the Australians for the Davis trophy.

The Anglo-French Davis Cup semi-finals, which started in Deauville, France, Monday, Aug. 25, and continue through today, is one of the few series played for that trophy in which non-turf surfaces have been used. When France opposed Germany in Wiesbaden in 1913, the contests were staged on clay courts. In the present arrangement between the British and the French associations, it was agreed by the British authorities to disregard the turf-court precedent, out of consideration for the French governing body, which several times had sent teams to England to compete under unfamiliar conditions, and, accordingly, it was decided to meet the French on their own ground. The French are not accustomed to playing upon any but clay courts.

That this concession was an exercise of British sportsmanship is evidenced in the fact that British critics consider the change of surfaces inimical to the chances of their representatives, incidentally advocating a sufficient provision of clay courts in England so that practice could be obtained in the event of the recurrence of such an emergency. English opinion as to the present meeting is that players like Mavrogordato and Roper Barrett, whose tactics are almost purely defensive, are placed at an obvious disadvantage on a fast sand or clay court, especially against an expert of the speedy tendencies of the champion Frenchman, André Gobert.

KEEN COMPETITION IN NEWPORT SHOW

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 27.—Many interesting competitors marked the first day of the twenty-third annual Horse Show at the Newport Casino grounds this afternoon, the jumping especially attracting great attention. Several heavy showers fell but the show went on nevertheless. A good-sized crowd attended, and the prospects are that the show will be the best seen here in years. While there are not as many New York exhibitors as before there are many new entries and all of the old standbys.

The first performances were those of the novice classes. For single harness horses A. I. Claire, one of the string of A. W. Atkinson of Merchantville, N. J., took first honors. Paddington, the bay gelding of N. A. Barrows, carried first prize for the novice saddle horses. Firefly, an entry of Mrs. A. R. Moffett of New Hampshire, took the honors for novice ponies in harness, and Isaac H. Clothier's Trixter of Philadelphia was first in the novice jumpers class.

There was close competition in the class for ladies' saddle horses in which Mrs. Walter H. Hanley of Providence scored the only Hanley win of the day. Miss Eleonora Sears of Boston has a number of her horses entered, and she was prominent in the ring during several of the classes today and scored well up among the winners. This was especially true in the closing class of the day, that for jumpers open to all, when she divided honors with I. H. Clothier, Jr., of Philadelphia. Miss Sears taking first and second places.

The summaries:

Class 4—Neptune Novice Single Harness Horses.—Won by A. W. Atkinson's A. I. Claire; Miss E. R. Sears's Scotsman, second; Sandy Point Farm's Sandy Point Fashion, third; Miss Sears's Mary Marlborough, fourth.

Class 25—Seafoam Novice Saddle Horses, any height.—Won by N. A. Barrow's Paddington; William Almy, Jr.'s, Vanity, second; R. S. Moore's Victory Boy, third; Baron de Brueggen's Sea Princess, fourth.

SMITH SAYS STATE NEGLECTS HEALTH

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Governor Smith, addressing the Convention of the State Federation of Labor here today, assured the delegates that in his next message to the Legislature he would strongly recommend the enactment of measures providing for health insurance, minimum wage, and an eight-hour day for women.

Senator Henry M. Davenport, who introduced the Health Insurance bill which passed the Senate last Spring, declared he is finding agreement on all sides, even among employers who opposed it at the outset, that health insurance is to be tried in this country.

"The great body of independent workers, like those who demand this legislation in the State of New York, will soon demand it throughout the country, and they are the greatest bulwark against radicalism that we have in America," the Senator said.

Commissioner James M. Lynch of the State Industrial Commission declared the "welfare bills," so called, "are not matters of partisan politics but of social progress."

Want Peace Treaty Ratified.

The convention adopted resolutions urging Congress to ratify the Peace Treaty and the covenant of the League of Nations, indorsed and urged the nationalization of railroads, with due consideration to the interests of owners, and recommended municipal ownership of public utilities. Absorption of the telephone and telegraph systems as part of the Post Office Department was advocated.

The convention recommended the establishment of Federal loan banks for the lending of money to wage workers for home building. Its housing program includes creation of revolving funds by municipalities for the erection of individual homes to be sold on long-term payments.

The convention was given another decided sensation this morning when Michael Colleran of New York declared that unless a change was made in the attitude of New York contractors that city is likely to see a repetition of the race riots of Washington and Chicago.

Mr. Colleran is President of the New York organization of union plasterers and cement finishers. On the floor of the convention he criticised New York contractors for the importation last Saturday of 300 colored strikebreakers from the South. He said that some fights between whites and blacks already had taken place and that the feeling that had been aroused, if conditions continue, might develop until race riots generally would grip New York.

He condemned New York contractors for holding up reconstruction work in New York, and asked that a special committee from the State Federation be appointed to confer with State committees investigating reconstruction problems and inform them of the true condition of affairs.

President Holland assured him that such a committee would be appointed.

The unionists voiced criticism of certain provisions of the Peace Treaty, and made pledges to work for a revision "on more just lines." These provisions were held to be such, however, that they could be overcome later and that the best interests of all nations would be served at this time by the ratification.

Charges Neglect of Health.

Charges that the State is spending millions of dollars for the conservation of forests, but that it is not conserving the health and strength of its people, were made by Governor Smith at the opening of the convention. He charged specifically that "reactionary interests" in Albany anr blocking proper labor legislative programs, and that a change is necessary. He said:

I have always viewed labo differently than the reactionaries in Albany, and I hope we can put through an industrial reform bill which will be of great benefit to the State.

We think little of the millions that we spend in conserving our forests, but at the same time we give little thought to the State's greatest asset —the health and welfare of the people.

While the reactionary interests control the Legislature we shall have to fight for the passage of adequate industrial reform bills. But any farseeing man knows that it is only a question of time before these measures will go through.

The men who are blocking industrial reform measures today are men of little foresight. But they must see the light or they will be replaced by men of our modern day, who understand the needs and demands of the new days.

ASSAILS MAYOR'S REPORT

Citizens Union Says Hylan's Review Is His "Advance Alibi."

The Citizens Union issued a statement yesterday replying to Mayor Hylan's review of what his administration accomplished since the signing of the armistice. It termed the Mayor's report, "his advance alibi for the great increase in the amount of the next budget, which is now in preparation."

During his election campaign, the Citizens Union says, the Mayor promised reduced budgets, but this year's figure was $10,000,000 higher than the preceding budget, while next year's will show an even greater increase over this year's total. The statement continues in part:

"The Mayor preens himself on the expansion of the city's borrowing capacity. Practically the whole of that, however, was due to increased valuations of real estate, to the judicial determination that certain rapid transit bonds were self-sustaining, to the redemption of certain maturing bonds and the payment of sinking fund instalments on others, and to the rescindment by the present Board of Estimate of over ten million dollars' worth of public improvements, chiefly the marginal railway of Brooklyn, for which the last Administration had made reservations of corporate stock.

"Mayor Hylan boasts of a barely reduced tax rate, but the manipulation which accomplished that has already been exposed by the Citizens Union.

"Of course, no one will take seriously the Mayor's implication that the city's investments in the subways was wasted money.

"The Mayor's statement that the Citizens' Union this year supported mandatory legislation at Albany that increased New York City's financial burden by several million dollars is misleading and untrue. The Citizens Union opposed more than 100 mandatory salary increase bills or mandatory bills proposing administrative changes that would have entailed heavy expenditures on the city.

"The only bill which the Citizens' Union approved which added to the city's financial burden was the State-wide bill providing new salary schedules for school teachers of the State. The Citizens Union accepted this bill as a necessary measure to keep the educational system of the State up to its high standard of efficiency and usefulness."

TO WELCOME MAJOR NAGLE.

The Democratic organization of the Twentieth Assembly District, which takes in the upper east side of Harlem, will hold a Summernight's festival this evening, at the Harlem River Casino, 126th Street and Second Avenue, as a reception and welcome home to its leader, Major Percy Nagle, from France.

Major Nagle has been leader of the Harlem wing of the Tammany organization for years. He abandoned his political leadership to serve with the army. A number of Democratic leaders from Manhattan and the Bronx, including Charles F. Murphy, leader, and Representative Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall, are expected to be present.

Labor Party Rallies for Curly.

The American Labor Party of New York City announced yesterday that two district organization meetings will be held tonight in behalf of the candidacy of Thomas F. Curly, the party's nominee for President of the Board of Aldermen. One meeting, for the Twelfth Assembly District, will be held at Halcyon Hall, 537 Third Avenue, and the other, for the Sixteenth Assembly District, will be held at Maennerchor Hall, Ninety-second Street and Second Avenue.

OUR FLIERS TO AID POLES.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—An American aviation squadron is being formed in Paris on the line of the Lafayette Escadrille to fight with the Poles against the Bolsheviki. Major M. C. Fauntleroy of Chicago and Captain M. C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., have received official authorization from General Rosvedowski, head of the Polish Military Mission, to form the squadron, which will consist of aviators who, like themselves, have seen service in war aviation.

Among the members already enrolled are Lieutenant George M. Crawford of Wilmington, Del.; Lieutenant Kenneth Shrewsbury of Huntington, W. Va.; Lieutenant Edward J. Corsi of Brooklyn, and Lieutenant Carl H. Clark of Tulsa, Okla. The squadron will be christened the Kosciusko Squadron, after the Polish national hero and Washington's aid de camp.

The American squadron is expected to go to Poland on Sept. 15. Its members will hold the same rank as they held in the American Army, but with the corresponding Polish pay, the men sacrificing the higher American pay. No length of service is specified, but the aviators will not be called upon to serve more than a year.

Dutch Aroused by Alleged Annexation Efforts.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 26.—It has been announced here that the Dutch Government has received from the Belgian Foreign Office a copy of a confidential document sent by that office to military headquarters in Belgium, portions of which have been published in the press and caused such a stir here and in Belgium. The note in question bears the date of May 30, not July 3. To the request of the Dutch press to be allowed to publish the full text the Dutch Government replied that the question of publication of the Belgian official document should be left to the Belgian Government itself to decide.

Meanwhile it appears the note de service was issued by the Belgian Foreign Office and that therefore Minister Hymans is responsible for it. It seems, too, that the portions published are essentially correct, although the date first announced was incorrect.

It is declared here that the Belgian Government did not refrain from sending agents into a friendly country to induce the subjects (in this case Dutch citizens) to be guilty of treason to their own land, and, in fact, that the Belgian Government has been practicing annexationism in an inadmissible form. The Flemish press is unanimous in denunciation of such methods, declaring them to be exact copies of the ways followed by the Prussians when in Belgium.

Dutch feeling was rather forcibly presented to me one day lately when I was asked, "What would England have answered if Germany had won the war and demanded a strip of Kent to secure the other side of the Channel opposite the Belgian coast?"

PARIS, Aug. 27.—While rumors have been current in Paris during the last few days of increased tension between Holland and Belgium because of the Dutch reply to the Belgian case on the revision of the treaty of 1839, with intimations of a rupture of negotiations, the real attitude of the Belgians remains one purely of expectancy. The flying visit of Foreign Minister Hymans to Premier Clemenceau yesterday had as its object a matter entirely unconnected with this question.

It is even improbable that the Belgians will make a rejoinder to the Dutch reply for the moment. It is considered likely that they will leave the matter entirely to the commission and the Conference to pursue as they see fit.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The departure of the American steamer Ashbourne from Queenstown last evening after undergoing repairs was the occasion of a remarkable demonstration by admirers of the Captain of the vessel, who, it will be remembered, created a surprise about a month since by flying the Sinn Fein colors from that vessel.

As it was known that the Ashbourne was to sail last evening preparations were made to give her a great Sinn Fein send-off. Accordingly when the steamer hove in sight with the Irish Republican flag at the foremast head she was received with loud cheers by the crowds gathered along foreshore.

BLAMES ENGINE FOR WRECK.

Engineer Says Escaping Steam Hid Caution Signal.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 27.—Prosecutor Edmund C. Gaskill, Jr., who is directing New Jersey's investigation into the wreck of two Washington excursion sections Sunday morning, was informed today that a faulty engine was responsible for the collision which killed one person and injured twenty-two other passengers.

Ralph J. Townsend of 737 Buckley Street, Camden, engineer of the second of the sections which rammed the cars in front, was held responsible for the crash by a commission of railroad experts, appointed by R. L. O'Donnell, a general manager of the Pennsylvania lines. The commission reported that the engineer's failure to see a yellow caution signal 4,400 feet from the scene of the wreck made it impossible for him to bring his train to a stop in time. Townsend, on his cot in the City Hospital today, declares he "will not be the goat."

"The engineer I relieved at Philadelphia told me to report my engine as soon as we reached Atlantic City," the Camden engineman said. "The metallic piston packing on the right side of the locomotive was emitting steam so badly that we could see nothing while traversing the Philadelphia tunnel."

"This is a serious situation," Prosecutor Gaskill said. "Apparently the engine crew came across Jersey on the chance. It was next to impossible for them to see any signals. Somebody should be made to explain why a defective engine was permitted to leave Philadelphia."

Three burglars attacked George Brewster yesterday morning in his home at 430 West Fifty-sixth Street, but he put them to flight, and in the pursuit of one of them over roofs and through halls Patrolman Foy fired ten revolver shots and arrested a man at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street. When Brewster was awakened and stepped from his room one of the thieves attacked him until Brewster's father blew a police whistle at a window. Then they fled in different directions, each followed by a patrolman.

The man Patrolman Foy followed got to the roof of a nearby house and then to the street again through a skylight further on, while Foy emptied his weapon and reloaded it. His prisoner, who said he was Joseph Lyman, 31 years old, of 535 West Fifty-second Street, was arraigned in the West Side Court on a charge of grand larceny. He denied the charge. Magistrate Sweetzer held him in bail of $2,500 for the Grand Jury. The men pursued by the other policemen escaped.

COHAN OFFERS NEW TERMS TO ACTORS

EXCEPT RECOGNIZING EQUITY

$100,000 TO ACTORS' FUND

Cohan, No Longer In the Managers' Association, Says He May Never Act Again.

George M. Cohan, no longer a member of the Managers' Producing Association, last night laid before a thousand actors and actresses at the Hotel Biltmore the terms of the new contract which the managers now offer to the people of the theatrical profession. Simultaneously—as an actor and "with clean hands"—Mr. Cohan took office as President of the Actors' Fidelity League.

The contract now put forward by the managers is the trump card in their fight against recognition of the Actors' Equity Association, and the one which they believe will break the strike. Not only does it grant every demand made by the Actors' Equity Association—with the sole exception of recognition of that body as the actors' official arbiter—but it upsets the age-long tradition of the theatre in granting further concessions.

George Cohan, tense and white, read the terms of this contract and then leaned far over the speakers' table to address the assembled players.

"And let me tell you one thing!" he shouted. "I don't want to pin any bouquets on myself, but don't let any one tell you that the Actors' Equity Association is responsible for this! I'm responsible for this!"

Terms Offered to Actors.

Eight performances shall constitute a week, and proportionate payment is to be made for all performances over this number. (Refusal to consider this demand, when put forward by the Actors' Equity Association two months ago, is what led directly to the strike.)

There shall be four weeks of free rehearsals for dramatic productions, and full salaries are to be paid for all over that time. (The greatest demand of the Equity was for half pay over four weeks and full pay over six.)

There shall be five weeks of free rehearsals for musical productions, with full pay thereafter. This applies to chorus as well as principals.

If a play is rehearsed ten days, and then abandoned, one week's salary is to be paid.

In the event of a dispute the manager is to appoint one arbiter and the actors one, and if they fail to agree within three days a third arbiter, outside the theatrical profession, is to be appointed. His decision is to be final; no law suits are to be brought.

After the present season full salaries are to be paid for Holy Week and the week before Christmas, whether or not the actor is required to play. During the coming season salaries will be paid when companies play.

A Crisis in the Strike.

With the offer of this contract to the players, in the opinion of observers, comes a crisis in the strike. If a majority of the Equity members, feeling that everything for which they have been fighting has been attained, should join the new association, this will be a big step toward the coming of peace. Even in this event the problem of the striking stagehands and musicians will not be solved, and it is by no means certain that the Equity, now that it has enlisted the aid of the other unions, will be in position to cease to strike.

The Equity Association, it is pointed out, can declare with some justice that it has brought the new conditions about, and will thus be in a position to retire from the strike as victors. On the other hand, it is possible that objection will be found with the provision for arbitration, since this clause does not give the actors' association power to arbitrate for him, but requires him as an individual to settle his differences with the manager.

The meeting at the Biltmore last night was marked by the wildest enthusiasm, and George Cohan was again loudly acclaimed as he took the chair. He announced during the evening that his decision to contribute $100,000 to the association was irrevocable, and gave his check to William Collier, treasurer, in testimony thereof. When the association declined to accept it he ordered that the money be sent to the Actors' Fund.

"I told you I'd give $106,000 to this organization, and I've given it," said Cohan. "And if you want another $100,000 you can have it, and another, and another, and another, and another! That's the kind of a little guy I am!"

Although no longer a member of the Managers' Association, Mr. Cohan continues a member of the firm of Cohan & Harris. He said last night that he had contracts to fulfill, some of them for five years, and that until they were fulfilled he must continue a member of the firm.

Cohan Says He May Act No More.

"After that I don't care what happens," he said. "I don't think I'll ever produce again; I don't think I'll ever act again. I've been hurt—terribly hurt. All I want now is to see the theatre righted, and then I'll go some place and hide—Great Neck, or even Providence."

Mr. Cohan's resignation from the Producing Managers' Association was submitted to that body at the end of a meeting yesterday afternoon.

The full force of the new association turned out last night to witness Mr. Cohan's induction into office. Among those who sat at the Directors' table were: David Warfield, William Collier, Louis Mann, Mrs. Fiske, Janet Beecher, Holbrook Blinn, Lenore Ulric, George MacFarlane, Julia Arthur, Gladys Hanson, Lowell Sherman, and Howard Kyle.

All of these players and others will take part in a benefit performance to be arranged immediately. The membership of the association is now more than 1,900.

From the Equity offices came news of additional activities of a production nature. "The Equity Revue" will be the entertainment which will open at the Second Avenue Theatre next Monday night. Lionel Barrymore, in the final act of "The Copperhead," will head the program at the Lexington Theatre next week. Most of this week's Lexington program will be moved to the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, and many entertainers will go to Chicago to appear at the Auditorium Theatre in that city.

"The attitude of the managers in refusing to recognize the actors or recognize their right to collective representation is unwarranted and unjust. In those circumstances I am going to support the actors, and every resource of the American Federation of Labor will be used to aid them in winning the strike."

Mr. Gompers last night attended the Equity performance at the Lexington Theatre, but, although there were loud cries for a speech, he refused to make an address.

It was said last night at the Hotel Continental that two representatives of the Actors' Equity Association and a representative of the Producing Managers' Association had had audiences with Mr. Gompers during the day. Mr. Gompers last night refused to comment on what had taken place.

Justice Peter A. Hendrick, in accordance with his decision of Monday, yesterday signed the first of a series of restraining orders, prohibiting officers of the Actors' Equity Association, or any of its members, from interfering in any way with the presentation of "A Regular Feller" at the Cort Theatre. Among the other plays which will be covered by these orders are the "Ziegfeld Follies" and "Lightnin'." The first of the injunctions, covering eleven typewritten pages, was signed in the offices of Davies, Auerbach & Cornell, at 34 Nassau Street, early last evening, and the remaining half dozen will be signed today.

Equity officials repeated that the immediate effect of these orders will be slight, since all seven of the shows named in the injunctions have been compelled to close, and there was no desire on the part of the Equity to picket empty theatres. Inasmuch as Justice Hendrick had decided also that an actor could not be compelled to work, it was inferred that these theatres would remain closed.

The case of the actors, it was repeated, had not been put in, and therefore the decision of Justice Hendrick to sign injunctions was based solely upon the evidence submitted by the managers.

Motion Picture Men's Demands.

The prospect that the motion pictures may be drawn into the strike was increased by the announcement yesterday that the Motion Picture Workers' Union of Greater New York, which includes managers, special officers, ushers, doormen, ticket takers, and porters, would be granted a charter by the American Federation of Labor in a few days. When this is received, their counsel said, the organization will demand increased wages, better hours, and better working conditions. These demands will be made next month, and if they are not met it will be possible for the organization to close every motion picture house in New York.

Alf Hayman, of Charles Frohman, Inc., yesterday denied that there is a possibility of an Equity show playing in the Empire Theatre, as reported yesterday. Mr. Hayman said also that he had received a letter from Robert Hilliard, announcing his resignation from the Actors' Equity Association.

TO TRANSFER ACTORS' HEARING

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 27.—As the result of a conference today between Levy Mayer, attorney for the Producing Managers' Association, and Daniel L. Cruice, for the striking actors, it was decided to transfer the actors' court hearing to New York. Master in Chancery Sigmund Zeisler, the attorneys on both sides, and probably the Master's bailiff, will reopen the case in that city next week.

Mr. Mayer received a telegram this morning calling him to New York. He said he would confer with the producing managers on details of the hearing. A conference will be held Saturday in Mr. Zeisler's office to set the time and place for the New York hearing.

The actors said today that 1,000 persons had joined the Actors' Equity Association here since the strike was called.

SHIP BLOWS UP AT SEA.

YARMOUTH, N. S., Aug. 27.—Captain Jorgensen and the crew of eleven men of the Lawrence (Texas) auxiliary schooner Elmir Roberts, bound from Bordeaux, France, to New York, were landed here this morning by the Yarmouth fishing schooner Roseway, in charge of Captain Peter White. Captain Jorgensen reported that his vessel was loaded with ammunition, and about midnight of last Thursday she caught on fire when a lamp exploded in the engine room.

The flames spread with great rapidity, and the crew barely escaped with their lives, for a few minutes later the ammunition cargo of the vessel went up in a terrific explosion. The Elmir Roberts was at the time in latitude 41.06, longitude 62.18, or approximately 240 miles southeast by south of Cape Sable. The men were in the boats until 9 o'clock on Saturday evening, when the Roseway met them and took them on board, being at the time 110 miles off Cape Sable. The Elmir Roberts was a new four-masted schooner of 784 gross tons, and was on the return from her maiden trip.

Captain James Smith of the freighter Merauke, which arrived yesterday from Rotterdam, reported that on Friday, Aug. 22, in latitude 40.34 north and longitude 62.38 west, about 600 miles east of New York, he observed a flash at 3:50 P. M. about ten miles north of his position, followed by a loud report.

At 6:55 A. M., the Captain said, a mass of burning débris was shot up in a column of fire toward the sky and succeeded by a terrific explosion which agitated the sea in that direction. Captain Smith said that he altered his course and steered for the place the sound came from, but could not see any signs of wreckage or evidence that there had been a disaster in the vicinity of that position.

Special Tax for Germans Who Didn't Serve at Front

BERLIN, Aug. 26, (Associated Press.)—As a result of the Government's search for new sources of revenue, the feasibility of assessing men who escaped active service during the war has been suggested.

It is estimated that 6,000,000 men never wore uniforms, and that if an "exemption tax" averaging 20 marks a man were levied the yield would be 120,000,000 marks.

FEAR JAPANESE PLOT TO CONTROL SIBERIA

UCHIDA IS OPPOSING THEM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Statesmen and diplomats in Washington who have given attention to the Far Eastern question regard with considerable concern the report from Tokio that the military element in the Japanese Government has succeeded in forcing the Imperial Cabinet to take a stand in favor of the exclusion of Manchuria and Mongolia from the international consortium.

It is under this consortium that the United States, Great Britain, France, and Japan were to assist in financing the Chinese Government through funds to be furnished by international banking groups. The consortium has not yet operated, although the arrangements were proposed some months ago, and should official advices confirm press reports from Tokio crediting the Japanese Cabinet with having upheld the opinions of the military caste, it would not only mean a resumption by Japan of negotiations with the powers on the basis of the exclusion of Manchuria and Mongolia from the consortium, but possibly develop the greatest international political significance upon the Japanese Government's attitude toward the Russian and Chinese questions.

Important in the same connection is a dispatch from London stating that Vladivostok is surrounded by insurgents, the town filled with refugees and that a Japanese squadron has arrived there. Conditions around Vladivostok are wholly different from those in Central Siberia, where Admiral Kolchak's Government has its headquarters, at Omsk. Vladivostok also differs from Central Siberia in that the foreign element is stronger there, numerous Chinese and Japanese and many undesirable elements having filtered into the port. It is felt here that the situation at Vladivostok is not wholly unconnected with the activities of the Japanese military caste in favor of the exclusion of Mongolia and Manchuria from the international consortium.

Militarists Hamper Entente.

There is said to be a great division of opinion between Viscount Uchida, the Japanese Foreign Minister, along with his supporters in the Japanese Government who have been endeavoring to steer a wise and liberal middle course for Japan, and the military party in the field and in the Government, which has been fighting for steady pursuit by Japan of a policy of special rights and privileges in China, Shantung, Manchuria, and Mongolia, and seeking to establish exclusive Japanese dominance and control over the future of Siberia. It is learned that this division of opinion between the liberals and the reactionary militarists in Japan, which has cropped out again in the Tokio Cabinet's consideration of the consortium, is even more deeply rooted in its bearing on Japanese policy toward Russia.

Leaders in the Japanese militarist clique in Siberia have been doing a great harm from the standpoint of those Entente leaders who have been sincerely anxious to help the Russian people toward liberty, self-government, and peace. They are said to have used Semenoff to breed distrust and dissent in the Far East, to have made overtures of one sort or another to the Kolchak Government, regardless of the attitude of the more liberal elements in the Japanese Government; to have filtered propaganda through from Vladivostok into Siberia and to the outside world, and generally to have followed a course which leaders like Foreign Minister Uchida have been endeavoring to counteract.

It is known by diplomats here that liberal statesmen in the Japanese Government have not been in sympathy with the designs of the militarists who have been endeavoring to win over the military reactionary elements in Siberia. It is also known that these Japanese military reactionists have tried to create trouble between the American military forces in Siberia and the Russians, the aim being to force the American expeditionary forces withdrew and thereby leave the Japanese masters of the situation.

During February and March of this year these militarists, as was reported at the time, were trying to make a secret agreement with the Siberian Government for certain trade and other concessions, promising to reciprocate by furnishing military aid when needed. No such arrangements were completed, but it was pointed out today in this connection that only a few days ago Japanese military leaders refused to send assistance to the Kolchak forces at a time when such aid was greatly needed.

The real bearing of all this upon the Russian situation is found in the fact that while Viscount Uchida, Baron Makino and his advisers, who have been steering a liberal course, joined with the allied and associated governments in the assurances given at Paris to extend support to the Kolchak Government, based on assurances given for the freedom, self-government, and peace of the Russian people and their neighbors, the Japanese militarists and imperialists, unable to win over Kolchak to their course, have favored his downfall.

The reactionaries are fully observant of the wave of Bolshevist anarchy that has approached Siberia from the west. It is the belief in diplomatic circles that if the combination of Japanese military reactionaries, with certain Russian autocratic and military reactionary elements is able to bring about the downfall of the Kolchak Government a military reactionary government could be set up in Siberia under some Russian of the type of Semenoff.

This phase of the situation lends a peculiar significance to the reported division of views in the Japanese Cabinet over the question of excluding Mongolia and Manchuria from the operations of the international consortium. In former days Japan based her China policy on the idea of special rights and privileges as opposed to the open door, equal opportunities in trade for all nations dealing with China, and maintenance of the integrity of China as expressed in the Root-Takahira agreement. Before the war Japanese imperialists likewise sought to develop an exclusive rights policy with the Government of Russia under the late Czar. The Czar's Government was itself looking at that time for special rights and privileges in Manchuria.

Flood Siberia with Propaganda.

Japanese imperialists and militarists are known to be entertaining the fear that, if a new liberal régime is strongly established in Russia, it would result in the adoption by Russia of a more liberal policy toward China, rather than one of political and economic spoliation. They have also feared that such a Russian Government, based on liberal principles and favored by the Allies, would isolate the Japanese in the event of any decision by Japan to adopt a policy of self-interest as opposed to the open door in China and Siberia.

While reports reaching Washington indicate that Viscount Ushida and his supporters recognize the importance of acting in support of the more liberal policies of the principal allied powers, the militarists of Japan, joining hands with the Japanese Imperialists, have been actively clinging to the old ideals of seclusion and political self-interest, and consider it important to have established in Siberia, and ultimately in Russia, if possible, a reactionary Government. This would not only have a vital bearing on the future of Russia itself, but would affect China also.

Move in House to Prevent Use of American Troops in Silesia

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. — Further protest against American troops doing police duty in Europe was made today in a resolution offered in the House by Representative Wood, Republican, of Indiana, which declared against the United States sending troops to Silesia to guard mines and railroads.

Mr. Wood's resolution reads:

"Whereas, It is announced that the War Department, by direction of the President of the United States, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, is about to send from the United States to Silesia the 5th and 50th United States Infantry Regiments; and

"Whereas, The President of the United States has heretofore announced to the Congress and to the country that the great war is at an end; and

"Whereas, The only excuse offered for the sending of these troops to Europe is for the purpose of doing police duty in guarding coal mines and railroads in Silesia and adjacent territory; and

"Whereas, The allied countries of Europe are more vitally interested in the protection of the coal mines and railroads referred to than we are; and

"Whereas, No showing has been made that the said allied countries do not have sufficient military forces to do the police duty required; and

"Whereas, The people of the United States are unalterably opposed to the sending of more troops from this country to Europe for the purpose of doing police duty in protecting the private property of citizens of said allied countries; be it therefore

"Resolved by the House of Representatives, that a protest be, and the same is hereby, offered and declared against the proposed action of this Government in sending United States troops to Silesia or any other part of Europe for the purpose hereinbefore referred to."

In explaining his resolution he said:

"I saw in the newspapers yesterday morning a report from abroad that the regiments had been ordered to Silesia, and decided to investigate.

"I went to the War Department and found that the department had planned to send the troops to Silesia without letting the people of this country know anything about it, which is the best evidence that they know the public is unalterably opposed to sending any more of our troops to Europe."

GALLOWAY'S FRIENDS ATTACK BURLESON

SAY COL. HOUSE AIDS TEXAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Developments are crowding upon the train of the charges against Postmaster General Burleson, filed at the White House last February by Charles M. Galloway, one of the Democratic members of the Civil Service Commission.

It is asserted by friends of Mr. Galloway that the Postmaster General has been campaigning so determinedly for Mr. Galloway's removal from office that President Wilson must decide, within a short time, whether he shall demand the resignation of Mr. Burleson or Mr. Galloway.

If Mr. Galloway is forced out the most "pitiless publicity" will be given to the charges the Civil Service Commissioner filed at the White House, declared Mr. Galloway's friends today.

Renewed accusations were made by these friends that Burleson has attempted to use the civil service, especially in the matter of appointment of Postmasters, to further political ends. The latest one of these charges, made some weeks ago, was that Mr. Burleson tried to induce Mr. Galloway to certify Miss Emma K. Burleson, the Postmaster General's niece, above the heads of three other candidates who stood higher than she did in an examination.

Charge House Aided Burleson.

Further charges made today by the opponents of the Postmaster General were:

1. That Colonel Edward M. House has come to the rescue of his fellow Texan, Mr. Burleson.

2. That Mr. Galloway and Herman W. Craven, a Republican member of the commission, were invited twice to the White House in July, 1917, and made complaints against the former Chairman of the commission, John A. McIlhenny, Mr. Craven asking the President to summon Mr. McIlhenny so that the complaints could be made to his face.

3. That following these visits Postmaster General Burleson told Messrs. Galloway and Craven that Mr. McIlhenny would be removed as soon as a man could be found to take his place.

4. That the post was offered to Victor Murdock, now of the Federal Trade Commission, and Robert W. Woolley, now of the Tariff Commission, but both declined and Mr. McIlhenny was not removed, but remained in office for eighteen months and then received an appointment with a $10,000 salary in Haiti.

5. That Commissioner Galloway and Craven opposed, as susceptible to abuse and favoritism, a method of examining candidates for postmasterships, which Messrs. Burleson and McIlhenny approved, and which the President later sustained.

6. That numerous appointments of postmasters already certified by the Civil Service Commission are being held up by Mr. Burleson, with the result that there is great dissatisfaction, especially on the part of two Democratic Senators, Walsh of Massachusetts and Pomerene of Ohio.

President Demands Resignations.

Supporters of Mr. Galloway said today that he and Mr. Craven received their first summons to the White House July 5, 1917, and that the President sent for them again on July 9 of that year. It is said that on both these occasions they discussed the official conduct of Mr. McIlhenny. Feeling between Galloway and Craven on the one hand, and Mr. McIlhenny, on the other, existed for some time and increased during 1917 and 1918. When the President returned from France in February, 1918, he demanded the immediate resignations of Craven and Galloway. Both handed in their resignations. That of Craven, the Republican, was accepted, but Galloway's was not, and he is still in office. It was at the time he sent in his resignation that Mr. Galloway filed charges against the Postmaster General.

The form of examination to which Messrs. Galloway and Craven objected involved sending a postoffice inspector to a town, accompanied by some one from the Civil Service Commission, to interview citizens regarding the qualifications of candidates for the postmastership. It is understood that the Commissioners felt that too much latitude is allowed to the postoffice inspector who selects the persons to be interviewed, with the result that the interviews may be made prejudicial.

Another objection which the two Commissioners made to the President's methods is that, after the Civil Service Commission certifies the applicants in respective order, the Postmaster General has the opportunity of selecting one of the three men highest in the list, without being forced to accept the one highest in the examinations, irrespective of political or other assets.

PERSHING'S LAST REVIEW.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—General John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American Army in France, reviewed a French regiment of the Paris garrison this morning before the Hotel des Invalides and decorated several officers and soldiers.

This was the last public appearance of General Pershing before his departure for Brest next Sunday.

Awards Prizes to Insurance Men.

Credentials were awarded yesterday to the Quarter-Million Club delegates to the annual business conference of the Equitable Life Assurance Society at a luncheon in the Hotel Pennsylvania. More than 300 field leaders attended, and the presentation was made by President Day. New York City had the largest single producer, Adolph Hollander, who insured several hundred persons for a total of more than $3,000,000, in the year ending June 30.

SAY QUIEN BOASTED OF GERMAN TIES

MET MISS CAVELL IN JULY

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The examination of Georges Gaston Quien, charged with communicating military information to the enemy and with having collected evidence against Edith Cavell, the British nurse who was executed in Belgium by the Germans, was continued today.

During the day charges of fraud were made against the prisoner by several women, who testified that Quien had boasted that he would be able, for a consideration, to have their husbands, who were in prison, liberated. His ability to obtain their release, the women asserted Quien told them, was due to his "connections."

Quien admited that he might be a braggart, a drunkard and a thief, but he declared that he never betrayed France, nor the alleged organizations headed by Miss Cavell for the release of war prisoners, as he was not aware of the existence of such an organization.

Questioned About His Movements.

At yesterday's session of the court Quien traced his journey from St. Quentin to Brussels, where he arrived on June 7. After reaching the Belgian capital, Quien decided to cross the frontier into Holland. This he succeeded in doing, presenting himself at The Hague to the French Military Attaché, who sent him back into Belgium.

He said today that he re-entered Belgium on the night of June 23 in company with one Van der Smiessohn. The next day he was arrested by the Germans, who accused him of traveling without a passport, and was imprisoned in Antwerp until late in July. This testimony was questioned by the Colonel acting as President of the court, who said it was "strange no trace of his imprisonment could be found at Antwerp, and that the Germans later permitted Quien to go to Brussels."

The accused man admitted having seen Miss Cavell on July 26, after he had visited the home of a Mme. Bodart, at which time he said that a certain Jean Maes, who, he said, was a fellow-prisoner in Antwerp, accosted him in the street. There was read into the record a statement showing that Maes was a "suspicious character," and that he was known to have been in the pay of the Germans, being employed by German police at Brussels.

Knew It Contained Maps.

Mme. Bodart gave Quien a package to be left at the home of a Mme. Machiel. Quien denied that he had examined its contents, although during his preliminary examination he admitted he knew it contained annotated road maps for the use of persons attempting to escape from the country. It was pointed out by the prosecution today that one of these maps, which only Quien could have obtained, was the chief evidence against Mme. Bodart and brought about her condemnation before a German court-martial. Explaining this discrepancy in his story, Quien said he was suffering from loss of memory.

The President of the court pointed out during the hearing that almost every one with whom Quien came in contact was immediately placed under arrest or condemned by the Germans. Among those mentioned by the President was Father Bonsteels, who, believing Quien was honestly aiding allied soldiers to escape, gave him a railroad map which showed the latest German modifications. Father Bonsteels was soon after arrested and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment.

It was declared that Quien had asked a Mme. van Damme to aid two young persons to escape, and that these two were directed to the frontier by Mme. van Damme, who sent another lady with them as a guide. The three were arrested, and Mme. van Damme also was thrown into jail by the Germans. At their trials, all four were condemned.

REFUSE TO AID FRANCE.

BERLIN, Aug. 25, (Associated Press.)—A circular letter from the leaders of the Sparticide Party has fallen into the hands of the League for the Protection of German Culture. It says the party opposes the clause in the Peace Treaty relative to labor by German workmen in the rehabilitation of devastated districts in France and Belgium, saying the compact was "signed by bourgeois with bourgeois, which the party does not recognize."

The letter states that the Spartacide organization will not send its laborers to France and declares the manner of transporting workers, their separation from their families, and their quarters in barracks is reminiscent of bodily slavery.

"The picture," the letter continues, "is made prettier by negotiations between the Germans and French as to the part German industry will play in the work of reconstruction. Labor by the proletariat is the price with which the bourgeoisie purchases the continued existence of the fatherland, whereas the sense of the revolution was to cease the performance of bloody slave service for this fatherland. The German proletariat will not perform this service in some other form."

PRINCE WHO HELPED EDITH CAVELL LANDS

SISTER IN PRISON 3 YEARS

Belgian Reconstruction Work Slow Because None of Germany's Indemnity Has Been Paid.

One of the 200 saloon passengers who arrived yesterday from England on the Cunarder Carmania was Prince Reginald de Croy of Belgium, on his way to Washington to take up the post of First Secretary at the Belgian Legation. The Prince, who speaks English fluently, has not visited America since 1915.

He worked in Brussels during the war with nurse Edith Cavell and assisted her in getting wounded prisoners over the frontier into Holland. He said that he would have been arrested by the Germans and probably have shared the English nurses' fate if he had not been warned in time to leave the country. His sister, who stopped in Brussels to nurse wounded soldiers, was arrested and had been three years in a German prison when the armistice set her free.

"The work of reconstruction and rebuilding the commerce and industry in Belgium is proceeding slowly," said Prince de Croy, "because we have not received any of the cash indemnity from Germany, and the young men of 20 and 21 years of age do not take kindly to factory life after living in the open for so long. They went into the army as boys and have never done any work before, and now, that peace has come, these young men seem to prefer to wander about and smoke their pipes, but they will follow the example of their elders later and settle down, I am confident. A soldier's life is not all fighting and living in dugouts, and it has always had a certain fascination, and more especially for young men. There has been a great deal of building in the principal cities to repair the damage done during the war.

"The question as to what is to be done with the seven milliards of paper marks held by the Belgian Government is still in abeyance, and it is possible that the money will be spent in trading with Germany. She was one of the largest individual countries buyers before the war, and if the Allies decline to trade with Germany there is very little prospect of Belgium or any of the Allies receiving the payment of the indemnities."

Another passenger on board was Lord Richard Wellesley, who was accompanied by Lady Wellesley and their two little daughters, the Hon. Pamela and the Hon. Mary Wellesley. They will spend the Fall in New York. Lord Wellesley was through the war in the Royal Air Force and retired when the armistice was signed with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He was the first English airman to cross the Channel from Dover to France after war had been declared on Germany.

C. D. B. King, President-elect of Liberia, arrived on the Carmania on his way to Washington to meet President Wilson, and will take back with him $5,000,000 that has been loaned to his country by the United States.

Sir Alan J. Sykes, member of the British Parliament, also arrived on the Carmania. There were nearly 400 Americans on board who had served in the British Army and were accompanied by their wives and children. During the voyage the wife of Private John Taylor of Harrisburg gave birth to a baby girl, which was named Victory Carmania, and a purse of $300 was collected among the passengers and presented to the mother. Captain W. I. R. D. Irvine, R. N. R., said that the voyage was uneventful. There was plenty of fog and lightning, but no ice.

FIND EDITH CAVELL LAWFULLY EXECUTED

Bar Association Minority of Two So Reports in Advocating Mercy to Women Spies.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 27.—The execution by the Germans of Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse, which aroused the indignation of the allied world, was in accordance with the laws of "civilized warfare," according to a minority report of the Committee on Military Law of the American Bar Association, made public here today. Both majority and minority reports were prepared by the committee which was appointed to investigate courts-martial and suggest reforms in military law.

The reference to the case of Miss Cavell was made by S. S. Gregory of Chicago, Chairman of the committee, and was concurred in by Judge William P. Bynum of Greensboro, N.C., the other minority member, in advocating abolition of the death penalty for women convicted of infringing military law. In his report Mr. Gregory said:

"A careful consideration of the case of Miss Edith Cavell, one of the most pathetic and appealing victims of the great war, whose unfortunate fate has aroused the sympathy and excited the indignation of two continents, has led me to the conclusion that she was executed in accordance with the laws and usages of what we are pleased commonly to refer to as civilized warfare.

"This being so, it has seemed to me quite inconsistent with our condemnation of those who thus took her life to retain in our own system of military justice those provisions of law which were relied upon by the German military authorities in ordering her execution. The mere fact that her trial was attended by the brutality and duplicity which commonly marked the exercise of military power by the German command does not alter this aspect of the case. This is not a subject upon which I desire to reason at any length, for it is one as to which the impulses of the heart can much better be relied upon than any sophisticated and artificial reasoning.

"For us to take any other course, it seems to me, is to impeach our sincerity and good faith in criticising the German authorities in this regard, and to warrant the suggestion that such criticism is inspired rather by the fact that they, our enemies, were responsible for it, as well as sympathy for a good and worthy woman, than any well-considered judgment in the matter."

The majority members of the committee, Andrew A. Bruce of Minneapolis, Martin Conboy of New York, and John Hinkley of Baltimore, declared they could not "concur in the suggestion of Mr. Gregory that there should be a provision prohibiting the death penalty in the case of women spies."

"It would certainly be inadvisable unless such a provision were in the codes of all the nations with whom we would be likely to be at war," they said. "We could not afford to be thus handicapped. We agree thoroughly that the penalty should not be inflicted except in the most extreme cases, but that it should be abolished entirely we cannot agree. Our experience has shown that on account of the sex lure women are the most dangerous of all spies and our chivalry toward some should not allow us to jeopardize the national cause or the lives of thousands of the sons or others."

The majority also declined to concur in recommendations of the minority that enlisted men sit on courts-martial and that special courts be abandoned. The majority report asserted that although "we believe some changes should be made, we are satisfied that the errors which were committed during the recent war and the excessive penalties which were no doubt often imposed, were due largely to the inexperience of those in control and to the fact not only that we had of necessity to train an officer class overnight for our volunteer army, but that our practice in the past of scattering our regular army, divided into battalions, companies, and even smaller units over the country, had made it impossible to train properly even our West Point officers."

PEKING, Aug. 27.—The Japanese authorities are taking over German and Austrian properties at Tsing-tao, presumably with the view of counting the liquidation proceeds as an installment on the indemnity.

The Chinese Government has decided, beginning Sept. 1, to disband troops in Hunan, Shensi, Hupeh, Fukien, Kiangsi, and Chihli at the rate of 25,000 monthly. Previously the Government pleaded that disbandment could not be carried out without an advance on the reorganization loan, but being unable to raise loans anywhere it is forced to this much-needed retrenchment.

In consequence of the reports of the Chinese naval mission which recently visited the allied countries, plans are now being considered for an extensive reorganization of the Chinese Navy.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—For two days there has been a congress of juvenile societies at Potsdam. The first day the reactionary papers were overjoyed at the proceedings of the youngsters at the congress. They had opened with "Deutschland Uber Alles" and they were also adorned with imperial colors, red, white and black, and their annual reports seemed not to lack the good old Pan German spirit.

But the tables were turned yesterday when representatives of certain Pan German societies addressed the juvenile congress. The youngsters protested vigorously against interference by grown-ups who by the mismanagement of affairs within the last five years had clearly proved their inefficiency. A delegation of the Wandevögel Society, conforming with the American Boy Scouts, under the leadership of a young man who bore an old and noble name, proved most obstinate. This delegation insisted that the old ones clear out and its leader, referring in a speech to a certain professor, declared it was ridiculous to expect salvation for the whole world from the German spirit as long as that spirit was unsound itself.

The congress is continuing with the older elements almost completely eliminated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—The police are trying very hard to make the people believe that Lieutenant Pflüskow committed suicide, although all the newspapers agree that it is impossible. One police Commissioner tied his own legs, hands, and feet in the manner and with the same leather straps as Pflüskow was found strapped, but he failed to hang himself afterwards, because the hook on which Pflüskow's body had hung had meanwhile mysteriously disappeared.

But another hook of the same kind was discovered in the cupboard of the murdered man's room, and it has been ascertained that a stranger in civilian clothes bought both hooks on Saturday morning in a Potsdam store. This stranger knows probably all about the crime, but it seems impossible one man should have committed the crime, because von Pflüskow was unusually strong and measured 1 meter 89 centimeters. The condition of the bed, too, showed there must have been a terrible struggle before Pflüskow was overpowered.

The police today deny the probability of a political murder, but can give absolutely no plausible motive for the crime, admitting, however, that so far the men in Pflüskow's company, when cross-examined, contradicted each other at every point.

NO COAL FOR GERMANS.

Famine Expected This Winter—Drastic Restrictions Ordered.

BERLIN, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—That any possibility of averting a coalless Winter is regarded as a forlorn hope is indicated by reports received from the Silesian and Ruhr coalfields, the action taken by municipalities in many sections of the country, and the restrictive measures agreed upon by the Coal Commission, which promise about as much light and warmth as the Winter moon.

Greater Berlin was informed today that it would be permitted to indulge in the luxury of a hot bath on the first and third Friday of each month. Kitchen ranges will not be permitted to operate between the hours of 8 and 11:30 A. M. and 2 and 7 P. M. The use of bathroom ovens, and of all emergency heating devices consuming coke briquettes is also prohibited.

The first warning, emanating from the workers and addressed to the Government by the labor unions at Bochum, urging the adoption of the severest measures to curtail the needless consumption of coal, advises the Government to restrict show window illumination by the early closing of shops, and by shutting down places of entertainment and amusement long before midnight.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 27.—With only eight counties yet to report, Lieutenant Governor Lee M. Russell is leading Lieutenant Oscar G. Johnston in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Mississippi by 3,125 votes, according to figures available here tonight.

Returns for the counties reported, of which fifty-three have given final figures, indicate that Russell has 54,187 votes and Johnston 51,062. Of the eight unreported counties in the first primary Johnston received a plurality in six and Russell in two.

The Mayor's letter was as follows:

Mr. Frank P. Hedley, General Manager,

My Dear Sir: When Mr. Quackenbush and you appeared before the Board of Estimate on Saturday, Aug. 16, you said that you would welcome investigation of your finances by the city.

After careful consideration I have decided to accept your suggestion. I take it that you meant that the investigation by the city would be helped by the Interborough, and of course this would mean that not only the books and accounts, but also the VOUCHERS as well, would be open for the inspection of the city.

Will you please make it clear by return mail if you mean that you will throw open not merely such books as might bear out your contentions concerning the company's finances, but that ALL the books, accounts, vouchers, payrolls, &c., will be immediately open to study, and that you will explain to our investigators the true meaning of any entries which are not readily understood?

Assuming that you meant you would welcome a real investigation, I am instructing auditors to prepare at once for this investigation, and as a preliminary step may I ask that you provide us with a complete list of all expenditures of the Interborough Company and its subsidiaries and predecessors back to the

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Uncertain Steel Labor Outlook Cause Stocks to Hesitate—Sterling Exchange Up.

The reluctance of buyers to take on stocks in the face of uncertainties in the labor situation, particularly as affecting the steel industry, promoted unsteadiness in yesterday's dealings, and the list left off considerably lower than on Tuesday. There did not appear to be any tendency toward liquidation on an extensive scale, and the highly professional character of business made possible the supposition that transactions for the short account supplied much of the session's activity. Then, too, profits acquired in the rise of the fore part of the week were apparently realized, especially among railroad shares and a number of industrials which had been bid upward with particular zest on Tuesday. The day's net declines extended from 1 to 3 points or more, several high-priced issues receding further. Call money continued in sufficient supply at 6 per cent. all the way along, and there seemed to be no factors having application to the structure or machinery of the market which acted to carry prices lower.

The comment of bank and brokerage office showed rather more concern over the possibility of slackened production in the steel trade. The letters which passed between the union leaders and Chairman Gary of the Steel Corporation indicated a firm position by each side, which forecast a test of strength. Information coming from steel company managers, and general discussion at manufacturing centres, still laid much stress on the compartive numbers of union and non-union men to be concerned in case a strike was called, with the weight greatly in favor of the latter. The financial community was confident that the odds lay on the side of the companies, but this did not allay apprehension, lest even scattered labor difficulties might cut into output at a time when the industry is beginning to gather power in its forward movement. The security market recorded in its hesitation the impression voiced in many quarters yesterday that the results attained by the steel unions were likely to have a wider application in labor matters than within the single industry. With this thought in mind, the financial community felt relief that Samuel Gompers was able to be on the ground at the inception of the movement and was to gain first-hand information at Washington on underlying influences now at work in the relations between capital and labor. In the bond market some railroad and corporation issues eased off as stocks receded, but business was too dull to display nervousness among investors in corporate securities.

A really pronounced recovery occurred in sterling exchange quotations and the other foreign rates moved against New York for the most part. Sight sterling moved upward to 4.23⅝, a gain of 2½ cents to the pound for the day and of more than 11 cents from the minimum level of last week. The improvement in this market during the last few days has not been accounted for by any particular developments; no evidence has come to light that new steps toward the extension of credits to foreign countries were being taken. British exports are growing slowly, but little actual effect in stabilizing sterling rates could be looked for yet from this source. It may have been that the approach of Sept. 1 caused an increased demand for cable remittances to London this week, a process which would be reflected in both sight and cable quotations.

GARY STANDS FIRM FOR THE OPEN SHOP

Steel Corporation Chairman Finally Refuses to Meet Union Representatives.

NO GENERAL STRIKE THREAT

Appeal May Be Made to President Wilson—A. F. L. Will Discuss Matter Today.

Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of the United States Steel Corporation, yesterday sent a letter to the Steel and Iron Workers' committee saying that it was still the policy of the corporation and its subsidiaries not to discuss "any matter relating to employes" with representatives of labor unions.

Judge Gary's letter was directed to the members of the organizing committee who called at his office on Tuesday afternoon in the hope that they would be able to place before him their views upon wages, working conditions, and other labor problems. The committee came to this city from Youngstown, Ohio, especially to lay demands before the Steel Corporation, but were informed at Judge Gary's office that he would prefer that they write him a letter instead of attempting to obtain a personal interview.

The committee sent a letter to Judge Gary yesterday morning and asked that a reply be sent to them at the Continental Hotel in the afternoon, if possible. Judge Gary's letter was directed to John Fitzpatrick, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor and Chairman of the National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers; William Z. Foster, Secretary of the committee; David J. Davis, William Hannon, and Edward J. Evans, all members of the committee.

Judge Gary's Letter.

Gentlemen—Receipt of your communication of Aug. 26 is acknowledged. We do not think you are authorized to represent the sentiment of a majority of the employes of the United States Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries. We express no opinion concerning any other members of the iron and steel industry.

As heretofore publicly stated and repeated, our corporation and subsidiaries, although they do not combat labor unions as such, decline to discuss business with them. The corporation and subsidiaries are opposed to the closed shop. They stand for the "open shop," which permits one to engage in any line of employment whether one does or does not belong to a labor union. This best promotes the welfare of both employes and employers. In view of the well-known attitude, as above expressed, the officers of the corporation respectfully decline to discuss with you, as representatives of a labor union, any matter relating to employes. In doing so no personal discourtesy is intended.

In all decisions and acts of the corporation and subsidiaries pertaining to employes and employment their interests are of highest importance. In wage rates, living and working conditions, conservation of life and health, care and comfort in times of sickness or old age, and providing facilities for the general welfare and happiness of employes and their families, the corporation and subsidiaries have endeavored to occupy a leading and advanced among employers.

It will be the object of the corporation and subsidiaries to give such consideration to employes as to show them their loyal and efficient service in the past is appreciated, and that they may expect in the future fair treatment. Respectfully yours,

ELBERT H. GARY,
Chairman.

Workers Ask for Hearing.

This is the letter of the labor committee, to which Judge Gary's communication was a reply:

During a general campaign of organization and education conducted under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor many thousands of men employed in the iron and steel industry made application and were enrolled as members of the various organizations to which they were assigned.

This work has been carried on to a point where we feel justified in stating to you that we represent the sentiment of the vast majority of the employes of this industry, and acting in behalf of them we solicit of you that a hearing be given to the undersigned committee, who have been selected by the duly accredited representatives of the employes, to place before you matters that are of vital concern to them, and concerning hours of labor, wages, working conditions, and the right of collective bargaining.

The committee called at your office at 3 P. M. Tuesday, Aug. 26, and requested a conference. We were advised by your messenger that you wished to be excused from a personal interview at this time and requested us to have our business in writing and whatever matters we wished to submit would be taken up by yourself and your colleagues and given consideration.

Therefore we are submitting in brief the principal subjects that we desire to have a conference on. The committee has an important meeting in another city on Thursday next and will leave New York at 5 o'clock on Aug. 27, 1919. May we respectfully request that your answer be sent before that time to Mr. John Fitzpatrick, Continental Hotel, Broadway and Forty-first Street, New York City.

No Threat of General Strike.

After Judge Gary's letter had been received by special messenger the members of the committee conferred with Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and then drafted a reply to be sent to the Steel Corporation. After deliberation the committee decided not to make the reply public at present. They said it was brief and contained no threat of a general strike in the steel industry or in the plants of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said no attempt had been made to outline the demands of the men because it was not deemed that the "matter could be handled in mail order style." It was hinted that some appeal might be made to President Wilson, and all of the members of the committee declared that no attempt would be made to strike until every other method had been used. The committee members will lay their demands before the Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor at a special meeting in Washington today.

President Gompers refused to comment yesterday upon the Gary letter or upon the Plumb plan for the railroads. He said he did not think he had been long enough at home to have acquired all the facts upon current labor problems and that no statements would be issued by him until after he had reached Washington. Mr. Gompers did say, however, that he would give all aid to the Government in its efforts to seek out the profiteers and to lower the high cost of living. He left for Washington at midnight.

CONDITION OF STEEL TRADE.

Weekly Surveys See Strike Movement as Overstated.

The Iron Age in its weekly survey of conditions in the iron and steel trade industry considers that the strength of the strike movement engineered by the American Federation of Labor has been greatly overstated. It also believes that President Wilson's stand against a sweeping railroad wage advance has weakened any endeavor that may be made to bring about a strike in the steel industry.

In discussing this further the publication says:

If steel works mechanics strike, they may shut down some departments, but the large majority of mill workers are opposed to being thrown idle.

A significant development was the action of representatives of Midvale Steel & Ordnance Co. employes, gathered in their quarterly meeting, in declaring against a shorter day's work and an increased wage, and calling for "increased production and the stabilization of prices in conformity with wages now being paid."

Neither manufacturers nor consumers of steel appear to be taking any of the safeguarding steps as to stocks or shipments of material that are commonly seen when a strike is considered imminent.

At one Eastern and one Western steel plant eight-hour turns have just been granted, but at the former the output went down because enough men could not be found for three shifts.

Export trade made up of so many kinds of material in moderate and small tonnages that its magnitude is scarcely appreciated, is still expanding. The Orient, South America, and neutral countries of Europe are good buyers, while business with allied Europe waits. Japan and the South African Government are buying railroad equipment here, the latter ordering 500 gondola cars.

An inquiry is up for 300,000 boxes of tin plate for the Orient and another export item is 150,000 boxes. From some important districts vegetable canning demand for tin plates has fallen off, due to excessive rains, but California is calling for much more than usual. For oil and consumption is on a very large scale. British steel exports are growing slowly. For the first half of the year they were about 1,000,000 tons against 800,000 tons in the same period last year. Galvanized sheets account for 150,000 tons, or three-fourths of the gain.

The Iron Trade Review says: "Strike threats which have overhung the iron and steel industry for several weeks still exercise an inconsequential influence upon trade conditions. The industry in truth welcomes with some show of relief the fact that the decisive stage rapidly is approaching where a demonstration of the claims of strength of the union organizer will be called for. Producers stand firm in their conviction that the great body of their employes, because of the fair treatment of the past and the lack of valid grievances, are not likely to be swayed by any propaganda of discord inspired by professional agitators. A thorough investigation covering the entire steel industry shows that 10 to 15 per cent. of the men at most are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor; if a strike actually is called it is thought it likely will apply more to the various trades crafts about the plant than to the mill-workers themselves, and its effect will be limited accordingly."

TO INCORPORATE NEW BANK.

Notice of intention to incorporate the New York City Bank was filed yesterday with the State Superintendent of Banks. The new institution is to have a capital of $1,000,000 and a paid-up surplus of $500,000. The organizers of the bank have taken temporary offices at the corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street and expect to be ready for business by Oct. 15.

The New York City Bank is designed to serve the rapidly-growing business interests which now centre around the district in which the temporary offices are located. In particular, the silk, tobacco, cotton, and woolen wholesale trades are expected to patronize the institution.

The National Park Bank has been appointed administrator of an estate by the Surrogate of New York County. This, it is said, is the first appointment of this nature to be made under the amendment of the Federal Reserve act which grants trust powers to national banks.

The Mid-Continent Oil Field

The oil fields of the Mid-Continent Division are situated in a broad belt extending from near Kansas City, south through Eastern Kansas and Northeastern Oklahoma, thence south through South Central Oklahoma into Northwest Texas as far as Brownwood. The depths to producing sands vary from 200 feet along the eastern side to 3,500 feet generally along the western portion.

The thickness of the producing sands runs from 10 to 100 feet. In many instances three or more productive sands are present. With the exception of Healdton, the oil is generally of a paraffin base, from 30 to 45 degrees Beaume, averaging 35 gravity. All these oils are particularly desirable for their high gasoline content.

a provision that the same may be taken over at any time by the United States Government at par and accrued standard dividend. If the plan involves too large profits to capital, it can thus on just and equitable terms at any time expropriate the stockholders and substitute a new plan.

"No plan for the reorganization of our railroad system has any reasonable prospect of success that does not recognize the fundamental need of a radically changed status for labor," said Mr. Anderson in his memorandum.

Opposes Plumb Plan.

"Labor must be given just and proper representation in the initial management of the roads, and assume a responsibility for the uninterrupted, efficient, economical, and progressive development of the rail facilities—entirely different from that which has obtained hitherto when the railroads have been run by corporations, organized for profit, and by labor unions, organized for economic war. Full recognition must be given to the fact that the men who contribute faithful, efficient, and long-continued service in the transportation industry are as much entitled to representation in the management thereof, and must be held as responsible for the wise exercise of managerial powers, as are the contributors of capital used to pay for the railroad facilities.

"The present status of irresponsibility and consequent threatened interruption of railroad service, together with the utter lack of proper incentive for efficiency and economy in the management and operation of rail facilities, is practically admitted by all to be intolerable. The only plan now before Congress which really undertakes to meet this essential difficulty is the Plumb plan, and that plan offers, in my view, a remedy which may not improbably be almost, if not quite, as bad as the disease that it undertakes to cure.

"Labor is entitled to a large and influential position in the management of our transportation industry. It is not entitled to control that industry, either as proposed in the Plumb plan, through management of the corporation administering the rail facilities, or as is potentially involved in the present system through the domination of extracorporate organizations called labor unions. Railroad business is a public business. It must be managed by, and controlled for, public interests. Until that fundamentally important principle is recognized and sought to be made effective, there will be neither peace, security, nor progress in our transportation field.

Would Make Strikes Illegal.

"Without further present elaboration of this point, I propose to meet this difficulty by providing that in the contemplated unified United States Railroad Company the classified employes shall elect one-third of the directors or governors, another third to be elected by the stockholders, the other third to be public directors, probably appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. In addition to such initial managerial power and resultant responsibility the law should provide for a competent and impartial tribunal to deal with all wage and other labor controversies, its decision to be final. Labor should also have a one-third profit-sharing interest in any surplus profits above standard dividends.

"Given, then, a fair share of initial managerial responsibility, a competent tribunal to determine all labor controversies, a profit sharing interest in the business, combinations of employes in restraint of trade must be made illegal on the railroads, as are like combinations of capital in general industry. Strikes are combination in restraint of trade. They are now legal. With this radically changed labor status, labor would need no such weapon, and they must, on the railroads, be made illegal, their illegality to be dealt with by the courts of equity and the courts criminal, substantially as are illegal capitalistic combinations in restraint of trade.

"But the right of the individual employe to leave his employment, even if he breaks a contract, should remain inviolate. The railroad employe should be as free, (and no freer,) to break his contract as is the capitalist.

"Unification of the railroads in one owning and operating company is, in my view, fundamentally necessary.

"Pretty careful study of the plans proposed for, say, a dozen large companies, convinces me that:

"(a) No one of these plans can be put in operation without long, expensive and wasteful proceedings, during which honest investing interests will be exploited by speculators and manipulators to an unparalleled degree. Without attacking the motives of the proponents of these plans, I do confidently suggest that the result of the plans would be a speculative exploitation working vast and grievously unjust results.

Calls Warfield Plan Hopeless.

"(b.) If the plan of a dozen railroads were in operation, problems of administration and rate-making (infinitely difficult at the best) would, in my opinion, be insoluble. Certainly, if the Warfield plan of retaining State charters were adopted, the situation would be hopeless.

"(c.) The notion that competition can be kept or made a force for efficiency and progress is a delusion. Even those who, in their own minds, advocate competition, on analysis do not. What is really desired, for instance, by the representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce, is not competition, but incentive for efficiency, economy, and progressive development. There ought to be such incentive. It cannot, in my view, be found in the competitive theory. All of these apparent advocates of competition accept and assert that rates should be uniform. They eliminate rate-cutting as a competitive factor. Otherwise stated, the selling price of the product is not to be fixed by the theoretical competitors, but by public authority. Securities also are to be issued only under public approval. Extensions for new business, whether competitive or not, are to be made only on public approval. New facilities, whether profitable or not, may be ordered by public authority. Wages, the first and largest item in the expense account, are expected to be made, not by the separate corporations, but by some outside power.

"In many other minor respects the kind, quality, and cost of the service rendered is to be subject, and properly so, to control for the recognized paramount public interests. The right to pool earnings under public approval is advocated. This, on analysis, means that if any competition in railroading survives under the theories of regulations sketched above, so that the railroad companies find themselves in actual struggle for the same line of business, that struggle shall cease by a pooling of earnings. This is, in effect, an admission that real competition is neither desired nor expected to result from the administration of the railroads by separate corporations."

Charter with Broad Powers.

Having assumed that his first two points are sound fundamentally, Mr. Anderson said that he would proceed to organize a Federal railroad corporation along the following lines:

"Charter a Federal railroad company, with very broad powers, including inter alia, eminent domain to take existing transportation facilities, as well as land, &c., for additional facilities, stocks, bonds of existing companies, or any other kind of needed property with power to issue stocks and bonds for cash at par or for exchange with present security holders; also to guarantee interest and principal of outstanding bonds. The charter should have the broadest of powers, the use of these powers being properly limited by the statute or by delegated administrative authority

"This corporation might well be managed by a board of, say, fifteen Directors, elected and appointed for, say, terms of five years each, so classified that the term of one of each class shall end each year. Five of the Directors should be elected by the classified employes under by-laws approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Five should be elected by the stockholders, and represent capitalistic and profit-seeking interests. Five should be public Directors, probably appointed by the President, probably from both political parties, and confirmed by the Senate, and required to have no financial interest in the stock of the company. All the Directors should be paid adequate, but reasonable, salaries, and be required to give all their energies to the business. This Board of Directors should have broad general managerial powers, including the power to provide for regional administration as they may think wise and experience may dictate. The United States Railroad Company should be capitalized not less than 25 per cent. nor more than 40 per cent. in capital stock, the balance in bonds. The capital stock should have a standard dividend rate not less than 5 p. c. nor more than 6 p. c., cumulative—such rate as will fairly insure par market values in all normal times. Probably new issues for extensions and additions should be distributable to outstanding stockholders at par, although the stock would in ordinary times undoubtedly sell at a substantial premium. But it is desirable that there should be an adequate incentive to spend new money for needed and useful railroad development.

"I think, although this is not free from doubt, that the Government should guarantee an annual dividend on this stock, possibly of 4 per cent., not less than 3 per cent. Such guarantee would, in my present view, cost the Government nothing; it would stabilize the financial market, improve the credit of the company, and reduce the ultimate capital cost of our transportation facilities.

Would Divide Surplus.

"Any surplus profits above operating expenses, fixed charges, and standard dividends should annually be divided into thirds:

"(a) One-third for the benefit of capital, applicable to an additional dividend up to a reasonable maximum, probably 7 per cent. Any balance of this one-third accruing in fat years should be held in a reserve for the purpose of providing for the payment of the standard dividend in bad years.

"(b) One-third as a dividend to labor on a properly classified schedule.

"(c) One-third for strictly public uses; at the outset perhaps to pay for the Government's advances hitherto or hereafter to be made during the transition period, thereafter for such public purposes as Congress may authorize by statute or through the United States Railroad Company and the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Railroad stock of the chief roads would be exchanged for the United States Railroad Company so as to give the present stockholders somewhat less than their present returns. For instance, if the United States Railroad Company fixes the dividend at 6 per cent. the stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad would be exchanged for an equal amount of Government owned stock, and stock of other railroads now paying more than 6 per cent. would be exchanged for a larger amount of the Government railroad stock.

The rates under Mr. Anderson's plan are to be initiated by the railroad company subject to reversing power by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Local rates, such as commutation rates around the large cities should be left to the States to decide.

Extensions and improvements can be undertaken by the railroad corporation, but proposals involving large expenditures must be approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission before undertaken under Mr. Anderson's proposed plan.

"I think the substance of the Plum plan of co-ordinating capital of the United States Railroad Company with the local capital is practical and should be adopted. It is in substance now in use between the Federal Government and State or other local governments in the building of highways. But full title to all properties thus created should vest in the United States Railroad Company," said Mr. Anderson.

NEW RAILROAD PLAN OFFERED BY LENROOT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—In a bill offered in the Senate today by Senator Lenroot, Republican, of Wisconsin, the unification of all the railroads of the country is contemplated, to be run under a single national system privately owned and with participation in the profits by the stockholders and employes. One of its outstanding features is that excess profits, above 6 per cent. on capital stock be divided, 40 per cent. of the amount to go to employes, 30 per cent. toward improvements, through which the public would benefit, and 30 per cent. to the stockholders.

The measure has the support of the Citizens' National Railroad League, whose President, Nathan L. Amster, is engaged in railroad reorganization work. The progressive element in the Senate also is understood to favor the measure, which Mr. Lenroot believes affords protection to the interests of investors, the public, employes, and shippers. The principal features of the bill are:

First—The ownership and operation of all the railroads by one privately owned and privately operated railroad company with full public control.

Second—The management of this corporation, under the supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, by a board of eleven directors, selected by the President (and confirmed by the Senate), but of a limited number of names proposed to the President by various classes of the public—two from the employes, two from commerce, industry, and the shippers as represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce, two from the farmers as represented by recognized farm organizations, three from the security holders, one from the Interstate Commerce Commission, and one from the State Railway Commissions.

Third—The selection by the Directors of a Director General, holding office at their pleasure, to operate the roads under such regional divisions as the Directors may determine. An efficiency and economy board of five men, selected by the President out of engineers proposed to him by the leading engineering and technical societies of the nation, who will study service and suggest and supply improvements and inventions.

Fourth—The valuation of all the railroads by averaging the original cost less depreciation, the reproduction cost less depreciation, and the net earnings over the last ten years, capitalized at 50 per cent. per annum, varied by urgent equities. Procedure is provided for expediting the valuation and for an early judicial determination of the fairness of such valuations. Unearned increment for the future will be excluded.

Fifth—Existing bonds will not be disturbed; new stock with maximum dividends of 6 per cent. per annum will be exchanged for existing stock as valued by the Interstate Commerce Commission, earnings in excess of 6 per cent. will go, 40 per cent. to labor, 30 per cent. to the public for improvements and retiring outstanding stock, thus reducing rates; 30 per cent. to the stockholders.

Sixth—The Government will guarantee dividends of 4 per cent. on all stock issued by the corporation. No stock can be issued without the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It will be a crime to try to use political influence to obtain promotion or employment with the corporation.

Seventh—The Directors must establish various labor boards, with equal representation for labor, to suggest improvements of service, working conditions, and safety, and to study wages, standards of living, and mediate in all labor disagreements. The right to organize and the right of collective bargaining is guaranteed.

After the introduction of the Lenroot bill the Citizens' National Railroads League issued a statement saying:

"We believe that the bill should receive the approval of all interests desirous of seeing the railroad problem settled in a spirit of fairness to all. We believe that labor is entitled to a voice in the management of the railroads and a share in the profits.

"The bill as introduced by Senator Lenroot represents months of study. We believe that as it now stands it is sound and adequate, and represents a careful consideration of all of the economic and legal features of the railroad situation."

COTTON PRICES MOVE OVER SMALL RANGE

LIVERPOOL ALSO DECLINES

The cotton market had an extremely uncertain course yesterday, with early weakness turning into something approximating strength late in the day, and then with a final downward reaction which closed the market substantially where it had closed on Tuesday. The market was not active and the price fluctuations were not great, the extreme range of the day being not much more than 60 points, while May, the last of the popular options, moved only 43 points during the entire session.

Lower than due Liverpool cables and a continuation of the decline there after our market had opened, was mainly responsible for the initial falling off here. A particularly good weather map also gave the bears some ammunition; which they did not make much of, however, and the Government's weekly crop report was about as expected. This, and some profit-taking and evening up in anticipation of the triple holiday over the week-end, sent prices down 10 to 15 points on the call and down 35 to 47 points before noon.

After the turn into the afternoon the market rallied on some material improvement in the foreign exchange market and a good volume of export clearances. The exports for the day totaled 27,736 bales, making the total for the week to date, with two days still to be reported on, 87,643 bales, against 86,969 bales moved outward in all of last week.

With regard to exports, there have been particularly heavy arrivals of American cotton at Liverpool this past week. On Monday they were 63,000 bales; on Tuesday 27,000 were reported as received, and yesterday the receipts were 22,000 bales, baking a total of 112,000 bales. The sales, meanwhile, have amounted to little, something less than 10,000 bales, and the price for spots, which moved from 1903.d. on last Friday to 19.40d. on Monday and to 19.44d. on Tuesday, only reacted to 19.31d. yesterday.

The ring yesterday concerned itself a good deal with the forthcoming Government condition report, which will be out next Tuesday at 11 o'clock, our time. Private reports issued to date have been in the enighborhood of 62.5 per cent. as against the Government's figure last month of 67.1 per cent. Yesterday's ring seemed to average guess around the 62.5 per cent., which the private reports make the crop. This is very low and if realized next week will reflect a serious falling off during the month. Ordinarily, this would be pretty certain to put prices up, but there are traders and trade authorities who do not expect to see the high prices of July again return.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The strike menace hanging over the railway and steel industries gave rise to a pessimistic market tone yesterday, stocks being submitted to pressure during most of the session, with losses from 2 to 5 points being netted in the active issues. United States Steel common fell back to 109¾, while Crucible registered a loss of 2¼ and Bethlehem Steel B of 2⅞. Baldwin Locomotive, after a display of strength, on which that issue was moved up to 109, fell back to 105. American Car and Foundry made a new high record for this movement at 132. Sustained weakness was apparent in the rail shares, Texas & Pacific moving down 3¼ points, Southern Pacific 2⅜, Reading to 78, Missouri Pacific to 27, and New York Central to 71½.

BARS INCREASE IN RENT.

Mayor's Committee Makes German Landlady Return Added Charge.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter S. Kennedy, representing the Mayor's Rent Committee, received a complaint yesterday morning from Francis O'Brien, of 2,884 Valentine Avenue, the Bronx, that his landlady had raised his rent $4 for the months of July and August. O'Brien's son is a sailor in the United States service, and the landlady is an unnaturalized German. Mr. Kennedy told the landlady that she had violated the Soldiers and Sailors' Relief act, and that she must return $8 to her tenant, which she said she would do. He told O'Brien that he could stay in the house as long as he wished to do so, and disregard the landlady's notice to him to vacate.

L. D. Langley, of 2,590 Atlantic Avenue, in a letter to Mayor Hylan said: "I have lately returned from England where I was for three months, and found that there was a considerable amount of profiteering there. There is however one thing, I think about the most important thing of all, on which the Government has stopped all profiteering, and that is on rents. Rents cannot be raised on the tenants, nor can they be evicted so long as they behave themselves and pay the rents. I certainly wish there was some such law in this city, as landlords will not grant leases, and rents are going up."

Mercier to Sail Sept. 15.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 27.—Cardinal Mercier will leave for the United States on Sept. 15, according to most recent information. It is said that he probably will meet King Albert and Queen Elizabeth in America.

Where Buyers of Ready-to-Wear Get the Best for the Least

"The best for the least"—a paradox to those unfamiliar with the operating plan of our Ready-to-Wear department. But it is a fact that nowhere else in this or any other market can you find a more comprehensive showing of ladies' and misses' out-apparel. And nowhere else can you duplicate our low prices.

We can do a lot of talking, and you can do a lot of thinking, but neither will benefit unless you come in and examine the lines. Briefly, here's what you'll find.

Dresses, Coats, Suits, Skirts and Leather Coats

Many styles that you haven't seen before, and you won't see again—in any other place. Wonderful assortmepts of beautiful evening gowns, afternoon frocks, street suits, and stunning coats of geniune leather in many pleasing shades.

You owe it to yourself as a hunter for "new creations" to visit this display without further delay. You'll save time, you'll save money—and you'll know quickly the style tendencies for the coming season.

Post Office Will Accept Articles for Hungarian War Prisoners.

Postmaster Patten gave out yesterday this announcement:

"Parcels containing articles of merchandise acceptable in the domestic mail service, other than perishable foodstuffs, will be received up to a weight limit of fifteen pounds for trasmission to Hungarian prisoners in Siberia at the postage rate of 12 cents a pound or fraction of a pound, under the conditions hereafter indicated.

"Parcels must be fully prepaid, be strongly packed to withstand the long journey, be addressed to the person for whom intended, at the particular prison camp in Siberia, and bear, in addition the words, 'care of Danish Vice Consul, Vladivostok, Siberia, via San Francisco.' No further transmission beyond Vladivostok to be provided for by this department.

"Parcels cannot be registered, insured, nor sent C. O. D., and need not have customs declarations affixed. All acceptable merchandise will be received under the provisions of special export license No. RAC. 52, and the wrappers of parcels will be marked accordingly."

REAL ESTATE FIELD

As a site for a nine-story apartment house, Slawson & Hobbs resold to a newly formed building syndicate 240 and 242 West Seventy-fifth Street. The property consists of two three-story dwellings on a plot 40 by 102.3. The new structure will contain one, two, and three room suites, for which there is a great demand in this section. This is the third building operation planned for this block. The old dwellings at 245 and 247 West Seventy-fifth Street have been demolished and a new apartment house will be erected on the site.

The southwest corner of Seventy-fifth Street and Broadway was recently leased by Mrs. Barzaghi for twenty-one years. This corner includes all of the houses on the street as far west as No. 234, which is 40 feet from the property just sold. BUSINESS MATTERS make it necessary for me to dispose of my country-suburban place. I am a writer and artist, and just got settled in an unusually attractive home, with beautiful plot 100x160 ft., when conditions arose which compel me to sell. The house is only a month old and is decorated inside and out in excellent taste. The purchaser could move in on 24 hours' notice and avoid the many little annoyances and expenses always incident to occupying a new house. The 1st floor consists of a wide veranda facing south, a living room 30 ft. long, with big inglenook fireplace, a fine dining room, butler's pantry and kitchen; 4 big bedrooms and bath comprise the 2d floor, and the 3d is occupied entirely by an immense studio room, adapted also as a billiard room, play room or working den. The location is ideal, convenient to express station, with fine commuting service to New York City. The neighborhood is exclusively residential and occupied by an unusually fine class of people. Elevation over 800 ft. All city conveniences for comfortable living prevail. I will sell for $8,000, complete; $5,000 can remain on first mortgage, and easy terms can be arranged for the balance of $3,000. Complete details can be obtained from R. L., P. O. Box 688, City Hall Station, New York City.

Education Notes.

The Board of Education yesterday continued its conferences on the school budget for 1920. Robert McIntyre, from the Controller's office, was present. Morris E. Siegel told of the needs of evening schools. These included an increase for attendance officers to carry out the provisions of the new compulsory education laws. Eugene C. Gibney explained the needs of community and recreation centres. The board is supposed to have the budget ready for submission to the Board of Estimate by Sept. 1. President Prall said that this would not be possible this year, and the presence of the Controller's representative at the conference would be an excuse to be offered for the submission of the budget estimate at a later date. President Prall, Vice President Wilsey, and the Acting City Superintendent will continue to hold daily conferences until the budget is completely examined. It is said that the final estimate will be about $52,000,000.

The Bard of Retirement has under consideration the case of a teacher who was retired for disability on a pension of one-half of her salary. She taught later three years in private schools outside of New York. She has returned to this city, and now asks for retirement, with the additional years of service to her credit. Thomas W. Churchill will investigate and report on the matter.

The salary of Magnus Gross, recently appointed secretary to the Board of Retirement in place of Frederick Z. Lewis, a teacher who filled the office without extra pay, has been fixed at $4,000 a year.

The sum of $2,619,160 is needed for teachers' pensions for 1920. The Board of Retirement has asked for $496,335 more than it received for 1919.

START INQUIRY INTO DICTAPHONE PUZZLE

"LISTENED IN" ON SISTERS

Young Women Thought Private Detectives Were Electricians and Gave Them Run of Their Flat.

Cross-examination of four witnesses in the case of Anthony Senes, a private detective who had installed two dictaphones in the apartment of Nathan Newman at 148 East Twenty-seventh Street, took place yesterday at the hearing before Magistrate Ten Eyck in the Yorkville Court. Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora, who is prosecuting the case against Senes and his accomplices, started the examination, Alphonse G. Koelble being the counsel for the defendants. The names of the two men who witnesses had testified were seen "listening in" on conversations in the Newman home on various occasions were, besides Senes, Harry Van Pelt, a member of Senes's bureau at 135 Broadway, and Jack Jacobson, a former janitor of the Newman house. After two hours of examination Counselor Koelble asked the Judge to postpone the trial to some future date, as he wanted to submit a brief. Magistrate Ten Eyck said that he would not grant him any time after today, and the case therefore will be resumed today at 2 o'clock.

The first witness to be called was Mr. Newman, who said that he lived with his wife, son, and three daughters on the second floor of a two-family house at 148 East Twenty-seventh Street. On the night of Thursday, Aug. 21, he said he went into the cellar of his house after being told by the janitor that wires leading from his apartment to the basement were those of a dictaphone. Upon entering the cellar, he said, he saw three men sitting about a table, two of them holding receivers to their ears.

Assaulted by Detective.

"What are you doing here?" he said he asked the men. Thereupon, he testified, Jacobson rushed over to him and hit him in the eye with his fist. He yelled for assistance, but before any one had come, he said, Senes grabbed him by the thumb, bending his arm behind him. With his other hand Senes kept his mouth closed, the plaintiff asserted, threatening him with a revolver if he dared make another outcry.

"After Senes had grabbed and gagged me," the witness continued, "he told Van Pelt to run and strip the wires, which he did. Just after he had done this my wife and daughters came down to the cellar, but Senes told them that he would fire at them if they made any noise. He showed a detective's badge, at the same time brandishing a revolver."

His first shouts, however, he said, brought many persons to the basement, and Senes was placed under arrest. On Monday he was held by Magistrate Ten Eyck on a charge of violating the Penal Code which makes eavesdropping a misdemeanor.

Further questioning by Mr. Pecora brought out the fact that when Mr. Newman had been told by the janitor during the day that a dictaphone was installed in his apartment, he searched his premises, finding one on top of the picture moulding in the living room, and another behind a screen on the wall of his daughters' bedroom.

Among the articles which Mr. Newman testified he had seen in the cellar on Thursday night, and which were shown the Court yesterday, were several batteries, a black leather case containing a buzzer system made by the Globe Earphone Company of Boston, three receivers, two transmitters, wires, tools, and other articles which electricians carry, such as sockets, plugs, tape, tacks, &c.

After Gamblers, Janitor Was Told.

The methods by which Senes placed the dictaphones in the two rooms, and his alleged reasons for doing so, were brought out by the answers of Nathan Barbour, the janitor of 148-150-152 East Twenty-seventh Street, who testified that the detective had told him that he was trying to shadow some gamblers, and, believing them to be friends of the Newman girls, wanted to seek information from that source.

"The first time that I had seen Mr. Senes," Barbour testified, "was in the apartment of Mrs. Fannie Levy, the owner of the houses, around July 21 of this year. In the room were Aaron J. Levy, her son; Senes, who was introduced to me as a detective, and another man who was also introduced to me as a detective. No names were mentioned, but since then I heard Senes called 'Toney' and the unknown man 'Joe.'

"After I was introduced to the men one of them said to me, 'We are after a gambling clique. Those girls in the Newman apartment travel with some of them, and we want to get information from the girls which we could use as evidence in their arrest.'

"They then asked me to leave the apartment, but I was called back in five or ten minutes. Senes then asked me if there was any way by which he could gain entrance into the Newman rooms and I suggested that he and his fellow-detective pose as electricians, as there had been trouble with the electric lights a few days bfore. The next day he and 'Joe' went into the Newman apartment and remained in there for an hour. I was in the basement while they were fixing the wires, but before leaving the house Senes came down to tell me that everything was all right and that he expected to 'make a good job of it.'"

"One day while I was passing through the basement Senes asked me if I'd like to listen in," Barbour continued. "I thought it would be quite a novelty, never having had one of those things around my head, so I put the receiver to my ears, but there was so much buzzing that I could hardly make out what was being said, although I heard the girls' voices. At first I was a bit impressed with what was going on, but when I couldn't make out anything I thought it was a lot of bunk.

Asked to Get Automobile Numbers.

"At another time Senes told me to get the license number of every automobile that stopped in front of the house. I did get a few numbers, but the only one that I can remember now is 211,486. I told Senes the numbers of the machines I had seen, but he told me that none of them was the one he was watching for. The detective told me to keep quiet and not mention either the dictaphone or the automobiles to anyone. He even promised to give me some money as soon as the dictaphone was in working order, but I never received any from him.

"At frequent times I heard the men talking about a divorce, and one day while 'Joe' and Senes were having a conversation the name of Mrs. Hutchins or Hutchinson was mentioned, but that is all I know about that matter."

Explaining what happened on Thursday night, Barbour said: "Senes and Van Pelt entered the basement at 8:30, followed a few minutes later by Jacobson. They were at their table just a little while when Mr. Newman was heard coming down the cellar. I ran up to the ground floor when Sam Newman responded to the cries of his father. He asked me to go down with him, but I answered, 'Like h—l.'"

In the testimony of Miss Frances Newman, she corroborated the assertions of the janitor in so far as they dealt with the fact that the men represented themselves as electricians and that she opened the door for them.

The last witness to be examined was James Dafter, a reporter for The Evening World. He testified that he had seen Senes a few times since his arrest to get a story from him. During one of these interviews, he said, Senes had told him that he had installed dictaphones in eight other homes in connection with the same case.

In asking for an adjournment in order to file a brief, Mr. Koelble stated that if the Magistrate should decide the case against his clients he would feel constrained to seek a writ of habeas corpus.

"Why not facilitate matters?" asked the Magistrate. "I am prepared to hold the defendants for trial on the evidence that has been submitted in the case. Then you could apply for a writ at once."

Mr. Koelble said he would rather submit a brief and the Magistrate granted his request for an adjournment.

Osborn of this city, American Relief representative, who returned from Europe Tuesday on the George Washington. The organization intends to increase the number to 500,000 during the next few months, he said.

The Czechoslovak Government has added 1,000,000 kronen to the 5,000,000 it has already contributed for child-feeding work, bringing the total to about $300,000 at the present rate of exchange. The Czechs in the United States have raised $100,000.

"The need for continued and increased child-relief work is crying," said Mr. Osborn, "as the children have suffered severely from hunger during the last four years."

The importance of the work is shown by the following telegram sent from Paris by Herbert Hoover, Chairman of the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund, to the Czechoslovak League of America:

"The children's food program for Czechoslovakia will remain an urgent need for at least another year. I urge you to concentrate on this movement. The new Government is assisting the organization of social service workers for the proper distribution of funds for children's relief coming from America. This has enormous importance for the future of the new republic, and I urge you to give it your special support."

SING LEE, SOCIALIST, IN PECK OF TROUBLE

BOYS FIND FIRECRACKERS

Sing Lee, 40 years old, laundryman for the neighborhood near 105 Fulton Avenue, Astoria, for the last three years, became a Socialist several months ago and has had trouble ever since. This culminated, last night, when he was locked up, and he will be arraigned in the Long Island City Police Court today on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Last evening Sing Lee's property was placed out on the sidewalk in a dispossess proceeding. Some small boys, exploring among his goods, found a big package of firecrackers. The lighted the fuse on one pack and there was a regular Fourth of July in the vicinity for a short time.

Horses attached to the delivery wagons of a neighboring grocer and a furniture dealer ran away and smashed the wagons. A rumor spread that Sing Lee was storing dynamite to carry out Socialist propaganda, and the police made an investigation.

They found no more explosives, because the boys had found them first, but they did find more than a dozen irate men who were stirring around among the bundles on the sidewalk, trying to make out the Chinese characters on the packages so that they could identify their shirts, collars and other laundry. The police told these men they would have to apply to the court to get their property, or wait until Sing Lee was out of jail.

After he became imbued with Socialism, Sing Lee had arguments with his neighbors and with his landlady, Mrs. Lizzie Campbell. Two weeks ago, he became so belligerent that he was taken into the Long Island City Police Court on a charge of disorderly conduct. At his hearing, he became so violent that Magistrate Doyle directed him to be sent to the Kings County Hospital for observation. After several days he was discharged as being sane.

Sing Lee returned to his laundry, but told his landlady that Socialists paid no rent, Mrs. Campbell had other ideas and she obtained an order of dispossess, which was executed yesterday. Sing Lee objected so strenuously to having his goods placed on the sidewalk that he was arrested. Then the small boys arrived and things began to happen.

PRINCE'S GUEST GETS DELAY

Cord Meyer's Hearing for Speeding Postponed as He Flies to Canada.

An engagement to meet the Prince of Wales was of such importance in the estimation of Magistrate Thomas F. Doyle in the Long Island City Court yesterday that he was willing to grant Cord Meyer of Great Neck an adjournment of an engagement in the court so that he could keep the former one. Mr. Meyer was driving his automobile in Woodside on Monday evening when he was stopped by Patrolman Joseph J. Ray and summoned to court on the charge of turning his automobile to the right instead of to the left in passing another automobile. He was to have appeared in court yesterday.

Just before the case was called by Magistrate Doyle a message was received from a representative of Mr. Meyer asking that his case be adjourned because he was then on his way to Canada in an airplane with Major William Thaw to keep an engagement to meet the Prince.

"This is a very extraordinary excuse," commented Magistrate Doyle. "But Mr. Meyer has shown a proper respect to the court in advising of his departure and under the circumstances I am willing to grant the adjournment."

Mr. Meyer will have until Sept. 3 to appear.

Flagging the Runaway

AN engineer loses control of his engine. The great giant beneath him leaps into space. Mile after mile is safely covered, switch after switch is safely crossed, until finally—!

Anybody could finish the story. But the point we want to bring home is that many business organizations are heading toward danger without even realizing it.

An auditing organization, well versed in its duties and functions, can help the executive engineering the destinies of a business to keep his hand safely on the throttle, and the business-vehicle safely on the tracks.

Diamonds Raised Their Own Mileage Adjustment To

Fabrics - 6,000 Miles
Cords - 8,000 Miles

Diamond Tires kept on giving such masterly service—kept it up with such unwavering consistency—that they automatically lifted themselves out of the old adjustment class.

Think of it—formerly on Fabrics the adjustment was 3,500 miles—now 6,000 miles; on Cords, 5,000 miles—now 8,000 miles.

If a good tire which was the favorite of hundreds of thousands of car owners, proved itself so much better that we can safely—very safely—raise the adjustment bases more than 40%, it is a sure-mileage tire for you to use.

The new adjustment bases also apply on all Diamonds now in use or in the hands of dealers.
